have been greatly delighted when they found he was going to reside in the midst of them. They would have nothing to do, however, with advances, lest they should, in consequence, be compelled hereafter to cultivate indigo. So great, indeed, is their antipathy to that cultivation, that they would not rest satisfied until Mr. Morell consented to pull up a few plants that had come up in his garden, owing to a wrong packet of seeds having been sent to him from Calcutta.

But why, it may be asked, are the ryots so averse to a crop which they, and their fathers in the old time before them, have gone on growing year after year in the same manner as any other kind of agricultural produce? The reply is simple enough. It is a crop that, in Lower Bengal at least, no longer remunerates the grower. Its cultivation is not only liable to greater risks than in the case of cereals, but under the most favourable circumstances the turn-out leaves nothing for the labour of man and beast. While the price of every other kind of produce has nearly doubled within the last three years, that of indigo has undergone no alteration. This fact by itself would be a sufficient explanation of the dislike entertained by the ryots for this particular crop. But this natural objection derives additional force from several other incidental causes. There is an old saying, that there are two classes of bad paymasters—those who never pay at all, and those who pay beforehand. The indigo planters belong to the last category. They are in the habit of making advances to the ryots at the rate of two or three rupees per beegah, in return for which they expect a certain quantity of plant to be delivered at their factories at a certain fixed price. The ryot has, therefore, so much “dead horse” to work off before he can hope to gather for himself any fruit from his industry. We all know how depressing it is to toil under such conditions. No wonder, then, that planters complain of “the carelessness of the ryot, after taking advances, in regard to his indigo crop, of his inattention to it, and of his indifference to whether it is eaten down by cattle, or goes into the planter’s vat, notwithstanding the daily urging of the planter’s servants.” This “daily urging,” by the way, may very likely be one of the causes of the ryot’s indifference: it is certainly rather calculated to engender sullenness than alacrity. But the advance for which the unhappy peasant bartereth beforehand the gifts of a bounteous Providence is not even made in money, with the exception of a comparatively small proportion. So much is deducted for seed, so much for stamps—which, after all, are not affixed to the contract papers—and so much for carting. It is in all essential points the system pursued by money-scriveners who profess to be somewhat more conscientious than their usurious brethren. Not for the world would they charge you more than 5 per cent. interest or discount, as the case may be; but you must take out so much in pictures scarce good enough for tavern signs, so much in wine that has had more to do with Honduras than with Portugal, so much in the promissory note of “a safe man” whose available property consists of a deal table and two chairs. Then, when the indigo is delivered and a settlement made, the balance, if any, instead of being handed over to the cultivator, is carried to the credit of his account with the firm. For, be it remarked, for some time past, very few fresh accounts have been opened. In the vast majority of cases, the ryots who accept advances have no choice in the matter. They are bound, hand and foot, by their own and their father’s debts, to the concern. These debts, as Mr. Grant observes, are admitted to be bad ones. When a factory is sold they count only as so much “good will,” but not as realisable assets. They are valued only so far as that they enable the incomer to apply the screw to the surrounding peasantry, and thereby secure a sufficient supply of the raw material.

It is only in Lower Bengal, it must be borne in mind, that this anomalous severance of interests exists between the grower and the manufacturer of indigo. The best and purest indigo, no doubt, comes from Nuddea and Jessore, and the districts immediately adjacent, and likewise the greatest quantity of that article as from any one locality. The annual produce of the indigo lands in Lower Bengal is stated at 40,763 maunds, but Madras yields 34,000 maunds, Behar upwards of 32,000, and the North-West Provinces not far from 22,000; but from none of these quarters is any complaint made on the part of either planters or ryots. The former have no difficulty in obtaining as much plant as they require, and the latter have no objection to grow a crop that pays them as well as any other. But the rich light grounds of Lower Bengal are, in fact, too good for indigo. Owing, besides, to the great and rapidly increasing demand for corn and rice, whether for consumption in Calcutta, or for exportation, the cultivation of cereals is attended by a scale of remuneration that no ryot in his senses could be expected to forego for the sake of cultivating a plant that makes no return for his risk and labour, and yields barely enough to cover the rent of the land upon which it is sown. It may be that the manufacturers of the dye cannot afford to give more than they now do for the raw material, but the only inference thence to be deduced is that they must abandon the manufacture of indigo in these districts. Some of them will, in consequence, very likely be ruined, and it is, of course, to be regretted that such should be the case. But time and chance happen to all men. Every industrial occupation is liable to these changes, as witness the present condition of the ribbon manufacture at Coventry. It is useless to struggle against the progress of mankind. The stream flows on and ever will flow on—not in a straight course, perhaps, but taking now a bite out of this bank, now out of that. Still it presses hopefully onward to the great and mysterious ocean that lies before us, and woe be to him who would seek to dam up, or divert, its channel. We are sorry for the planters, and can make every allowance for their abuse of Mr. Grant, whom they accuse of “trenchantly wading through standing facts.” But the metaphor does not hold good, for the corn is already prostrate, and it is only through the briars and thistles that the Lieutenant-Governor is striving to force his way, sickle in hand. We repeat that we can sympathise with our disappointed fellow-countrymen, but it is surely better that a hundred English adventurers should lose their money than that a million of natives should be goaded on to acts of desperation and the worst form of agrarian outrages.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 21.

THE INDIAN NAVY.

Sir G. DOWYER asked the Secretary of State for India whether the Indian navy was to be abolished as a war service, and converted into a mere transport agency; and in that event whether the officers would have the option of retiring on a liberal pension, according to their length of service. In case the service were to be kept on a war footing, he wished to know how it would stand with regard to the Royal Navy, and whether its services would be confined to the Indian seas. Lastly, he would ask whether it was the intention of Government to build any more vessels expressly for the Indian navy, and to make special appointments to that service, or whether the intention was to let it die out?

Sir C. WOOD was understood to say that the duties of the Indian navy in connection with the slave trade on the eastern coast would in future be discharged by ships belonging to the Royal navy. In this way a considerable reduction in the cost of the Indian navy would be effected. No ships have been built, and no appointments in connection with that service made since his accession to office. Its future duties would consist in making surveys, moving troops, and probably in performing some services in the Persian gulf.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 22.

INVESTMENTS IN INDIA STOCK.

Colonel SYKES rose to ask the Secretary of State for India whether the notice issued recently by the Court of Chancery, authorising the investment of trust funds in Bank Stock and East India Stock, was confined to the old East India Stock of the Company, to be paid off at 300 in 1874, or whether it extended to all the stocks and loans contracted by the authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council?

Sir C. WOOD had applied for information to the proper authorities, and he was informed that the notice was confined to the old East India Stock.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Lord STANLEY asked the right hon. baronet, the Secretary of State for India, whether first appointments to Indian regiments would be made by open competition, or by competition among nominated candidates, or by simple nomination; and, in the latter case, with what department the right of recommending for nomination was to rest?

Sir C. WOOD said that in order to prevent misapprehension he must first observe that there would not hereafter be any Indian regiments. All regiments would in the end be for general service, and take their tour of duty in any part of the world. In the regiments, however, which were to be formed for the Indian local service, the system of purchase which prevailed in the English army was not to be allowed. The whole question of the mode of admission to the British army was now under the consideration of the Government, and he was at present not able to answer the question of his noble friend; but in any arrangement care would be taken to secure to the sons of officers who had served in India, the appointments reserved to them under the recent Acts of Parliament.

INDIGO PLANTERS IN BENGAL.

In reply to inquiries made by Mr. W. EWART, Sir C. WOOD said the police in Bengal was being reorganised on a cheap and efficient system; that the forms of civil procedure had been adapted to the facilitating of trials, and that the law of contracts and the registration of contracts were under the consideration of the Indian Government.

CASE OF DR. THOMPSON.

Colonel SYKES, pursuant to notice, wished to put a question to the Under-Secretary of State for War, in reference to the grounds on which Dr. Thompson had been refused permission by Dr. Gibson to appear before the Board of Examiners for Medical Appointments. The gallant colonel first called attention to an Act of Parliament providing that no British subject, whose character and qualifications did not act as a bar, should be prevented from aspiring to office under the Crown, on the ground merely of birth, colour, or religion. Dr. Thompson was legitimately born in India, his father being an European pensioner, and his mother, although her blood was tinged, was not even half-caste, but three-quarters white. He studied in the Medical College at Madras, and made such progress there that it was deemed advisable he should come to England to complete his professional education. He went first to St. Andrew's University, where he obtained the degree of M.D., and afterwards read for and obtained a diploma in surgery. He presented himself with the object of competing at the examination held on Monday last, having complied with the requirements of the examiners; but Dr. Gibson, the Inspector-General, at a private interview, told him that he could not be permitted to do so, the medical service being no longer local but general. Dr. Thompson expressed his willingness to enter for general service, and produced certificates as to his physical capacity and professional acquirements; but all to no purpose. If the House were unable to grant him any relief, the hopes of this young man would be blighted, his expenses would have been incurred to no purpose, and his professional knowledge rendered of no avail. It should also be remembered that this rule of exclusion, if upheld, would apply to the sons of officers, whether in the Royal or local army, who might happen to be born in India.

Mr. T. G. BARRING said the question put by the gallant colonel was one of some little difficulty. The Act of Parliament to which he had referred was not applicable to the admission of officers into the Imperial army, but only to the admission of natives of India into the service of the East India Company. Dr. Thompson, with one or two other gentlemen, had arrived in this country for the purpose of competing for appointments in the Indian medical service. In consequence, however, of the Act of last session, the Indian local army ceased to exist, and as no more appointments would be made exclusively for the Indian military service, these gentlemen became desirous of competing for appointments in the general medical service. It was, however, a question whether Indians of native parentage were fit to be admitted into the general military and medical service; not, he need hardly say, from any doubt as to their ability, or professional education, but because officers of the general medical service were called on to serve in different parts of the globe, and the constitution of Indians of native parentage would probably unfit them to render efficient service in cold climates. After a correspondence between the Secretary of State for War and the Secretary of State for India, it was determined that it would not be proper to employ them in general service, because their health would probably fail, and they would become chargeable to the British public at an early age, besides being unable to fulfil their duties efficiently. As, however, he understood that neither Dr. Thompson nor the other gentlemen could be considered Indians of native parentage, the Secretary of State for War would be prepared to reconsider the case in connection with the Secretary of State for India, and to deal with it in the manner which seemed best to them, without at the same time prejudicing the interests of the general medical service.

DIRECT CADETS.—The following gentlemen passed their examination on the 19th inst.:—Messrs. S. Babington, H. B. Hill, R. A. Prideaux, and S. A. Swinley.

DINNER TO COLONEL SIR ARTHUR COTTON.—On Wednesday evening, February 20th, a number of gentlemen connected officially or commercially with our Indian Empire entertained Colonel Sir Arthur Cotton at a banquet, as a public recognition of the great services which have been rendered by that officer by his extension of the means of irrigation and canal navigation towards the financial and social progress of that vast dependency. The dinner was given at Willis's Rooms, nearly 200 gentlemen being present. The Earl of Shaftesbury presided, and among others there were also at the table Lord Lyveden, Lord Harris, Sir James Elphinstone, Mr. Justice Haliburton, M.P., Major-General Hay, &c. The customary toasts of "The Royal Family," "The Army and Navy," "The Houses of Lords and Commons"—to the last two of which Lord Harris and Mr. Haliburton briefly replied—having been drunk, the noble Chairman gave the toast of the evening—"The Health of Sir Arthur Cotton."

In reply to his health, which was drunk with the utmost enthusiasm, Sir Arthur Cotton said that, except during the campaigns in Burmah, he had been employed during forty years in the Irrigating Department in India. In 1828 he was sent to Tanjore, a district in which irrigation was most sadly needed. At that time the revenue of Tanjore was only £300,000. At the present time, since a proper means of supplying the crops with water had been adopted, and a canal navigation opened up, the revenue was £800,000. The average revenue of all the 130 districts of India was £250,000. Tanjore was the smallest district, and its revenue was £600,000, which was six times the revenue of Kartah, though the latter, in a productive point of view, possessed infinitely greater advantages. The only reason for this increase in Tanjore was, that the water had been turned to good account, and there was no part of India in which the value of land was now to be compared to Tanjore, and all the population there was incomparably better off than elsewhere. It might be said that this system was not capable of application to all parts of the country; but he thought there was none where the condition of the people was not capable of immense improvement by attention being bestowed on the means of irrigation and navigation. In 1844 he went to Rajahmundry to see what could be done for the improvement of the Delta there, and by a weir which had been erected in the river, and which commanded, as it were, 1,100,000 acres, all but 400,000 were already irrigated. What had been the result? The revenue, which previously had been £198,000, was now upwards of £300,000, and the imports and exports of the district, which had previously been almost nominal, had risen the exports to £390,000, and the imports to £70,000. In the first year after opening the canal in this district 700 boats passed; now it was used annually by 13,000 boats of nearly double the tonnage of the previous ones. It had been said that the Ganges Canal did not equal the expectations entertained of its profitable results, but that was entirely due to the fact that its branches for purposes of irrigating the surrounding country had never been completed. Otherwise it ought and would yield 15 or 20 per cent. to the Government. Unfortunately, this want of completeness was the case with nearly all the hydraulic works of the Government in the country, the Godavery, the Kinlar works, and many others which were stopped from want of funds. On the Upper Godavery he believed that the best cotton fields out of America were to be found; but to make the produce of cotton productive in India the Government would have to bestow care upon the means of emigration and canal communication. The work, however, should be taken up by the Government at once, and on a system, and carried out thoroughly wherever it was needed. Other toasts, such as "Peace and Prosperity to India," followed the toast of the evening, the last being, as usual, "The Health of the noble Chairman."

SCOTTISH INDIA RELIEF FUND.—The annual meeting of the subscribers to this fund was held at Edinburgh on Monday, the Lord Provost presiding. The report stated that, besides granting aid by gift or loan to persons of a higher class who had suffered through the events of the Indian mutiny, the committee were now giving weekly aid to 86 widows and 113 orphans in Scotland of soldiers who had fallen in India. Aid was likewise granted in some cases to parents of deceased soldiers who had formerly contributed to their support. There were also 140 invalided soldiers receiving relief from the fund. During the year the fund had been augmented from £9,373 to £11,435 by further sums remitted from local committees, and there had been expended in gifts to sufferers £185, loans £230, pensions to widows, orphans, &c., £2,042, payments to invalided soldiers, £561, and expenses, £102, making the outlay for the year £3,112, and leaving in hand, as at the 11th of November last, £8,323. The most satisfactory communication was maintained with the London committee. The report was unanimously approved.

BOOKS.

Handbook Dictionary for the Militia and Volunteer Services. By Lieut. Col. Perry Scott. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

As Commandant of the Isle of Wight Artillery Militia Col. Scott may be supposed to have a tolerably good idea as to the sort of knowledge most useful to militiamen and volunteers, and this little manual fully proves that he understands how to impart the desired information. In the form of a portable dictionary—so cheap as to be within everybody's power to purchase—he explains the interior economy of a regiment of artillery militia, the regulations affecting officers' messes, and the duties of all ranks in the service. He further gives concise and perspicuous definitions of all military and technical terms used in the science of fortification or in artillery practice. He teaches, too, how the soldier is to comport himself in quarters, how camps are formed and campaigning conducted, how men and horses are to be forwarded to any particular destination by road or rail, by river or sea, and how they are to be billeted and looked after at their journey's end. Indeed, the only difficulty is to find out what has been omitted, and in this invidious labour we confess to have been unsuccessful. Without exaggeration or partiality we have no hesitation in pronouncing this convenient little dictionary as one of the most useful books that the volunteer movement has yet called forth, and it will be found as serviceable to the regular troops as to volunteers, yeomanry, or militiamen.

RETRENCHMENT.—In accordance with the system of retrenchment now in force, the Bengal Accountant's Office, the Military Auditor General's Office, and the Marine Superintendent's Office, are to have their establishments reduced to half their present strength.

VACCINATION IN OUDH.—The Oude Gazette says that a great commotion was caused in the city of Lucknow, in consequence of the authorities having made a proposition to the inhabitants that their children should be vaccinated. The worst construction has been placed upon the motive of the Government in making such a proposal, the belief being that the object was to kidnap the children and Christianise them!

MR. W. E. GORDON, from the Punjab, succeeds Mr. Thomas Peachy, as head uncovenanted assistant in the Accountant-general's office at Madras.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

or PEARL DENTIFRICE, stands unrivalled in its capabilities of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the Teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental Herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface, remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and, from its aromatic influence, impart a delicate fragrance to the breath. It is important to observe, that when used in early life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realises the chief attribute of beauty—a Fine Set of Pearly Teeth.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

MAP of the PUNJAB and SIKH TERRITORY. On one sheet, 6s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 6s.

MAP of AFGHANISTAN, and the ADJACENT COUNTRIES. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

MAP of CHINA, from the most Authentic Sources of Information. One large sheet—Size, 2 ft. 7 in. wide; 2 ft. 2 in. high. 8s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 11s.

MAP of the BURMAN EMPIRE, showing the Annexed District of Pegu. One sheet, 3s. 6d.; or, on cloth, in a case, 5s.

A MAP of the WESTERN PROVINCES of HINDOOSTAN, the PUNJAB, CABOOL, SINDE, BHAHULPORE, &c., including all the States between Candahar and Allahabad. On four sheets—Size, 4 ft. 4 in. wide; 4 ft. 2 in. high. 30s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £2; rollers, and varnished, £2. 10s.

MAP of ARABIA, from all the most recent Authorities, by order of the Court of Directors of the East India Company. Size, 3 ft. 3 in. high; 4 ft. 3 in. wide. On cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

HAND-BOOK to the MAPS of INDIA, giving the Latitude and Longitude of all places of note. By Major H. V. STEPHEN, late of Bengal Army Revenue Survey Department. In 18mo. bound, price 5s.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz.:

3 ft. wide by 6 ft. 4 in. long.....	23 5 0
3 ft. 6 in. " ".....	2 10 0
4 ft. " ".....	2 15 0
4 ft. 6 in. " ".....	3 0 0
5 ft. " ".....	3 5 0
5 ft. 6 in. " ".....	3 10 0

The "Sommier Elastique Portatif," therefore, combines the advantages of elasticity, durability, cleanliness, portability, and cheapness.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz. —Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. ## SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 12th of February brings appalling accounts of the famine in the North-West Provinces. It is probable, indeed, that they may be somewhat highly coloured—as when they speak of four or five hundred human beings perishing day by day—but there can be no doubt of the really terrible nature of this visitation. The distress of the native population in 1838 is declared to have been as nothing in comparison with their present sufferings. Even the beasts of prey are starving, because the herds and flocks have disappeared from the land, or have been sold into arable districts in order to purchase bread. Nor is this fearful state of destitution confined to Upper India alone. Similar reports reach us from the southernmost parts of the Peninsula. In Travancore, it is said, mothers are offering their children for sale to save themselves and their offspring from death by starvation. Sixpence a-head is all they ask—anything, in short, wherewith to stave off the fatal hour for another day. In this trying emergency nothing can be more noble or satisfactory than the conduct of the Government. Every effort is being made to furnish remunerative employment to all who are able or willing to labour, nor are the sick and infirm overlooked either by public or private charity. The contributions of individuals, indeed, are pouring in rapidly, and the local papers mention, with natural gratification, that in the city of Bombay alone nearly £8,000 have already been collected. Equal liberality has been evinced in Calcutta, and in all the principal towns and stations throughout India; but still there is need of further assistance, and that on a larger scale than can be afforded by the limited number of European residents in that country. Again, therefore, do we appeal to the kindly sympathies of Englishmen, in behalf of a race with whom so many common interests unite us. Elsewhere we have urged the application of the surplus Mutiny Relief Fund to the alleviation of the fearful sufferings of our helpless fellow-subjects; and we cannot imagine that any man making profession of Christianity, or even actuated by the ordinary feelings of our common humanity, can still nurture an unforgiving spirit towards those who have already so bitterly expiated their crimes and mad delusion.

It is gratifying, however, to learn that the telegraphic report of the failure of the January rains is in a great degree erroneous. In most districts refreshing showers had fallen, and it was hoped that the spring crops would be saved. Were they to fail, the prospect would, indeed, be alarming.

The latest accounts from Darjeeling contradict the rumour of the flight of the Sikkim Dewan. A force of about 1,000 men, accompanied by the Hon. Ashley Eden, as Political Agent, has again crossed the disputed boundary, but no hostilities are expected, as the Rajah is stated to have made his submission. For reasons probably best known to himself, but apparently with a view to establish another claim on the gratitude of the British Government, Maharajah Jung Bahadoor has advanced to the extreme frontier of the Nepalese territories, and has offered his aid in chastising the turbulent Sikkimites. The Ghoorkas would very likely make short work of their neighbours; but it is scarcely wise to give them too high an idea of their own importance. If our own forces are not equal to a contingency of this kind, the sooner they are disbanded and remodelled the better.

Colonel Brasyer, no mean authority on such matters, persists in affirming that Nana Sahib is still alive and at large in the Nepaul Hills. It is possible that such may be the case, but we confess to much incredulity on that point.

A very extraordinary system of frauds has been discovered in the Bombay Electric Telegraph Department. Not only have messages been regularly falsified, but on one occasion, at least, the wire was cut and the ends attached to a portable telegraphic instrument, which was then worked by two Europeans, named George Pechtall and William Allen, both of whom have been taken into custody. Opium speculations are, of course, at the bottom of these fraudulent transactions, and enormous profits are said to have been made by the falsification of messages.

A numerous and influential meeting was held at Willis's Rooms, on Tuesday last, for the purpose of obtaining funds for a suitable testimonial to General Sir James Outram, G.C.B. It is proposed to erect a statue to the Bayard of India by the side of Sir Henry Havelock's, and also to send a duplicate to Calcutta,—though Bombay might reasonably be thought to have a prior claim to that honour. The surplus is to be laid out in the purchase of a piece of plate, but it is just possible that a purse of a thousand guineas would have been more acceptable.

Expected at Southampton.

Per str. Massilia, March 12.—FROM BOMBAY.—Mr. Harrison, Capt. and Mrs. Cadell and two children, Capt. Twyman, Capt. and Mrs. Sillon and two children, Mrs. Cowper and infant, Maj. and Mrs. Gardner and two children, Mr. G. Evans, Mr. J. Reeves. FROM ALEXANDRIA.—Mr. Wilmer, Mr. Herriott, Mr. Holworthy.

ABYSSINIA.—DEATH OF MR. BELL.—By late advices from Abyssinia received via Massowah, we (Bombay Gazette) learn that King Theodorus took the field against the Tigre rebels during the autumn. On the 24th of October, accompanied by Mr. Bell and the advance-guard of his army, he encountered Dejai Garad, Plowden's assassin, at the head of a much superior force. Without waiting the arrival of the main body of his troops, the king gave battle to the enemy, and a fierce conflict ensued. Bell, anxious to avenge the murderer of his old friend, had a hand-to-hand fight with Garad and killed him. Garad's brother then sought out Bell, and we regret to learn succeeded in taking his life. His triumph, however, was of short duration, for the king, who was in the thick of the battle, singled out Garad's brother and despatched him. By this time the royal army had reached the scene, and the rebels surrendered at discretion. Theodorus ordered one hundred and fifty of Garad's followers to be executed on the spot. Bell will be a great loss to the king, whose cause he has warmly supported from the beginning. Having been domiciled in Abyssinia for the last eighteen years, Bell was intimately acquainted with the language and manners of the people, and enjoyed their confidence in a high degree. He held one of the first posts as adviser to the king, and was in reality, if not nominally, the Commander-in-Chief of the royal army. Mercantile pursuits first led him to Abyssinia, but a love of adventure, and a thirst for military renown, induce him to take service in the native army. He was much attached to his adopted country, and his warlike exploits will long be remembered by the modern Etheopians.

ASSASSINATION OF AN OFFICER AT AURUNGABAD.

—We (Poona Observer) regret very much to state that a rumour, which we believe to be but too well founded, has been in circulation at this station for some days past, of the assassination at Aurungabad, on Friday or Saturday last, of an European officer of the Bombay army. It appears that the officer in question fell by the hand of an Arab or Rohilla with whom he had an altercation, and who stabbed him in the heart with a dagger, his death being almost instantaneous.

THE "HUGH ROSE," I.N.—The new Indian navy gunboat Hugh Rose, which has been commissioned by Lieutenant Wood, will go up to Aden to replace the Lady Canning. The Fanny will be employed between Aden and Perim for the conveyance of building materials and supplies of provisions.

BENGAL.

THE UNIVERSITY HONOURS.

The Matriculation and Degree Examinations of the Calcutta University have ended, and the results should be weighed by all who are interested in educational progress, as well as by the more prejudiced minds of teachers themselves. The following figures refer to the entrance or Little-go Examination:—

Province.	Number of Candidates.	RELIGION.
		Christian.	Musulman.	Hindoo.	Parsce.
Lower Bengal ...	749	41	24	683	1
Behar ...	22	1	1	20	0
North-West ...	23	3	1	19	0
Total ...	809	59	26	722	2

Of these:—

Province.	Passed.		Failed to obtain the minimum mark in:
	1st Division.	2nd Division.	English.	2nd Language.	History and Geography.	Mathematics.
Lower Bengal ...	46	346	216	48	135	185
Behar ...	1	5	8	14	6	4
North-West ...	0	6	9	0	10	7
Punjab ...	0	1	0	0	1	0
Total ...	50	364	234	64	154	199

The weak point of the lower schools is thus English, next in order comes mathematics, and next history and geography. We do not wonder at this. The mathematical standard is so much higher in India than the London University requires, that the time which should be given to English is devoted to mathematics. Our fathers were wiser than we in making "grammar" the root of education.

For the Bachelor of Arts examination there were thirty-nine candidates. Of these thirteen passed, and we give their names in full, that all honour may be given to both them and the degree:—

The examination was on the whole inferior to its predecessors, only one having reached the first-class. When we consider that the Presidency College of Calcutta is maintained at an enormous and disproportionate expense, that it drains into itself the best students from all the other colleges, and that it is virtually a gigantic monopoly which discourages the existence of all rivals, we are disappointed that it has done so little. There is only one candidate for the degree of Master of Arts, an honour very difficult of attainment and never yet reached. He will be examined in the higher mathematics by Archdeacon Pratt, in addition to the other examiners—a sufficient guarantee that the honour will not be lightly conferred.

As if to convince the Senate of their precipitation in creating the barbarous degree of Licentiate of Laws, which two unfortunate "diggorydars" have gained, there were seventeen candidates for the Degree of Bachelor of Laws, of whom fourteen passed. The Law examinations will soon be the most popular, being the avenue to all those legal prizes which the Bill creating a High Court will hold out to the honest and the educated. At the present moment, the ordinary income of the leaders of the native bar in the Courts of the 24-Pergunnahs is Rs. 5,000 a month. In the Sudder it is occasionally twice that sum. If education alone could confer honesty and honour as well as professional skill, what might the native bar not become?—Friend of India.

INDIA AS IT IS.

It is of importance, while judging of the way in which the East India Company and their servants have discharged the duty of ruling the country which was committed to them, and in how far the Queen was justified in depriving them of the government, to have before us authentic statements of the state of the country as it is at present after a hundred years of their administration. The immediate cause of the deposition of the Company from the throne of Hindostan was the mutiny of the whole of the Bengal army. This army had been called into existence by the Company, and upon its faithfulness all the best and the greatest of their servants had declared the continuance of their rule depended. When it failed them, therefore, according to their own showing they could no longer pretend to administer the affairs of the country. They threw themselves upon England, and England supplying troops re-conquered India and assumed the sovereignty which the Company had been driven from by the revolt of its own army. The declaration of the Company was always "we have won India by the sword, and we must keep India by the sword." When the power of the sword was gone, the Company had no longer the shadow of an excuse to require that it should be reinstated.

But there are many who say that, allowing that the Company has no longer a right to rule, still the Company's policy which created this great empire should be adhered to. To this we would reply that that policy contained in itself the germs of ruin. The empire was a gigantic bubble which might burst at any moment, and this those who were best acquainted with it well knew. A new turban or a greased cartridge might be the cause, so fragile was it. If it had not been for Colonel Gillespie the former might have shattered it at Vellore. The latter did destroy it in 1857, and the Great Mogul was again reigning at Delhi, till English troops re-conquered his newly regained crown from him. But the Company's policy contained a yet more fatal element. "The normal state of Indian finance," as we were told by the late Mr. Wilson, "may be said to be deficiency of income and addition to debt." "Of the fifty-nine years which have elapsed in the present century, in no fewer than forty-four of those years have considerable, often large, additions been made to the Indian debt, while in fifteen only have diminutions taken place." The affairs of an individual could not be said to be in a very satisfactory condition if he constantly lived with his doors barricaded and his guns loaded, fearing that he would be attacked by his neighbours, and in terror even of his domestic servants, while he lived beyond his income, and supplied his daily wants by borrowing. The most foolish among men could predict his end with certainty.

India, as we have often said, was governed for the sake of the Company and the Company's servants, and not for the benefit of the people. So much so was this the case, that by their theory the Government was the sole proprietor of the soil, the universal landlord, and that not one native of the country had a title to a single foot of it but what he derived directly from them. The consequence of this was that—with the exception of the Perpetually Settled provinces, where a wiser policy had been introduced against their will by an English nobleman and the English Parliament—there was no native under the Company's Government who felt himself to be anything but a tenant at will, existing in his native land by the permission of a foreign Government. This feeling, and the improvidence and insecurity it engendered, were the cause of the hatred with which the Government was regarded; while the working of the system produced the miserable and poverty-stricken population of Madras, where the theory was carried to its utmost extent, and, as we showed a few days ago, the famines which periodically desolate other parts of India. The rich and the noble throughout the whole of India which has come under the rule of the Company, have been successively destroyed except in Bengal, and there the same policy has introduced Act X. of 1859 to destroy the landlords, while the planters have been more openly attacked.

But, say the advocates of the Company, ours is a paternal rule. All our subjects are like brothers, of whom we are the great Ma-Bap. This plan is suited to the Oriental taste. No one is greater than another unless we choose to make him so. We are the source of all honour. We raise and we depress, as the Sultan does in Turkey, and as is the universal custom in the East. It is not in accordance with Western tastes, we allow, but the people are accustomed to it and like it. It may be so. We recollect that Mr. John Marshman tried to prove that the people liked torture by the police. But let us examine what the Company did in its paternal character. Did it protect the life and property—little as it was—of its children? Why, Mr. Halliday, one of the most devoted of parents of the people, acknowledges that if the whole of the Company's police were imprisoned, the country would be the better for it, and the people would be safer. Did the Company administer justice to its children? We find the Sudder encouraging to the utmost extent perjury and forgery by never punishing them, hanging a man for killing another in self-defence, legalising the sale of young girls for the purposes of prostitution, regarding the murder of a father or a mother at the ghâts of the Ganges as a holy and sacred institution, and lending itself as an instrument to a most unscrupulous governor to effect the wholesale robbery of the rights of fishery of the whole country by setting aside every law and precedent, nay even the written pledge of the Government itself. The Sonthal rebellion was one of many proofs of how the people of the country appreciate and love the Company's paternal rule. Torture by the police in its most horrible forms, torture even to death, is the universal means by which crime is discovered, as the records of the Sudder Court too clearly prove. Four times within the last nine months have they condemned police officers for tortures too horrible to be even named in any land but India, but at every thannah throughout the country is torture still going on. A petty theft in a village is not committed but the villagers and their women, and children even are stretched by the strappado, or hung head downwards in the sun or scourged with stinging nettles, or pepper is introduced into the most tender parts of their bodies or blown into their eyes, or the women are dishonoured before the eyes of their husbands, and the Government folds its hands and shuts its eyes and calls itself paternal. It takes paternal care, too, of such estates as those of the Rajah of Durbungah, takes care even of his will which it will not permit to see the light of day.

As is the father so also are the children. If the father delight in fraud and violence so may we expect the children to do. If the children can expect no justice from the father, we shall expect to find them trying to obtain what they think to be their rights by the most illegal means. We have just had an example of this—not an uncommon one—set before us. We tell the tale as it was told to us. Rajah Modenarian, of Tikaree, died leaving two childless widows, joint heirs to his property. Disputes of course arose between them, but some two years ago they appointed a joint Dewan to manage the property and divide to them the receipts. This man, Hoormut Ali, had held the same office under their deceased husband. Some months after this settlement was made, a Mohurrer of the younger widow, of the name of Band Ali, persuaded her to dismiss the Dewan, and to appoint him to collect her share of the rents. This the authorities who were appealed to refused to allow, as she was only a joint proprietor, and had no separate share until a partition should be made. The war between the female combatants ran high. Mr. Tayler was engaged on the part of the elder, and Baboo Ramapersaud Roy, of the younger Ranee; charges of embezzlement were brought against Hoormut Ali and failed. An action for his ejection under Section XXV. of Act X. of 1859 was brought and dismissed, after full inquiry into his conduct. The younger widow appealed to the Sudder, and engaged almost the whole bar of both that and the Supreme Court, and on the day that the appeal (which was afterwards thrown out) was presented, Hoormut Ali died, poisoned with arsenic administered in his tea. An inquiry is going on. His servants are under arrest, and there is some hope of tracing out the causes which led to the crime, by whomsoever it may have been committed. Now such a deed might have been committed in England, and it would give no ground for a general accusation against the Government of the country. But it is so common here as to show that the perpetrators know that there is very little chance of detection. Various preparations of arsenic are sold in every bazaar, and a sudden death, accompanied by retching and violent pains in the stomach, is easily accounted for by the commonness of cholera at all seasons of the year. Some years ago an attempt was made to poison a certain well-known planter with arsenic. His cook was bribed to put it in his tea. At the time the attempt was made the planter had just been successful in certain suits with a native female zemindar. When these things are done in high places we hear something of them, but we are afraid that poison is too often the means made use of to remove a troublesome person in Bengal.

The state of things prevailing in the country then, the failure of justice, the want of protection of life and property, the common use of torture and murder by poison and otherwise, the frequency of affrays, and the powerlessness of the authorities to prevent, to detect, or to punish crime, all show that the time was fully ripe to put an end to paternal rule, and to relieve the Company from the duties which it had undertaken to discharge. This has been done in name, but the old spirit still rules, and the old men still remain. We trust that the "Sword of Damocles" which is to cut our Gordian knot will make as much haste as possible to fall. We have waited for change long enough, and any change will be better than a continuance of the state of things which now exists.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DARJEELING, Jan. 25.—Affairs up here are verging to a point. Our station, usually so empty and quiet at this time of year, is now full of red, and green, and grey coats, and bristling with bayonets. First and quickly came to our rescue the 73rd Wuffadars in detachments, and as their numbers increased, and we felt more assured, they were marched down to Goke and the Burra Runjeet, to re-occupy the advanced posts which had been temporarily abandoned for want of men. Then, by forced marches, came a detachment of the Bengal military police—Sikhs—under Captain Baker. These were rapidly followed by the left wing of H.M.'s 6th Royals, under Captain Unwin, with detachments of the Royal and Bengal artillery, under Lieut. Roberts, of the former, and Lieutenant Harington, of the latter corps. These were all stationed at the Senehal barracks, some five miles hence. Finally came in the right wing of the 3rd Sikh Regiment from Gorkhapore, under the gallant Major Renny, a fine body of men, some 500 strong, with their towering puggies, and bearded like the pard. Meanwhile staff officers are daily arriving, provisions are being pushed forward to the frontier, and everything betokens an early advance into the enemy's territory—say, in all January. The force to go in consists, I believe, of about 1,000 men—400 Europeans and 600 Sikhs—in two columns, under Colonel Gawler and Major Renny. The enemy may amount to 700 or 800. Colonel Gawler commands also the expedition, with Lieutenant Fryer, of the Rifles, as major of brigade. Captain Impey is commanding engineer, with Lieutenant Pierson as field engineer, Lieutenant Heathcote, Quartermaster General's Department, Major Fitzgerald, Commissariat General's Department, Surgeon W. Keates, field surgeon. Artillery, fifty men under Lieutenant Roberts, R. A., and Lieutenant Harington, B. A. The force will be accompanied by the Hon. Mr. Ashley Eden, as special envoy to Sikkim, who arrived on the 16th. Impey, notwithstanding a detention of two days at Rajmahal, arrived here on the 23rd, and is gone down to-day to the Burra Runjeet, to fix upon the best place for crossing the river there, about one hundred and fifty feet broad. He proposes, I think, to throw a bridge of casks over it, covering the operation, as well as the passage of our men, by a fire from our guns and rockets into the enemy's stockade on the opposite bank. We are then to dash over, ferret them out of their defences, and toil up the opposite steep to Namehi—the present head quarters of the Dewan, and the principal place of the Sikkim Government on the hither or right side of the Teesta. What is next upon the cards I cannot say, but hope that Carthage herself is doomed to destruction, and that Tumlong, the Rajah's residence, is to be knocked about his ears. Whoever wishes to have a just notion of this palace may turn to "Dr. Hooker's Travels." By-the-bye, the Rajah himself, I hear, is gone long ago to Choombi over the Chola Pass into Thibet, to be out of harm's way. The sudden and mysterious appearance of his Excellency Sir Jung Bahadur in the terai just below Pankabarie upon our frontier, at a time when we all thought that he was far away on a visit to his newly acquired territory to the north of Lucknow, has caused no little surprise amongst us up here. Dr. Campbell, as soon as he heard of Sir Jung's approach, as he could not himself at such a moment quit his post, deputed his assistant, Captain Murray, to greet him, who was received with every demonstration of cordiality and friendship by his Excellency in open durbar in a splendid reception tent of six poles. Captain Murray was ushered in by a band playing before him, taken by the hand by his Excellency, and seated upon a chair by his side. The big-wigs here are mighty close upon the object of this visit, and therefore we can only conjecture that it was merely to aid us in thrashing their old enemies the Sikkimites that the Goorkhas came down. Time will show; at present the whole affair is shrouded in mystery. Sir Jung caught eighteen elephants, and bagged no end of tigers. Captain M. had a very narrow escape from one of these brutes, which came bounding towards him out of the jungle. He fired at him and missed; again he pulled, and the cap snapped; the third time, when the tiger was close upon him, he fired and hit him in the neck, the blood spurring from him, and the beast then moved off—to Captain M.'s great satisfaction, for it is not every tiger that will relinquish his anticipated feast at a first hit. As for the supercession of Dr. Campbell in his political functions, everybody here stigmatises it as an act of cruel injustice to an able, upright, zealous public servant of thirty-one years' standing; a man as conspicuous for the conscientious discharge of his many and onerous official duties as he is for his moral worth in all the relations of private life. Let it pass. His name and character as connected with Darjeeling are well known and appreciated at home. Of these this Government, under a wanton exercise of its power, never can rob him, much less can it deprive him of the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens, European and native, whose welfare has been the object of his unwearied solicitude for the last twenty years.—Englishman.

MONUMENT OF THE MASSACRES AT HANSI AND HISSAR.—General Van Cortlandt, deputy commissioner of Hissar, has just reported to the Government of the Punjab the completion of a monument erected to the memory of the Europeans murdered at Hissar and Hansi during the mutiny. The deputy commissioner describes the monument as "a column of red Delhi stone 30 feet in height, surmounted by a white marble cross, designed by Major Hutchinson." A sketch of the monument shows it to be of the pointed or Gothic style, very elegant in appearance, and its cost, which was defrayed by Government, we understand to have been Rs. 695. The letter continues:—"The stone and marble of which the monument is constructed was procured at Delhi, where the work was carried on under the superintendence of the executive engineer; the stone work was completed and sent here at the close of last year. It has been erected on a conspicuous and open spot, near the high road entering Hissar from Delhi, in the vicinity of the church and public buildings of the station. This site was selected as the most eligible, on account of its being the spot where the first acts occurred at Hissar in the tragedy of 1857, and in the immediate vicinity of the place where Mr. Wedderburn fell whilst engaged in the discharge of his public duty." On the four sides of the column are inscribed, "Sacred to the memory of the Europeans murdered at Hissie and Hissar," with their names as follows: "John Wedderburn, Esq., collector and magistrate; Mrs. Alice Wedderburn and infant son; Lieutenant C. W. Barwell, adjutant Hurrianah Light Infantry, and Mrs. Margaret Barwell; Mr. David Thompson, tehsildar, and his sister, Mrs. Hallet; Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, and five children, Mrs. Jeffries, Mrs. Malone and child, Sergeant Fitzpatrick, overseer Canal Department, and child, Sergeant Major Murphy, Hurrianah Light Infantry, Mr. Joseph Williams, superintendent of customs, and his daughter, Miss Williams; Mr. John Paul, Mrs. Jane Paul, and Anny, Letitia, Alice, Agnes, Thomas, and Evelyn, their children, Mrs. Mary Anne Milne, and Emily and James, her children. A smaller monument to the memory of his son, daughter-in-law, and grandchild has been raised near the same spot by Sir John Wedderburn, Bart.—Lahore Chronicle.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN BROOKE, né JOHNSON.—The Hurkuru has received intelligence of the death of Captain Brooke, who for some years past ably conducted the affairs of Sarawak, in the absence of Sir James Brooke. "He was Captain Johnson, of the 88th or Connaught Rangers, and on being adopted by the Rajah took his name of Brooke, and devoted his abilities, which were of a high order, to the strength and growth of the young settlement. He had been married to an amiable and accomplished young lady—niece to the present Lord Elgin—and all things were going on very smoothly with him till her death in 1859, which sad event cast a gloom over the whole settlement. For a change of scene he returned home, leaving the charge of the province in his brother's (Mr. Johnson) hands. He returned to Sarawak about the middle of last year, after having made arrangements for a few European soldiers for Sarawak. We just learn that he is dead. Sir James Brooke was lately in Singapore, and must by this time be in Sarawak. He will greatly feel the loss of an able, energetic, and wise officer."

THE FAMINE.—The Mofussilite of the 29th of January, says:—"The people cannot eat rupees—any more than Midas could eat gold. What we want is grain, and that speedily. Even the wolves—literally, not figuratively—prowl about in large numbers, seeking whatever they may devour; the birds in the jungles are dying in large numbers; forage has failed, and the cattle are in the most miserable condition; they crawl about so listlessly, that it is evident they would seek some path to lead them to death. What are the cares, the anxieties, and the fatigues of our magistrates and collectors in the North-West let our Calcutta friends conceive if they can; but they cannot. Send us grain! We repeat, we do not just now want your money. Consult Joteepershad, who has fed three large armies, and by whose exertions the besieged in Agra were spared from the horrors of actual starvation. Arouse that man. Give him one hour to think—than take his advice, and act upon it. He does not want money, Heaven knows; but if he asks for a few laes give them to him, simply because he is now (for an Asiatic) grown old at fifty years of age, and has all the peculiarities that attach to age, though his faculties are still unimpaired. In the second Sikh campaign, when the army assembled at Ferozepore, there was no grain to be had, and no forage, and what is more, the treasuries in these provinces had been drained to the very dregs. But the ingenuity and the enormous credit and wealth of the Lalla enabled him to provide entertainment for 40,000 men, and a proportionate number of horses. Yes. Let the Government send for Joteepershad—press him into its councils—and by flattery, if need be, persuade him into averting those horrors which at present exist, and even greater horrors which are impending in these provinces. Let him not be pestered with questions from all sorts of promiscuous members of the council, but let Mr. Harrington, in a quiet apartment, talk to him, and obtain a promise, which we would stake our existence he would fulfil to the letter, even if he had to part with his 'gold bricks' and his jewels. We are now speaking of a man who, when informed one morning by the late Mr. Coverly Jackson, that the Jumna's course would in a few years undermine the foundations of the Taj, and that the edifice would fall into the river, replied: 'No. It shall not, I will build a ghat, which will turn the course of the river.' The tolerant Hindoo did it at a cost of £10,000 sterling. The river's course was turned. The Taj still stands, and the ghat in Agra will remain as a monument to the sagacity, the good faith and the liberality of THE LALLA." Writing on the same subject, the Dacca News observes:—"We would call the attention of all men, of every condition, to the terrible famine prevailing in the North-West. The horrors of war have been succeeded by worse sufferings of the poorer population, always, alas! the most to suffer from every general calamity. It is not given to write sentimentally about the pangs of hunger, for according to philosophy there is not another feeling with which it is so difficult to sympathise, or on whose behalf the sympathies of others can so seldom be awakened. But there are harrowing stories related of what hearths and homes are undergoing that may heighten our idea of the misery just striding through the land. Children are daily sold by their parents, the younger and prettier the more readily disposed of. One man writes he saw a rather good looking girl bartered away for a couple of bags of rice. Homesteads have been deserted, whole villages left desolate, as if to avoid a doom that could have reached the wretched communities there only. Along hedges and ditches are the dead and the dying. Human beings have been seen grazing and browsing like cattle. The lank haggard forms that skulk about the thoroughfares, so disfigured and distorted by intense physical agonies, seem more like spectres from the charnel house than living creatures of flesh and blood. If this be one of the judgments on the Indian rebellion full fearfully has it been avenged; and with uplifted hands we ought to thank high Heaven that not to us was left the infliction of such dire chastisement. In the visitation that has overtaken the millions that not long ago might have rejoiced at the termination of our sway, we can find occasion only to forget the past, and to vindicate our civilisation by acts of the liveliest charity and benevolence. We appeal, therefore, to the Christian nature of our readers, to the common humanity of all whom these lines may reach, to come forward with money and assistance to the relief of our starving fellow creatures in the North-West. It is no time for arguing or reasoning on the expediency of affording it. Let no man persuade himself that his means are too limited for the purpose."

THE PAPER CURRENCY.—The Indian Statesman affirms that Mr. Laing appears to lean to the opinions expressed in Mr. Nelson's letter to Mr. Wilson on "a Government paper currency for India." The pamphlet must have attracted, says our contemporary, some attention at home, for immediately on Mr. Laing's arrival, "Mr. Nelson was sent for to explain his views upon currency matters and other commercial matters, as well as upon the views held on those subjects by the general mercantile community of the Presidency. According to rumour, Mr. Laing is opposed to a small bank note currency, and equally opposed to Government interference in the issue of bank notes of any amount. He considers that the issue of bank notes is the function of a banker and not of a Government; that, presuming a profit is to be made, profit implies risk, and risk in such matters is what no Government ought to incur."

THE INDIAN MINTS.—The following sums were received and coined at the three Indian Mints in December last;—

RESALADAR KISHEN SING, an old man of seventy-five years of age, and a pensioner of the English Government, resided in Delhi when the rebellion broke out. He remained in Delhi during the siege and after it. On the British taking the city, Kishen Sing was arrested, on the ground that he was a traitor, for not having joined the British camp, his house and property were confiscated, and his pension stopped. On this charge he was tried by Colonel Burn, Military Governor of Delhi, who pronounced him innocent, put him in possession of his house and property, and gave him a letter of protection. As soon, however, as Colonel Burn left Delhi, he was again arrested and tried on the same charge by the Special Commission, and sentenced to transportation for life and loss of pension and property. The Governor-general then seems, as far as we can gather from his confused and somewhat intemperate petition, to have ordered the petitioner's release, on the ground that the Special Commission had no right to try him, and also that his "house and property" should be restored to him. It appears, however, that before this order was given, the property had been sold by the Delhi prize agents, but on Kishen Sing's praying that the proceeds of the sale should be made over to him, the Governor-general tells him that he has been "very liberally treated," by having his sentence of transportation (passed upon him by a court which had no right to try him) remitted, and by having his house restored to him. We do think from the papers before us that this old man has been ill-treated, and that such injustice will bring more dislike to and distrust of the British rule than a thousand gifts of jaghiers to faithful chiefs and a thousand Viceroy's progresses will remove. It is very unlikely that an old man of seventy-five was a very active rebel, or even that he possibly could have left his house and gone to the British camp, or if he had gone there, that he would have been welcome or indeed received at all. Our soldiers during the siege of Delhi had something else to do than make their camp a hospital for old men, women, and children. Again, even if he had been a rebel, he was once tried and acquitted, and his property restored to him. Again, when illegally tried a second time, the Governor-general himself released him from the consequences of that trial, and ordered his "house and property" to be restored to him. How, then, can the Governor-general consider it "liberal" treatment of the old man when he only gets his house? We wish, as we before said, that the petition were both more lucid and more temperate; but whatever its tone may be, we submit that for the honour of British justice, already too much tarnished by the proceedings in non-regulation provinces which have lately transpired, the wrong done to Kishen Sing should be repaired.—Hurkuru.

INDIAN REFINEMENT.—During the Commander-in-Chief's visit to Bareilly the residents of that station appear to have held quite a carnival. One of the amusements which they got up was a camel race, ridden in ladies' bonnets with lighted cigars, the loss of the bonnet or the cigar going out being considered a disqualification. Some of the animals went at a long swinging trot, others at an awkward canter. After a run of two miles the race was won by the Doctor of the 42nd Highlanders.

THE METROPOLITAN AND HIS TOUR.—The Bishop of Calcutta returned from his tour to the capital on the 24th January. He has been absent in his diocese for sixteen months, during which he has travelled the whole length of the Presidency from Calcutta to Peshawur, and has gone over Rohilcund and Oude. The visit of any Bishop, but especially of one who is so admirably fitted to influence officials, to affect European society for good, to create an interest in missionary operations, and to heal the wounds made by not a few bellicose chaplains, must have had a most beneficial effect. We (Friend of India) trust to see the results of it in an active prosecution of measures for the spiritual and social improvement of the European soldier, in the strengthening of the hands of the great Missionary Societies, and in the establishment of schools for the children of Europeans. We trust his return to Calcutta will now allow him to make it "fashionable" for chaplains—especially those who have collegiate charges—to do practically the work of city missionaries, and to visit the poorer and meaner of their flocks, the gaol and the hospitals, a little more zealously than the majority of them now do. We see most extravagant statements published as to the cost of the Bishop's tour. Like the similar misapprehension as to the expense of Lord Canning's tour which we exposed, they are far from the truth. Until the accounts are made up we cannot state the exact cost, especially as the Bishop frequently used a steamer, which was being employed at any rate. But the statements alluded to are greatly exaggerated.

AN EYE-WITNESS ON THE FAMINE.—An official member of the Delhi Relief Committee who saw the suffering there and has just come down through all the misery to Calcutta, writes to us (Friend of India) as follows:—"The suffering inside Delhi can hardly be exaggerated, but great as it is, it is nothing to what exists or rather I may say, I trust, did exist in the district. I arrived at Delhi on the 14th December, and was with the rest horrified at what I saw I was therefore glad to hear that a meeting, at which all were invited to attend, was to be held in Mr. Marshall's large room in the Chandnee Chouk on the 16th idem, the object of this meeting being to take measures for the relief of those crowds of poor starving wretches who almost blocked up the streets. Our deputy commissioner Mr. Cooper addressed the meeting, describing the horrors he had witnessed in the district during his tour, particularly some thirty miles from Delhi among the ravines, where the people, from sheer weakness and want of food, were lying down to die, not singly, but in numbers. By the exertions, however, of the commissioner and Mr. Cooper, prompt and immediate steps were taken to provide local help for these poor wretches, work being provided for such as were fit for it. We also learned that the number of starving and helpless people, of all ages and of both sexes, within the city was immense. Of these some 1,700 or more were daily fed by the relief fund, established originally before the mutiny, but Mr. Cooper added that this relief, partial though it was, must cease ere a week elapsed from want of funds. We decided that some decisive step must be taken, and at once, to stop, or at all events alleviate the distress on every side, the wants of the city itself being our first thought. As members of the working committee, then formed, Brigadier Brown, Captain Tickell, and Captain Lane were appointed to take the necessary steps to open another place for their relief outside the Delhi Gate, and before many days were over, we had the satisfaction of seeing upwards of 1,000 poor starving wretches fed twice a day. Were more funds at our disposal, more could be done. I forgot to mention that a considerable sum was raised at our first meeting, the native gentry, both at this and our subsequent daily meetings, largely contributing. I believe in all we reached in our monthly subscriptions nearly Rs. 4,000, which would be met by a similar subscription from Government, at least Mr. Cooper assured us of the fact. But still the number fed in different parts of the city could have borne but a very small relation to the number not fed; for, with all our exertions, the numbers of beggars in the streets appeared to be hardly diminished! To exaggerate the sufferings of the mass of the people, from Cawnpore up to Lahore, would, I fear, be impossible. I do not believe that there is any truth in the statements that have lately appeared in print, of their actually killing their children to save them from a lingering death by starvation. This I do not credit, but they most assuredly do offer them for sale, and they also kill their cattle, from their inability to feed them at all. In our small communities up country we can do but little after all to alleviate all this distress, and that, of course, locally only. Let the rich of Calcutta, both European and native, come forward; a large, a very large sum will thus be raised, which, with the assistance Government is giving in all directions, not only by money, but by opening out the public works, and thus giving employment to thousands, will do much to lessen, though it cannot remove, the suffering. During my journey down from Delhi, until I reached Cawnpore, I never stopped for an instant that I was not besieged with starving wretches. It was far worse nearer Delhi, but very bad up to Cawnpore. Imagine the sickness that must follow close on all this? Shall we not all suffer then?"

ALLYGURH, Jan. 20.—The poverty-stricken aspect of the country where the blessings of the canal water do not flow, simply because too far from the influence of canal irrigation, the terrible destitution arising out of the drought and bad seasons, and the daily increasing embarrassments financially and socially consequent thereon, are now so well established, that they have already been put on record in official correspondence. Relief Funds have been opened, and committees are already beginning their labours through out this and the Agra Division, but what is the 1,000 or 2,000 rupees monthly subscribed in proportion to the internal wants of each district? A mere drop, only sufficient to soothe the pangs of hunger at the head-quarters of each district. It is true that the Government have guaranteed to give a sum equal to the monthly amount collected by private donations and subscriptions, but with this inducement to local aid being as extensive as it can be, the alleviation will be hardly at all felt in the interior. Public works on a large scale have been opened in the construction of the Dehra Doon and Roorkee road, and the road connecting Gurhmooktesur with Delhi, but in a shorter space of time than was calculated on, the numbers of labourers from the distressed districts filled up the requirements of each, and now exclusive of the railway works there remain the excavation of the Futehghurh branch of the Ganges Canal, and upon this there will be ample employment for thousands of able-bodied men, women, and children for some months. But local relief will still be needed on a considerable scale in this district; the four hundred or five hundred now being daily fed at Allygurh will, there is every reason to fear, increase rapidly in numbers as the hot weather comes on. Of these the limited supply of funds at the disposal of the local committee will only probably enable them to provide for 1,000 daily at the utmost. Numbers will then have to be rejected and left to die in the public thoroughfares; and if this may be viewed beforehand as the scene of future misery in the Sudder station, it is fearful to think of the certainties in the mortality of the interior. Already deaths from starvation are being reported by the police too frequently to admit of a doubt of the future. No rain here since the 18th August, saving a short three quarters of an hour fall on the 20th September, and an inch about a week ago. Wheat selling 10 two-thirds seers at Coel, 9 seers in the district, and 9 seers I hear in the Delhi and Meerut districts.—Englishman.

GENERAL BEATSON.—A letter from the Governor-general's camp says:—"The chances are that General Beatson will have the command of the Gwalior division, inasmuch as, apart from his military services, his intimate knowledge of that part of India render him peculiarly fitted for the command."

DELHI, Feb. 1.—The Commander-in-Chief has come and gone. Colonel Becher and one a. d. c. accompany his Excellency to Agra, where they will be before the arrival of my letter. His Excellency fully approved of the proposed boundary for the new cantonment inside the city, running from the Delhi Gate up to the Cashmere Gate. Native capitalists will now, it is to be hoped, build some good houses, which are so much required, and which they would not do so long as there was any uncertainty about the boundary. Head quarters camp marched yesterday morning for Kur-naul, en route to Umballa, a salute announcing its departure and that of the Commander-in-Chief at the same time. Crime seems to be on the increase. Thefts and attempts at theft are very frequent, and a set of gamblers were a few days ago captured in the city, in the height of their amusement. The officers (native, I suppose) who captured them blackened their faces (rather an unnecessary proceeding, I imagine), and having well shoe-beaten them, permitted them to depart. Rumour says that some of the so-called "respectable bankers" of the city were recognised among them! A daring attempt at fraud was made the day before yesterday. A Hindoo, describing himself as a messenger from a gentleman, went to another Hindoo, and delivering a Persian letter, demanded a diamond ring and Rs. 20 for his master. The messenger was very impatient, and represented the ring and money to be urgently required. Perhaps this excited suspicion, but the Hindoo who possessed the ring thought it the safest plan to take it and the twenty rupees himself, upon which the messenger evaporated, leaving no trace behind. It is unnecessary to add that the whole thing was a well got up attempt at fraud; but the culprit must have known something about the private affairs of the persons he intended to have victimised, as a ring belonging to the gentleman was really in possession of the Hindoo to whom the villain went, and it was just a mere accident that it and the rupees were not sent. Weather cloudless, with cold breeze from the North-West.—Delhi Gazette.

THE CAMP OF THE HEAD QUARTERS will march this morning (January 27th) towards Delhi, with intent to make Umballa as early as it can, so as to push on thence for Lahore, to enable the Commander-in-Chief to take dak for Jheelum, Rawul-pindee, and Peshawur. The country between Meerut and Umballa is in a fearful state of dearth, and it is a matter of regret and much talk among the civil authorities that this huge camp should persist in traversing the most afflicted parts of the land, and thereby enhancing the distress that rages already so fiercely on it. Let it be supposed, however, that Sir Hugh Rose—in every matter said to be just and considerate—is only endeavouring to reach Umballa rapidly, for the purpose of either breaking up his enormous camp there for the present season, or so far reducing it, by sending off its heavy portions to Simla, his rendezvous for the ensuing summer, and thus enable him to travel with greater facility, and with less distress to the population of the country, through which the dwarf camp may proceed upwards. Sir H. Rose remains behind, the guest of the Major-General commanding, with the view of dawking it to Agra, to inspect its garrison and fort.—Mofussilite.

THE 5TH FUSILIERS AND H.M.'S 73RD are to proceed to England. H.M.'s 75th are in orders for Dinapore, but another regiment will be sent there, as the 75th are to relieve the Fusiliers at the presidency.

ROYAL FAMILY OF DELHI.—Almost all the members of the Delhi royal family have reached Maul-main, and the Governor-general has ordered that the treatment of the prisoners there should be less rigorous.

FAMINE LABOUR.—The Mofussilite mentions that there are about 9,000 men, women and children employed on the railway works between Ghazeeabad and Delhi. A member of the European committee attends daily at the poor house to distribute food. The works at Roorkee have been filled, and 4,000 are employed on the road between Haupper and Ghazeeabad.

THE DELHI BANK has made Rs. 81,228 on the operations of the half-year ending December last, after transferring Rs. 20,000 to the reserve fund. This is equivalent to 8½ per cent. on the capital.

MURTRA, Feb. 5.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief arrived here yesterday, at 4¼ p.m., and at once inspected the brigade, consisting of the 3rd troop 3rd brigade of Bengal Horse Artillery, and 2nd Bengal Light Cavalry. The latter entertained him at dinner in the evening. This morning he inspected the artillery and cavalry separately, and left at one o'clock for Allypore, en route to Umballa. His inspection of the Artillery and 2nd Bengal Light Cavalry was most minute, as he gallops about and personally inspects each manœuvre, which is more than any Commander-in-Chief has done since the days of Sir Charles Napier. We hear he expressed himself to Col. Tucker, c.b., commanding the 2nd, as much pleased with the appearance of the troops, both in the field and quarters.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S CAMP.—The number of persons in the Viceroy's camp now at Jubbulpore is 7,000 souls, soldiery included, but excluding the retinues of Sir Richmond Shakspear and Major Elliot of Nagpore. Last year the number was 17,725. As it is, the reduced number this season is a tax on the famishing districts near which they march, though the greatest care is taken to avoid oppression.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S CAMP, JUBBULPORE, Jan. 23.—About twelve miles from Jubbulpore on the Nursingpore road is a place of great renown, in this neighbourhood at least, called the "Marble Rocks," through which flows the Nerbudda, and truly a more superb sight is scarcely to be imagined. For about a mile the river is bound in on both sides by an immense wall of the purest white marble, rising from forty to one hundred feet, and probably as deep below the surface of the water, for there is no sounding it. The face of the rock generally is as smooth and polished as if a workman had been employed on it, and in many places worn into round holes, fluted ribs, &c., evidently by the agency of water, and on the rock in one place is an inscription in the Devanagree character, which the natives there say was written by one of their gods (of course). But the rocks are not the only beauties of the place, for about a mile from them, and apparently on another branch of the river, is the finest waterfall I have seen. The water rushes down in an immense volume, about twenty feet in width, and falls about thirty feet, as well as I could guess, roaring, boiling, and seething below horribly, throwing the spray high up in the air, which, as the wind catches and blows it towards you, gives you a fine drenching; the scenery all around being, at the same time, beautifully picturesque. On Monday the Governor-general, with a large party, went out tiger shooting; one was shot (I hear by the Viceroy) and brought into camp, and skinned this morning. This evening we witnessed some feats performed by some of Holkar's retainers in the presence of his Highness the Governor-general, Lady Canning, and the elite of the station, which, as I thought them extremely mediocre, it is not worth while describing. We leave Jubbulpore to-morrow on our return, and make a double march of it. It is rumoured here that his Highness the Governor-general leaves the camp at Mungawa, were the road turns off to Allahabad, to meet the Lieutenant Governor, and joins the camp again at Benares, which place it will reach about the 18th February.—Public Opinion.

DELHI, Jan. 28.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief arrived here by dak from Meerut on the morning of the 24th instant, under the usual salute; the camp also arrived the same morning, and encamped out of the Cashmere-gate. There was a brigade parade the same evening at half-past three, under the brigadier, Colonel Brown, for all troops in garrison, as follows:—Bengal battalion of artillery, under Captain Francis; the 4th Sikh cavalry; H.M.'s 88th and 4th N.I. The chief was present, and seemed to be much pleased with the different manœuvres; the 4th Sikh cavalry as usual very steady at their work. The next morning his Excellency had out the 88th, practising them mostly in light infantry, as also exercising the officers of the corps in a few manœuvres. On the evening of the same day at four o'clock he had out the 4th Sikh and artillery. I should say he could not have been otherwise than pleased with them, as both officers and men seemed to be well up to their work. The next day, Saturday, the 26th, he held a levee at one p.m. At six a.m. this morning, the 28th, he had out the 4th N.I., under Colonel Wilkie. Considering that all the officers present (three in number, the colonel, a captain, and adjutant) were mounted, and no subalterns, they did very well. A native corps without the full complement of officers cannot be well up in their work. His Excellency has gone out pig-sticking about six miles from the station, and nearly all the residents with him.—Delhi Gazette.

SIR HUGH ROSE AT MEERUT.—It must have been a source of extreme gratification to Sir Hugh Rose to have the opportunity of reviewing the troops that paraded for his Excellency's inspection on the afternoon of Friday, the 18th. We question whether there is another station in all India where so large a body of British troops could have been collected—without encroaching on neighbouring military stations. And we are assured there is no station—whether in or out of India—where a brigade could be found that knows its work better, or which would have made a finer display in the field than did the Meerut force, under the command of General Bradford, C.B. The troops that paraded on the occasion consisted of: 4th and 5th troops 1st Brigade H.A., F troop R.H. Artillery, A Battery Royal Artillery, Heavy Battery and 4th Company 4th Battalion, H.M.'s 6th Dragoons (Carabineers), H.M.'s 35th Royal Sussex Light Infantry, 13th Punjab Native Infantry, 66th Goorka Infantry, the latter belonging to the escort of the Commander-in-Chief, numbering in all about 5,000 men. Sir Hugh, accompanied by his entire staff, galloped up to the general parade ground, where the troops had already assembled, at four o'clock, and was received with the usual honours. His Excellency went down the line, and minutely inspected each man; after which the troops were formed into column, and marched past in quick time. The artillery, with their fine, healthy, active gunners and drivers, and their powerful cattle, looked remarkably well, and seemed as fully prepared to march into action, and there—for the hundredth time—perform that sad havoc in the ranks of the enemy which British artillery alone can do—as they were to march past the chief, with whom the greater portion of them had previously served throughout the Central Indian Campaign. The Carabineers, who came next, shared equally the meed of admiration of the spectators,—possibly indeed more so, as it was known to be about the last occasion on which the corps would appear, owing to its immediate departure for England. The fine robust appearance of the men, their exceedingly rich dress, and the dashing manner in which they walked past the Commander-in-Chief, must have been gratifying to Sir Hugh Rose, and, we doubt not, have convinced him they lacked nothing in discipline during their sojourn in this station. Of H.M.'s 35th Regiment, who next followed, it would indeed be difficult for us to do full justice. Suffice it, that their steady wall-like marching, their firm and soldier-like appearance under arms, assured us that we should have nothing to dread with such a corps at hand, if circumstances again disturbed the peace of this country. We have known people judge, and pretty correctly, too, of the character of individuals by some triflingly insufficient trait in their character. We judge of the discipline of a corps by the manner in which it "marches past." If it performs this evolution correctly, as firm, in fact, as did H.M.'s 35th Regiment on Friday, we emphatically pronounce it a well drilled corps, and fully able to undergo any description of manœuvring that may be required of it. The 13th Punjab Infantry and 66th Goorkas followed, and acquitted themselves very creditably, notwithstanding they were seen at a disadvantage alongside so many of their European brethren in arms. The unusual and novel spectacle of a siege train, with its elephants and bullocks marching past, was also witnessed, and with it closed the first part of the day's exercise. The brigade subsequently advanced in line, formed into columns, and after performing a variety of rapid evolutions, both en masse and in skirmishing order, the troops retired to their private parade ground at half-past five o'clock. The manœuvring of the artillery, and the rapidity with which they changed their flank and fired, was highly spoken of. On the following day, the Chief inspected the barracks of her Majesty's 35th at dinner hour, when he expressed his very great satisfaction at the state of the corps, both in quarters and in the field. In the afternoon the regiment was again brought out for light infantry drill, which elicited a further expression of Sir Hugh Rose's acknowledgments. Colonel Walter, taking advantage of so favourable an opportunity, released the entire regimental prisoners, including those under sentence of courts martial, as well as men undergoing minor punishment for misconduct. On the same day the Commander-in-Chief inspected the barracks of the other corps, and examined the officers and men on several points of discipline.—Mofussilite.

MOOLTAN, Jan. 20.—The steamer Chenab arrived on the 18th with the following passenger: Lieutenant Campbell, 79th Highlanders. We have had rain, as notified by telegram, but barely sufficient to settle the dust; lower down it has, I am told, fallen freely. Major Drummond, director of irrigation canals, and Captain MacLagan, chief engineer, Department of Public Works, have both passed through the station on tours of inspection. The commissioner of the division and his deputy have returned from the interior of the district. The Lieutenant-governor having sanctioned the construction of a church in the civil station of Mooltan, a committee is being formed for the purpose of selecting a suitable site, &c. Our good old brigadier, Major General Innes, has paid us a visit, and received a hearty welcome from all the old residents, amongst whom he was so highly and justly appreciated. Treasure to the value of 50,000 rupees left this for Lahore the other day, under an escort of the 21st Punjab Infantry and 9th Irregular Cavalry, under command of Captain Walker, of the former corps. The last monthly sale of supply bills proved a failure, even at the enhanced rate of discount offered, viz., 2½ per cent., not half of the maximum sum having been subscribed for.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE FAMINE IN TRAVANCORE is no longer a distant, unsubstantial danger, but a sad and painful reality. The dire calamity which has overtaken the poorer classes has perhaps no precedent in the present century, and mothers have actually been reduced to that last alternative of despair, the sacrifice of the tenderest feelings of nature to procure the means of prolonging their wretched existence. Never were the demands of mercy and philanthropy more imperative than on the present occasion; or the necessity of prompt and decisive action on the part of the Government more apparent. In South Travancore, the distress has reached its height, and we have it on authority that we are unable to question, that parents are disposing of their children by sale without regard to the caste or creed of the parties to whose mercies they are consigned. In the neighbourhood of Cotaur, a fine boy, about seven or eight years of age, was offered for sale by a poor woman for eight chukrams, or 4½ annas! Trevandrum literally swarms with the miserable poor, and despite the feeble efforts of private benevolence, many are dying daily from starvation. In the face of these heart-rending pictures of misery, we cannot but express our deep regret that timely precautions were not adopted by the Travancore authorities to introduce a sufficiency of grain into the country to guard against a calamity of this nature, which was rendered more than probable by the very general failure of the crops in the southern districts. We are not in possession of full information as to what efforts had been made by the responsible officers of the Circar for this object, and are unwilling, therefore, to pass a censure that would imply a neglect of the most obvious precautions that must have suggested themselves to any sagacious statesman. But we cannot help observing that the great and continued scarcity of food, which is known to prevail south of Trevandrum, is truly remarkable in view of the facilities which exist for pouring in supplies from the neighbouring British territories. Our own Government had liberally remitted the duty on grain upon exportation to any part of the Travancore country; and it only remained for the Circar to perform its part by encouraging its own subjects to use this advantage. At Quilon, matters appear to be somewhat better than in the south. There is an abundance of rice and paddy in the bazaars, though prices are excessive, and the lot of the poor is very trying in consequence. This evil is, however, considerably mitigated by local charity. One of the few deserving officers who redeem the general inertia of Travancore officials has generously come forward to raise a subscription for the relief of the suffering poor. His appeal seems to have been pretty well responded to, for between three and four hundred of these starving wretches have been provided with subsistence daily since the 12th instant. We hear he has secured sufficient funds to continue this charity for the space of thirty days, and further contributions are expected, which, it is hoped, will enable him to prolong it till the next Poonja harvest.—Courier.

MR. MALBY returned from his tour to the north on Jan. 15th, having visited all the northern stations, including Shoaranoor, on the railway line. Mr. Collins, the Circar engineer, is engaged in preparing an estimate for the construction of a substantial bridge near this place across the Ponnany river, which will give easy access to the railway from all parts of Cochin. The work will, no doubt, be undertaken at an early date, as the Resident as well as his Highness the Rajah appear to take a great interest in its completion. Mr. Maltby left again on the 18th for Cottayam, to inspect the progress of the road now being made across the eastern Ghauts, to connect Travancore with the Madura district; a project that will be productive of immense advantage to the trade of both countries. He returns to Cochin in a fortnight to hold a public durbar for the presentation of the usual letter of ceremony from the new Governor Sir W. Denison, which may be shortly expected.

THE FOLLOWING MEDICAL OFFICERS accepted the annuities of the year:—Inspector-general of Hospitals and late Director-general A. N. Magrath, Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals E. W. Eyre, of Bellary, Deputy Inspector-general of Hospitals A. Goodall, of Bangalore, Surgeon-major C. Keven. Although there are to be two deputy inspector-generals less, promotions from the rank of assistant to that of surgeon will not be hindered.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH FRAUDS.—Whoever doubts the intelligence of the natives of this country ought to be convinced of his error by two examples which we have lately had of the peculiar aptness manifested by the mild Hindoo in familiarising himself with, and improving upon, the greatest works of western civilization. It is true that in the base mechanical arts the muscular development of the European gives him an immense and insuperable advantage over the slender framed native of Hindoostan; but, if the practical genius of Englishmen has created and brought to mechanical perfection the wonderful inventions of the railway and the electric telegraph, the subtler intellect of the Indian teaches him how to employ these results of scientific labour for purposes never dreamt of elsewhere. Thus, at Baroda the other day, the unskilled natives, who before the beginning of this year had not so much as seen a railway train in motion, showed their ready comprehension of the powers of motion by placing a rail across the line in such a position that the train was only as it were by a miracle saved from utter destruction. But this was but a stupid piece of work when compared with the ingenious rascality of the Banians at Sattara, whom a local contemporary charges, we know not how truthfully, with having cut the telegraph wires and read off, on instruments conveyed to the spot for that purpose, the commercial messages from China. What more gratifying evidence could be desired of the schoolmaster being abroad in this country, and of the natural capability of the natives to rise above the dull Europeans? But, while expressing our admiration of the stratagem of our Sattara native friends, we must protest against the attempt to implicate in the fraud the heads of the Electric Telegraph Department. Can anything be more absurdly inconsistent than to make Captain Murray responsible, in any way whatever, for a crime of which the most active vigilance would not have stopped the commission? It is obvious that, human powers of locomotion being limited, a man cannot, as a general rule, be in more than one place at a time; and, as Captain Murray and his subordinates are not, so far as we are aware, endowed with the virtue of being ubiquitous, they cannot hinder rogues from cutting the wires, though they may afterwards find out the offenders and bring them to justice. But it is said, and we are sorry to believe justly said, that bribery and corruption are as common in Indian telegraph offices as in the city of Gloucester or the borough of Wakefield. Admitting this, how can Captain Murray check the evil? As long as there are dishonest merchants there will be dishonest clerks; and the proposed Chamber of Commerce meeting to-day should not be held unless some of the members are prepared to offer practical suggestions towards preventing the falsification of telegrams. All that Captain Murray, or any one else, can do with such means as are now at their disposal, is to punish with the utmost severity every breach of trust; and it is to be feared that, unless European labour be employed all along the line, the temptation to sell news for a rich bribe will be found irresistible by telegraph clerks. But the experiment of working the wires entirely by Europeans would be so costly that its abandonment would be only a question of time. Indeed, much of the odium to which the Electric Telegraph Department is subjected is due to the difficulties attending its connection with Government. Were the telegraph worked by the railway companies, it would be easy to institute an effective control over the clerks, and to make the institution as perfect as it is in England. But at present it is unavoidable that mistakes should occur, for it is impossible that any department of the Government should be able to protect the telegraph wires against all swindlers. We must wait till our railways are far advanced before we can have an efficient system of telegraphs in India.—Bombay Gazette.

Mosul, Nov. 29, 1860.—I regret to tell you that Mr. McCullum, one of the telegraph engineers, died last Friday night, and was buried in the Protestant burial-ground the day following. He was a fine young man, about 26 years old, and his brother, the principal engineer on the line, is inconsolable at his loss. Mr. Bliss, also, another engineer engaged in putting up the line between Mosul and Bagdad, died at the latter place about four weeks ago. He was taken ill at Kerkook, and was carried into Bagdad on a litter, and expired shortly after at the British Consulate. The poor man has left a widow and three children at home. Notwithstanding these serious drawbacks, we fully anticipate that the line between Bagdad and Constantinople will be open by the end of the year. We hear that a convention has been concluded between the Persian Government and the Porte to extend the line from Bagdad to Teheran. There will be no difficulty in continuing it from the latter place to Bushire, and that alone will place India within eight or nine days of London. Is it not practicable to extend the line between Bushire and Kurrachee by land?—Bombay Gazette.

INVALIDS.—About two hundred invalids of H.M.'s various regiments, with their families, under the command of Captain Clutterbuck, of H.M.'s 56th Regiment, will proceed to England by the ship Vernon, on or about the 14th of February.

COLONEL SCOTT, of the Engineers, retires from the service in April next. His successor is Colonel Turner, a gentleman in every way qualified to hold the appointment of Chief Engineer of Bombay.

Mr. CHARLES SANDERSON, chief engineer of the B. B. and C. I. Railway, went over the works of the line from Bombay to Bassein before he left the Presidency for Surat; and orders were given to re-commence works at Bassein on the 1st of February.

CAPTAIN W. T. CHITTY, 1st examiner, Pay Department, is to be appointed as Presidency Paymaster, in succession to Lieutenant-Colonel Barr, who is nominated Military Accountant, Bombay.

THE BOMBAY INCOME-TAX COMMISSIONERS have quarrelled among themselves, and one of the native members of the board, Mr. Mungullass Nathooobhy, has retired. No less than 10,000 blank returns have, it is reported, been sent in, and of those which have been filled up the Commissioners are said to have surcharged at least one half. There is, undoubtedly, a very bad spirit in Bombay about this tax; and the difficulties the Commissioners will have to encounter are only just beginning.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—Major Graves, Commandant of the 2nd G.S. Cavalry, Lieut. Daniell, adjutant, Major Anderson, 56th Regiment, twenty men of H.M.'s 50th Regiment, and two men of the 7th G.S. Cavalry, proceeded on the 8th Feb. by H.M.'s steamer Berenice to Kurrachee. Capt. R. Wallace, 5th Regiment N.L.I.; Lieut. Hodgson, 22nd Regt. N.I.; Dr. Clifton, royal artillery, and three hundred and ten native followers, arrived at the Presidency on the 8th February, by the ship British Flag, Captain Campbell, from Hong Kong. Lieut. and Mrs. Kettowe, of H.M.'s 4th (King's Own Regiment), and about twenty-four men of different regiments, will proceed to-morrow, Feb. 13, by the P. and O. Co.'s steamer Ottawa to Aden.

Mr. H. L. ANDERSON, the Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government, is likely to go to England soon on furlough. Mr. Kinloch Forbes, at present Judge of Surat, will probably be appointed Acting Secretary during Mr. Anderson's absence.

Mr. LEWIS, the Advocate General, shortly goes home on leave of absence. It is said that Mr. Westropp will be appointed to act during Mr. Lewis's absence.

COLONEL POPE, of the Commissariat, is coming out immediately to fill an important political appointment. As Colonel Coghlan is going home, he will probably succeed that officer at Aden.

Mr. JAMES GIBBS, the Special Commissioner of Income-tax for this Presidency, will be appointed Commissioner for the new Paper Currency at Bombay, in addition to his present duties, on the passing of the Currency Bill. The appointment is in the gift of the Government of India, and Sir Bartle Frere proved Mr. Gibbs's efficiency as an administrator in Scinde.

Mr. G. W. HEALEY, of the firm of W. F. Stearns and Co., has been appointed American Consul in the room of Mr. Hatfield, recalled.

MAJOR ROBERT JOHNSTONE has been appointed by his Excellency Sir William Mansfield to the command of the 2nd Regiment Jacob's Rifles, stationed on the frontier of Upper Scinde. Major Johnstone, who is now at Bhooj with his regiment, the 1st Grenadiers, will leave in a few days, to take up his appointment at Jacobabad.

Mr. SPOONER.—At the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce on the 8th Feb., on the motion of Mr. A. C. Gumpert, a committee, consisting of Messrs. R. Strong, M. Scott, and R. Wallace, was nominated for the purpose of considering the best way of giving Mr. Spooner, the Commissioner of Customs, who has just returned from Calcutta, some mark of the sense of obligation which the mercantile community feels is due to him for the able manner in which he had protected their interests in Calcutta.

INCOME-TAX AT ADEN.—A very bad case of oppression by means of the Income-tax has occurred at Aden. Captain Playfair, the acting resident, has indicted a treble fine on a Roman Catholic priest for not returning as part of his income alms entrusted to him for maintaining his church in good repair. He is reported to have done this injustice because he had a private grudge against the priest. This, of course, makes his conduct worse. The case is now under the consideration of Government.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Feb. 12).—Coffee.—Both Mocha and Berbera are very scarce, but in Malabar large arrivals have come in, and some transactions taken place at from Rs. 8-6 to 8-12 per maund. Mocha and Berbera are nominally worth Rs. 13 to 15. Cotton.—There is considerable business doing in new for forward delivery. We now quote Rs. 152 to 155 for Dhollera, Rs. 160 to 163 for Broach, Rs. 147 to 148 for Comrawtee, Nuggur, and Barree kinds. Of the new crop there are arrivals of Broach, Bhownuggur, and Egenghat, which are speedily taken up in fulfilment of contracts. O.d. Comptah is selling freely at Rs. 125 to 130, and Dhollera at Rs. 140 per candy without selection, the latter being principally taken by native shippers. Hemp, owing partially to export, as well as large local demand, has improved in value Rs. 2 to 3 per candy. Several lots of Rajapore and Daveghat have changed hands at Rs. 42 to 45. Calcut is at present scarce, and worth Rs. 47 to 48 per candy. Pepper is steady in price, despite recent large arrivals. Linseed, after declining slightly, has somewhat improved, the last transaction being at Rs. 4 to 13 per cwt. Rape was procurable during the earlier part of the fortnight at Rs. 5-8 to 5-10, but has since risen, and is now worth Rs. 5-11 to 5-12 per cwt. Gingely is tending upwards, and supplies are gradually moderating. A few parcels are reported sold from Rs. 26-8 to 27 per candy, but there are no sellers at the moment under Rs. 28. Niger and Ground Nuts, on account of good local demand for oil, are not obtainable under Rs. 22 to 23 per candy for the former, and Rs. 24 to 25 for the latter.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Feb. 12).—Grey Goods.—Shirtings.—The lighter weights of 40 and 45 inch, owing to pretty fair clearances, are in better repute at a slight advance, especially 40 inch 8lb. and 7lb. On account of forced sales the heavier makes have receded in value. Good 8lb. 40 inch find purchasers at Rs. 3-6 to 3-6-6 per piece, and 8lb. 6oz. at Rs. 5-13 to 5-14 per piece. 8lb. 45 inch have been placed to a moderate extent at Rs. 5-3 to 5-3 per piece. Printers are generally heavily held, though a few sales of the higher reeds are reported at steady prices. Madapolams are more dull of sale; 3lb. change hands at Rs. 1-14, 2½lb. Rs. 1-7½. We quote 3½lb. at Rs. 2-4 per piece. Domestic—29 and 32 inches are proportionally lower in value than the wider widths. Longcloths continue scarce, and still attract attention. A 9lb. 40 inch of good make is to-day worth Rs. 5-10 per piece, and 9½lb. 45 inch Rs. 6-2 per piece. Grey Muls are as neglected as ever. The finer qualities of this article are, however, saleable. Drills pass at a slight decline on former values. In Bleached fabrics the inquiry is chiefly for the medium and fine qualities of Shirtings and Jaconets, and also for Muls of particular makes. Madapolams, Dimities, and Doria Stripes are difficult to sell. All sorts of Dhories are lower on account of continued heavy supplies. Lappets are unaccountably dull, low and very fine qualities being the only kinds saleable. Tanjibs are abundantly held. Coloured Lappets, notwithstanding very moderate supplies, find buyers at miserable rates. Coloured Mulsins are gradually becoming more plentiful. In Cotton Twist No. 20s, both Mule and Water have suffered a considerable decline, while all other numbers are again a shade easier. Metals.—Since last Mail Copper Braziers have regained about one rupee per cwt., and sales have been made at Rs. 56. Sheathing may be quoted Rs. 55. Some sales of Tiles were effected at Rs. 57. Ingots are yet lightly held, and worth Rs. 59 to 60. Steel in kegs, in the absence of demand, is lower in value, and may be quoted Rs. 11-1 to 11-12, according to marks.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, March 1.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers of H.M.'s Indian forces, whose claims to the same have been submitted for H.M.'s approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their names, viz.:

Late 2nd Bengal N.I.—Col. James Travers—For a daring act of bravery, in July, 1857, when the Indore Presidency was suddenly attacked by Holkar's troops, in having charged the guns with only five men to support him, and driven the gunners from the guns, thereby creating a favourable diversion which saved the lives of many persons, fugitives to the residency. It is stated that officers who were present considered that the effect of the charge was to enable many Europeans to escape from actual slaughter, and time was gained which enabled the faithful Bhopal artillery to man their guns. Col. Travers's horse was shot in three places, and his accoutrements were shot through in various parts. He commanded the Bhopal levy.

Late 46th Bengal N.I.—Lieut. col. Samuel James Browne, C.B.—For having at Seerporah, in an engagement with the rebel forces under Khan Allie Khan, on the 31st of August, 1858, whilst advancing upon the enemy's position, at daybreak, pushed on with one orderly sower upon a 9-pounder gun that was commanding one of the approaches to the enemy's position, and attacked the gunners, thereby preventing them from reloading, and firing upon the infantry who were advancing to the attack. In doing this, a personal conflict ensued, in which Capt., now Lieut. col., Samuel James Browne, commandant of the 2nd Punjab cav., received a severe sword-cut wound on the left knee, and shortly afterwards another sword-cut wound, which severed the left arm at the shoulder, not, however, before Lieut. col. Browne had succeeded in cutting down one of his assailants. The gun was prevented from being reloaded, and was eventually captured by the inf., and the gunner slain.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.

THE Report of the Committee intrusted with the distribution of the half million of money voluntarily subscribed by all classes of people for the relief of the sufferers by the Indian mutiny must be regarded, on the whole, as very satisfactory. It is generally admitted that the delicate duty confided to those gentlemen has been discharged with equal liberality and judgment. The secretaries, too, have been universally commended for their courtesy, considerateness, and active sympathy. Effective aid, whether of a permanent or temporary nature, has been afforded to all who stood in need of it, and the widow and the orphan have not been debarred by urgent want from the sacred right of grieving over the loss of a husband or a father. Thus far, then, all has been well done—with one exception. Was it really a judicious step, we would ask, to invest in the Funds or in East Indian Debentures, the enormous balance that still remains after the liquidation of every kind of liability? The security is, no doubt, unexceptionable, and we find no fault with the investment further than that it is an investment. Very many kind-hearted individuals, we are inclined to think, would either have refused to subscribe at all, or would certainly have put down their names for a much smaller sum if they had entertained any idea of their money being locked up in stock or debentures. And for what object? There are, we observe, certain classes of sufferers whose allowances are to be continued to the end of the present year, when their respective claims will be again taken into consideration. It is therefore obvious that these grants of aid are not to be looked upon as life annuities. Now, no one will dispute the fact that a small certainty is preferable to a large amount, the possession of which may terminate at an indefinite but early period. The Committee may therefore rest assured that the recipients of their bounty would gladly accept a sum of money down, with the understanding that under no possible circumstances would further relief be afforded to them. This final clearance of claims would, of course, imply the doing away with all the expenses of management, because there would be nothing more to manage. The balance would even then exceed the sum of two hundred thousand pounds sterling. And here the question inevitably occurs—What could have induced the Committee to go on receiving subscriptions so far in excess of the utmost necessity? No one complains of their parsimony, so that cannot have been the cause of this vast accumulation. The fact, however, remains that nearly £230,000 have been drawn from the purses of the charitable, many of whom could ill spare what their heart prompted them to give; and to a partial extent other destitute persons have thereby been deprived of the aid they would probably have received had not such a large amount been thus appropriated. The Indian sufferers, on the other hand, have not benefited to the full extent the sympathy of their countrymen would have warranted. Even with regard to the nature of the investments selected, a captious critic might object, that if a war were to break out in Europe both Funds and Debentures would fall so low as to render it impossible to sell out without incurring a greater loss than would be covered by the interest, and that consequently it would have been wiser to have lodged deposits with such substantial banks as the London and Westminster, the Oriental, the Agra, &c., &c. But we do not quarrel with the character of the investment, but with the act of investing at all. Even now it is not too late to turn this fine capital to noble account. Every mail brings yet more harassing details of the appalling destitution that pervades the Upper Provinces of India. Famine stalks through the land, and the next destroyer will probably be the cholera. The Government is exerting itself to the utmost to furnish reproductive employment for those who can labour, and to mitigate the gnawings of hunger in the case of the aged, the infirm, and the very young. The small body of Europeans, too, residing in the country, generously forgetful of the terrible wrongs they have so recently endured at the hands of the natives, are contributing to the furthest limit of their means towards the alleviation of the distress of their neighbours. But both these sources of relief are unequal to grapple with this awful and sudden emergency. Here there is a fitting opportunity for the demonstration of true Christian magnanimity. Let this surplus fund, originally subscribed for the relief of the persecuted, promptly be applied to the succour of the persecutors themselves, now reduced to a condition that may well excite the compassion of their very victims. It is the noblest revenge that can be taken for past injuries, and one that cannot be otherwise than acceptable in the sight both of God and man. The effect of twenty lakhs of rupees thus unexpectedly provided would be as if they had dropped from the clouds of heaven. Thousands of lives might be saved, and tens of thousands filled with gratitude towards their benefactors, and with admiration for a religion that teaches men to be so Godlike in their actions.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

IN the current number of Blackwood there is an exceedingly interesting and well-written article on the Indian Civil Service, when at its zenith. It is affirmed, and the assertion is not to be lightly gainsaid, that “an abler or more honourable body of public servants has never been engaged in the administration of any country in the world than those who graduated at Haileybury, and passed college at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay.” They proved good and faithful servants because they were brought up from their infancy to the idea of serving the same Honourable Company whom their fathers had served; and also because they had good masters. They were paid sufficiently high to raise them above all ordinary temptations, and a very nice sense of honour formed the connecting link of the entire service. Each member was conscious that any dereliction on his part would be felt as a disgrace to the whole body, and the esprit de corps is generally a stronger motive than even individual character. It is certain that, with very few exceptions indeed, the Civil Servants of the Company have returned to their native country after a long and laborious career with very moderate fortunes, but with an untarnished name. In 1853 the system was changed, but assuredly not improved. It was thrown open to all natural born subjects of her Majesty who should show themselves most worthy of such employment. As an abstract theory nothing could be more fair, or more conducive to the public interests; but unfortunately mankind are not governed by abstract theories. It was said that “young men who have obtained the highest honours of Oxford and Cambridge,” would compete for such a tempting prize as an appointment in the East Indian Civil Service, which implies a competency to begin with, and the chance of a seat in the Calcutta Council with £8,000 to conclude with. But when the time arrived for the examination, it was discovered that neither Oxonians nor Cantabs of any note were present among the competitors. The contest virtually lay between good third-rate youths, tolerably well educated in Latin and Greek, mathematics, modern history, and geography. Now, the old Haileybury students knew all this and something more, for they got an inkling of the important science of political economy, and the elements of a legal education—to say nothing of the invaluable bond of union that bound them together for life, one for all and all for one. Experience, too, proved that the “competition-wallahs” failed to command the respect of the natives. As a rule they were not so courteous and gentlemanly in their deportment, they had no hereditary sympathy with the people among whom their lot was cast; they knew nothing of their language, and could not tolerate their prejudices, their strange usages, and abject superstition. Moreover, they were simply lads of fair average ability, as far as letters were concerned, but they had no idea of springing into the saddle and “stretching at an unsparing gallop through the early morning mist on their way to some distant point where measurements are to be tested, doubts resolved, or objections investigated.” Neither were they prepared to place themselves at the head of a small police force and scour the country in pursuit of armed dacoits and ubiquitous marauders. The difference between the two classes of men was rudely tested by the mutiny, when the laurels were carried off by Haileybury without an adverse vote. But while agreeing in the main with the opinions propounded by the writer in Blackwood, there is one point on which we are compelled to dissent. There is no doubt, we believe, as to its being the intention of her Majesty's Government to introduce a Bill for the virtual abolition of the Civil Service, and the inauguration of an entirely new system of administration. The writer of the article in question lays particular stress upon the injustice that will thus be done to those who have received their appointments not “as free gifts from powerful patrons,” but as the stipulated reward of their own merits.

A contract was entered into with them when they competed for admission into the service as then constituted, and they are entitled to claim the fulfilment of that contract. Very true; but individual rights and privileges must and always do give way to the public interests. Some sort of compensation may be gracefully offered to them, and we may very sincerely regret that their prospects are likely to prove less brilliant than they originally expected. But, clearly these unfortunate gentlemen cannot be permitted to obstruct the efficient working of the State machinery. The "covenant," too, must pass away among the things that have been. Even now, at rare intervals, an uncovenanted servant succeeds, in spite of the almost insuperable obstacles in his path, in raising himself on a level with the crème de la crème of the Covenanted Service. Such cases are certainly rare; but the wonder is that they ever happen at all, considering the difficulties and prejudices to be overcome. There should be, it seems to us, but one general civil service, from among which the best men should be selected for the most responsible duties, and that promotion should be both by seniority and selection. A good revenue officer should not suddenly be converted into a judge, nor an active magistrate into a commissioner of customs. It is undoubtedly in the collection of revenue that the most intimate knowledge of the country and people is to be acquired, and, consequently, in that department every civil servant of the State—except mere copying clerks—should commence his training for the discharge of those particular duties to which he may prove himself best adapted by constitution, character, and education. We now arrive at the knotty point of the problem. The weak point in the administration of India under the old system was unquestionably "the defective legal education of the Company's servants." The objection, of course, applies chiefly to the lower courts, for the Company's judges were irreproachable as dispensers of equity. It is true, their judgments were not unfrequently couched in anything but legal phraseology, and usually contained a vast quantity of irrelevant matter, but, notwithstanding all this faultiness of manner, the matter of their judgments was generally sound and judicious, if not strictly judicial. Their long experience of the people, their sound English sense, their honourable and gentlemanly ambition to do what was right between man and man, could scarcely fail, in the generality of cases, to lead them to a just and righteous conclusion. But it must be admitted that the young Mofussil magistrates—especially in Lower Bengal, where they had to administer enormous districts, without the advantage of frequent converse with their seniors—did somewhat too often pronounce sentences with which neither law, nor equity, nor common sense had anything whatever to do. This is the great defect, then, that is to be remedied. But how? It certainly will not answer to send out the "inevitable sous-lieutenant," the barrier of seven years' standing. It is, above all things, necessary for the dispensation of justice that the presiding magistrate should not be at the mercy of an interpreter, and it is rather premature to insist upon English being the language of the courts. It is not a legal training alone that will suffice. In the words

"It is not the knowledge of the science which is so much required: it is the administrative art which is so required, and that can only arise from familiarity with the people, and a knowledge of the people themselves."

That knowledge, we repeat, is only to be acquired in the revenue department, and if this postulate be granted we hold the key of the position. When the young civilian arrives in India let him at once be sent off into the Mofussil as an assistant or sub-assistant, and there continue till he has gathered an ample store of local information—and we would remove him every six months or so to another district—and has had time and opportunity to judge of the line of service for which he is best adapted. Probably a couple of years should be devoted to this elementary education, and at the expiration of that period those who make choice of the judicial department might be sent to study law at the Presidency towns or at Lahore. A couple of years passed in regular attendance on a sound expositor of law, and in observing the practical working of the magistrates' courts, would afterwards prove a period of life to which, at a maturer age, they would look back with grateful pride. And even at the expiration of these four years the average age of these well-trained magistrates would be rather under than over 26—surely quite soon enough to undertake such a nice responsibility as the elimination of truth, where plaintiff and defendant are outwying each other in falsehood and perjury. Reform the existing service as far as it may need reform, but do not convert India into a field of patronage—sending out thither those who cannot get on at home, but whose friends happen to possess ministerial or electoral influence. "A knowledge of the country and of the people is the first thing, the second thing, and the third thing, in an Indian administrator."

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE £50 RETIRING BONUS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Surely Sir Charles Wood does not really expect to catch strong, vigorous fish with such a bait as £50? If he does he is likely to be grievously disappointed. The sickly, and those tired of the muddy waters, who intend, bait or no bait, to make their escape from them, are about all he will find who will take the hook. But seriously, is it reasonable to expect men to give up incomes double, treble, and quadruple what they would receive in England for the sake of an additional £50 per annum to their pensions? It is simply nonsense to imagine such a thing. If the object be to materially reduce the number of officers of the higher grades of the Indian army, a much more liberal policy must be adopted. The present offer of £50 does not at all come up to the expectations, and reasonable expectations, too, entertained when I left India a few months ago. It was generally supposed that lieutenant-colonels, at least a certain number from the top of the list, would be allowed £600 per annum in lieu of waiting on for the off-reckonings, if accepted within a limited period: all other officers to have the option of retiring on the pension of the grade immediately above that they now hold, the same privilege being held out to the invalid establishment. All these anticipations have, of course, now vanished, and the discontent among the officers in India is likely to be much increased; at the same time they will find themselves unable to retire, as they have no private means to fall back upon. I have little doubt, however, that many would retire were the more liberal terms offered; for men's minds are in a very unsettled state at present. There are officers, too, who have been in the service a longer period than to qualify for pension, but who, from sickness, have not completed the time to enable them to take it, who might be cleared off at once by giving them their pension with or without the additional £50. The following table of Indian and English pay will show what a man is expected to give up, and what a saving Government would effect by liberal pensions, instead of following the penny wise and pound foolish plan of offering £50 additional, the policy of which I subscribe myself

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 1.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE IN INDIA.

Colonel SYKES asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether the Government considered that the 87th section of the Act 3rd and 4th William IV., cap. 85, which enacted "that no native of the said territories (India), nor any natural-born subject of his Majesty residing therein, shall, by reason of his religion, place of birth, descent, colour, or any of them, be disabled from holding any place, office, or employment under the said company," was applicable only to the admission of natives into the service of the East India Company, and not into the service of the Crown; and whether her Majesty's subjects residing in India have or have not the same rights now as they had under the East India Company, and which her Majesty's subjects possessed residing elsewhere?

LORD PALMERSTON, in answer to his hon. friend, could state his opinion that the claim of her Majesty's subjects in India to employment in the public service had not been in any way affected by the transfer of the Government of India from the East India Company to the Crown.

THE INDIAN PRIZE MONEY.

SIR E. GROGAN asked the President of the India Board if any and what arrangements had been made, or were intended to be made, for the payment, in this country and in Ireland, of their shares of the prize money to the officers and soldiers who were engaged in the late Indian campaign, and are resident in the United Kingdom?

SIR C. WOOD could not give a satisfactory answer to the hon. member, because the time for the distribution of the prize money here depended, to a great extent, on the payments in India, and also on the circumstances of the persons who were to receive it in this country. Until the Government knew to whom the money was to be paid, and under what circumstances the persons entitled to it might happen to be placed, it was impossible for them to make any arrangement on the subject.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR JAMES OUTRAM.

A meeting was held on Tuesday at Willis's Rooms for the purpose of passing resolutions "with the view of giving public expression to the desire already recorded by a large and most influential body of his countrymen to mark in a permanent manner their high sense of the great public services and eminent character of that distinguished soldier and statesman, Sir James Outram."

The meeting was called under the auspices of a vast body of gentlemen of high position, many of whom were present. Among them may be mentioned, Viscount Palmerston, M.P.; the Lord Mayor, M.P.; Sir Charles Wood, M.P.; Sir W. G. Armstrong, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Earl de Grey and Ripon, Sir G. Pollock, Lord Hotham, M.P.; Sir R. J. Mangles, Lord Keane, Captain Lynch, Mr. Arthur Mills, M.P., &c.

The Duke of Argyll, who was to have presided, was unable to attend in consequence of the death of his father-in-law, the Duke of Sutherland. Under these circumstances Lord Lyveden presided.

The following letter from the Duke of Argyll was read:—

March 2, 1861.

"My Lord,—I deeply regret that a severe family affliction renders it impossible for me to have the honour of presiding at the meeting on Tuesday next.

"In intimating this to your Lordship, through whom the committee did the high honour of requesting me to take the chair, I trust I may be allowed to say with what warm admiration I have always regarded the character and services of Sir J. Outram.

"The many great qualities which have been requisite for a successful career such as his in India are now much more generally appreciated than they once were. It is a matter of public importance that those who spend, and too often are called to exhaust, their powers in the service of the Eastern empire should receive, even in their lifetime the public acknowledgments and honours they deserve.

"I am, my Lord, your obedient servant,

"ARGYLL."

Sir J. FERGUSSON, Bart., M.P., moved, and the Hon. A. KINNAIRD, M.P., seconded the first resolution:—

"That this meeting desires to record its sense of the distinguished services of Lieutenant-General Sir James Outram, of his public character and private worth; and that, in order to give permanent expression to this feeling of respect and admiration, it is desirable that a public subscription should be opened with a view to the collection of funds for the erection in London of a statue of Sir James Outram, near that of his illustrious comrade, Sir Henry Havelock, and for such other memorials of his services as may be determined upon."

Mr. R. W. CRAWFORD, M.P., proposed, and Sir H. RAWLINSON seconded, the next resolution:—

"That the communities of the several presidencies of India be invited to co-operate for these objects, and that a duplicate statue be erected in the metropolis of India."

The Earl of SHAFTESBURY moved the third resolution:—

"That a service of plate, or such other heirloom as the managing committee may decide upon, be presented to Sir James Outram, with an address bearing the names of all those who have promoted the testimonial."

Colonel SYKES then moved the fourth resolution, which was seconded by Mr. JAMES BURNES:—

"That the following noblemen and gentlemen form a managing committee to carry out the above resolutions, with power to add to their number, and to appoint branch committees in aid of the movement:—General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., chairman; Lord Keane, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, M.P., the Right Hon. Sir John McNeill, G.C.B., Sir H. Minto Farquhar, M.P., Sir James D. H. Elphinstone, M.P., General E. M. G. Showers, Major-General Sir R. J. H. Vivian, K.C.B., Major-General D. Downing, Sir J. Fergusson, M.P., Dr. Norton Shaw, W. H. Russell, LL.D., Mr. J. W. Kaye, Major-General D. Malcolm, Major-General H. Hancock, Captain Sheard Osborne, C.B., R.N., Colonel J. Holland, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Henry M. Havelock."

On the motion of Lord KEANE, a vote of thanks was awarded to Lord Lyveden, and a liberal subscription was entered into.

Charles Guillaume Marie Apolline Antonine Cousin-Montauban, General of Division, Commander-in-Chief of the French land forces in China.

Rushworth, Esq., to be Auditor-general for the Island of Mauritius.

OPENING CHINESE PORTS.—The treaty of 1858, which was confirmed by the convention of last October, gives British merchant ships authority to trade at certain new ports and also upon the great river (Yang-tze-kiang); but the valley of that river being "disturbed by outlaws," no port thereon was at present (1858) to be open to trade except Chinkiang; but "so soon as peace shall be restored" British vessels were to be admitted as far as Han-kau, at three ports to be selected by the British Minister. The "Further Correspondence," now published, contains a communication, dated the 21st of November last, addressed to the Prince of Kung by Mr. Bruce, in which, after stating his intention to station consuls at the new ports named in the treaty, and requesting the Prince to give instructions for their proper reception, he adds that, "with reference to the Yang-tze-kiang, up which river British vessels are by the treaty of 1858 authorised to trade, he regards it as expedient that for the present but two ports should be opened,—namely Han-kau and Kiu-kiang;" and, in order to prevent abuses in the present disturbed state of the river, he proposes that the duties be payable at Shanghai or Ching-kiang-foo, and that British vessels be permitted to carry for their protection such arms and ammunition as shall appear to the Chinese Customs to be reasonable, the amount to be specified in an "Arms Certificate," and any vessel trafficking in arms or ammunition, or carrying them in excess of the certificate, to be liable to confiscation of the cargo, and to be prohibited from trading on the river. The Prince replies that, "whether the passage up and down the Long River be open or not it is not in his power to divine, as there is still war in the southern provinces, but that if Mr. Bruce is resolved to station consuls at different places along it, such a step being in entire accordance with the treaty," the Prince is in reason bound to give corresponding directions; but the Chinese Government must not be held responsible should we come to harm by ascending the river; and he acknowledges the proposal as to carrying arms to be most fair and equitable. Mr. Bruce, in sending home the correspondence, observes that under the treaty of 1858 we had technically no right to insist on the immediate opening of the river, but that the capture of Soo-chow by the insurgents, and the bearing of the progress of the rebellion on the import trade, rendered it most desirable to find an uninterrupted channel of communication with the western provinces of China; that he hopes the step will prove of great advantage to the industrious part of the population; that the revival of commerce and increased wealth will create a stronger desire for tranquillity and order, and whichever of the two parties is wise enough to enlist this feeling in its favour will have made a great step towards securing its ascendancy in the country; while, whatever may happen, it is most important that the Government recognised exclusively by foreign powers should have given us an undisputed right to push our navigation into the very centre of China. Lord Elgin also writes to Lord J. Russell, on the 6th of Dec., that he is engaged in considering, with the Chinese officials at Shanghai and leading merchants the conditions under which it may be practicable and expedient to open up the Yang-tze-kiang at once to trade, for that though the right to navigate it beyond Chin-kiang-foo does not in strictness arise until the civil war which now rages on its banks shall have been suppressed, the Prince of Kung has met in a liberal spirit Mr. Bruce's proposal to anticipate that period by a provisional arrangement. Lord Elgin adds that, if a legitimate trade can be established on this river, it will go some way towards affording to the inhabitants of the interior a market and security, which are all that a Chinaman requires to render him one of the most valuable of customers, but that every effort must be made to prevent smugglers and filibusters from availing themselves of this channel of communication to introduce foreign arms and recruits into the disturbed districts, and thereby extending and perpetuating the reign of anarchy which threatens to convert one of the most fertile regions of the earth and its industrious population into a wilderness haunted by bands of ruffians.

OUDE RAILWAY.—The directors state in their report that in the cold season of 1859 the company's staff surveyed 430 miles of line in Oude to the entire satisfaction of the public authorities, with whom the plans and sections were deposited. Owing, however, to the magnitude of railway undertakings in India, the Government had subsequently considered it inexpedient to encourage the commencement of any lines not already sanctioned, and the Secretary of State for India had announced that the sum of £13,179 (less Income-tax) was ready to be handed over to the company whenever they demanded it. This sum would enable the directors to apply £11,083 to the purpose of returning in full the original deposit of 5s. per share paid on the shares, and, after payment of all ascertained claims upon the company, would leave in their hands, at the further disposal of the shareholders, £1,588. The directors recommended the return of the deposit, and the retention in hand of the surplus to defray the expenses of the company (say £250 per annum) until the completion of the Grand Trunk line to Delhi, before which time they had every reason to believe the Government would be anxious to construct the Oude line to Lucknow. Should the shareholders resolve on winding up the affairs of the company, of course they could do so, and divide the surplus, after reserving a certain sum to pay the winding-up expenses.

BOOKS.

The Lost Tribes, and the Saxons of the East and of the West, with New Views of Buddhism, and Translations of Rock Records in India. By George Moore, M.D. Longmans and Co.

This is, in many respects, a very remarkable work, and full of the deepest interest for students of prophecy. It evinces great research, and the possession of philological acquirements of no ordinary character. Within the limited space, however, at our disposal for literary notices it is quite impossible to do justice to the variety of new matter now for the first time brought forward, or to the ingenious and not unfrequently novel interpretations of ancient inscriptions profusely scattered throughout the entire volume. We cannot take it upon ourselves to say that Dr. Moore has completely proved his case, simply because we do not feel competent to speak with any authority on a subject of such a peculiar and recondite nature. There are but few critics, indeed, at all capable of passing a sound judgment on evidence that requires the study of a lifetime to understand. The object, however, which Dr. Moore has proposed to himself is to note the dispersion and to trace the wanderings of the ten tribes of Israel. Assuming the correctness of the data he has placed before us, it appears to have fallen to the lot of the Sons of Isaac—as they delighted to call themselves after their captivity—to play an extraordinary and almost miraculous part in the history of mankind. He shows, almost to demonstration, that the Sacæ were these very Sons of Isaac, and they again were the ancestors of, or rather the same race as, the Saxons. And while one great wave of this wonderful people swept over Europe, another flowed through Afghanistan into India under the title of Pali, or Buddhii—signifying a separate and peculiar people. Announced in this bald, disjointed manner, without explanatory and illustrative comments, Dr. Moore's theory may appear not only startling, but exaggerated and fanciful. A careful and impartial perusal, however, of the reasons he assigns for his belief, will work conviction in many, and must induce even the sceptical to inquire still further before they settle down in permanent unbelief. It is not a work to be taken up for the amusement of an idle hour, for it demands serious and undivided attention; but we shall be greatly surprised—we might say disappointed—if it do not excite an unusual degree of interest in thoughtful and studious circles.

H.M.'s 52ND FOOT marched into Gwalior on the 12th January, and left again on the 14th for Jhansi, to relieve H.M.'s 89th Foot, whose destination is Umballa. The former regiment, on its arrival at Gwalior, was entertained, by companies, by the men of H.M.'s 27th, stationed there. We regret to hear that a melancholy accident occurred before the 52nd left. A soldier of the 27th went over late in the evening to the 52nd lines. He was seen leaving them with a 52nd man, before tattoo. It is supposed they missed the bridge—for next morning both their bodies were found in the river.

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

THE BEARD, WHISKERS, AND MUSTACHIOS. ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving, and beautifying the human hair. In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

ALLEN'S*MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pison, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz.:—

3 ft. wide by 6 ft. 4 in. long.....£2 5 0

3 ft. 6 in. " " ..... 2 10 0

5 ft. " " ..... 3 5 0

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the arrival of the Calcutta mail of the 8th February we have received a less discouraging account of the condition of the Punjab, so far as the future is concerned. The early rains, though long delayed, have at last fallen, and a pretty confident hope is now entertained that the spring crops will not prove such an entire failure as was at one time apprehended. The present distress, however, is very real and very great, and will test to the utmost the paternal energy of the Government and the charity of individuals. The latter has not been wanting, and in Calcutta alone the sum of £8,400 was subscribed within a fortnight, chiefly by the European community. As a rule the natives have done very little for their fellow-countrymen, though, of course, a few noble exceptions must be made, as in the case of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, who has contributed £500 to the Relief Fund. A singular difficulty, however, has arisen on the part of the sufferers themselves, many of whom prefer a lingering death by starvation to partaking of food that may have been cooked by unclean hands. Unclean, that is, in a metaphorical or religious sense—in other words, they fear to lose caste, and so refuse the food that would at least preserve their lives. However vexatious the result, it is impossible to avoid a certain feeling of respect for such sincerity and earnestness of belief.

Mr. Laing is still resting on his oars. His first duty, naturally, is to obtain a thorough knowledge of the situation of affairs, as a false step would just now be almost fatal. At the close of last year the cash balances in hand, though amounting to the large sum of twelve millions and a half sterling, were nearly two millions and a quarter less than on the 31st December, 1859. A large outlay has since been caused by the famine, and this necessity will continue in force for some months to come. At the same time it is found impossible under existing circumstances to introduce the License Duty into the suffering provinces, and for the same reason a large reduction will have to be made in the land tax, avowedly the chief source of revenue. On the other hand, some notable retrenchments are being made in various public departments. A more economical system may be expected, for instance, in the commissariat—the expenses of which in 1859-60 amounted to £6,490,000—now that officers indenting for supplies are held responsible until the charges thus occasioned have been audited. In Pegu, again, a saving of £350,000 per annum has been effected by reducing the military establishment to a reasonable standard and substituting an efficient police.

The "little war" in Sikkim has at length commenced, the enemy drawing first blood, but "the second event," the first knock down blow, being in favour of the assailants. In forcing the passage of the Runjeet one Sikh soldier was wounded; but a stockade on the opposite side was abandoned without the slightest show of resistance, and the Raja has fled into Thibet.

The Governor-general was expected at Benares about the 11th or 12th of February, and in Calcutta six or seven days later. His visit to Central India is represented as having produced an excellent effect, and everything at present portends a more honourable and even glorious conclusion to his tenure of viceregal power than could at one time have been anticipated.

A gentleman long and favourably known in Calcutta, and indeed throughout the Bengal Presidency, has received a well merited compliment from a number of well educated and highly respectable native gentlemen. Major D. L. Richardson has been presented in the Town Hall of Calcutta with a purse containing 4,000 rupees, and with an address that must have been very gratifying to his feelings.

The news from China and Japan is very satisfactory, and the future wears a cheerful and encouraging aspect. Lord Elgin's last act was taking formal possession of the ceded peninsula of Kowloon, and on the 22nd of January his Excellency left Hong Kong for England by way of Manila.

There is no longer any doubt of the early abolition of the Military College of Addiscombe. The Secretary of State for India has mentioned in his place in Parliament that after the close of the present term in June, 1861, no cadets for the Infantry of the Indian Army will be required to pursue their studies at that institution. Such cadets, however, as have not yet joined, but who hold nominations to Addiscombe, will be allowed to go up for the ordinary examination for direct infantry commissions, within six months after the next public examination at that college; that is, before the expiration of the present year. Should they fail to pass that not very difficult ordeal within the prescribed time, their nominations will be absolutely forfeited. The future fate of the building itself is, we believe, not yet decided.

Since our last publication Dr. Ballantyne has entered upon those duties for which his extensive acquirements and profound scholarship have so well prepared him. In his hands the post of Librarian to the India-office will lose nothing of its former dignity and usefulness. But while welcoming to a new stage this able Orientalist, we must not lose sight of the very efficient manner in which Mr. William Miller has discharged all the duties of this office since the death of the late Mr. H. H. Wilson. It has been under his supervision, and, we believe, with the gratuitous co-operation of his son, that the very valuable and extensive collection of books constituting the old East India House Library has been removed from Leadenhall-street to Cannon-row, and rearranged with as much exactness as if they had been collectively transported by the Genii of Aladdin's Lamp. This was a labour of no ordinary difficulty, but intelligence and assiduity have, as usual, overcome all impediments. But it does seem rather hard that after acting as Librarian for nearly twelvemonths in a manner to command the respect of all who were cognisant of his proceedings, Mr. Miller should suddenly be reduced to the humble designation of "Clerk to the Librarian." In such matters the name is everything, because the title of the office exercises a material influence on one's social position. We should be glad, therefore, to learn that a more elevated designation has been bestowed upon a very meritorious servant of the Home Department of the Indian Government.

BENGAL.

CAREER OF LORD DALHOUSIE.

Never, it appeared, had any nobleman directing the affairs of a great empire so completely allied himself with fortune as Lord Dalhousie during his tenure of power. Never was any public man placed more completely under her ban, almost from the moment he laid down the reins of office. Landing in India at a very critical epoch, at a time when, although we had beaten the Sikhs in the field, we had permitted their military strength to remain undiminished, Lord Dalhousie, intended to be the peaceful administrator, resolved before he came out, to develop the resources and to stimulate the industry of the country, found himself suddenly called upon to draw the sword. His conduct at this period was marked by vigour and decision of no common order. When it became clear to him that war could not be avoided he raised the enthusiasm of the whole army by a speech conceived in the spirit, and delivered with all the emphasis, of a Napier. Hastening at once to the frontier, he infused confidence everywhere. The vigour and determination of which he gave a personal example, influenced all with whom he came in contact, and no one left his presence without feeling that he was serving a man who, under all circumstances, must be obeyed. The prompt decision with which, after the crowning mercy of Goojerat he decided upon the annexation of the Punjab shewed an indifference to responsibility and a self-reliance worthy of a statesman. Nor can less praise be awarded to the manner in which he commenced the administration of the conquered provinces. Aware that his own presence would often be required in Calcutta, and that he could not always be on the spot to control and direct the new arrangements, he set himself heartily to work to select the ablest men in the country for the duty. The result showed how well qualified he was to read character and to distinguish between the real statesman and the man that merely required moulding to his hand. The Punjab war had scarcely concluded before Lord Dalhousie found himself face to face with one who was destined to be a more severe antagonist than even the powerful Shere Singh. The fiery hero who had conquered Sind came out, too late to retrieve the terrible day of Chillianwalla, and appeared on the stage in opposition to Lord Dalhousie. That two such men, both fiery, haughty, and determined, both resolved to have their own way, and each secretly regarding the other as an impediment in his path, could long work together in concord, was an absolute impossibility. After many provocations on both sides, a trifle at the last moment brought on a crisis, and to the great scandal of the country, the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief were avowed antagonists. But in this contest, fought out on both sides with equal asperity and bitterness, fortune was not false to her favourite. The victory remained with Lord Dalhousie, and he found himself at once, not only rid of a rival, but endowed with more absolute power than any of his predecessors. The Court of Directors were at his feet, and the most haughty minister of the Crown hesitated to accord ought but approval to an administration so strong and apparently so successful. It was in a too absolute confidence in the strength of that position that he commenced that system of internal spoliation destined to be fatal to the country. The success which had attended his great Punjab scheme induced him to make other attempts in the same direction. The adulation of the flatterers by whom it was his weakness to be surrounded was constantly sounding in his ears, and influenced partly, though unconsciously, by that, and partly by a conviction of the grandeur and magnificence of the policy, he determined to complete the work commenced by the Marquis of Wellesley, and to bring every province of India beneath the immediate control of the British. In carrying out this policy he suffered no obstacle to thwart, no consideration to stop him. The principles which guided the Malcolms and Mountstuart Elphinstones of a former period were openly derided. Every official placed in a situation of trust and responsibility who had the honesty to declare, in opposition to the sentiments of the Governor-General, that he still adhered to those rule and obsolete ideas, was removed to make way for a more supple courtier. When all had been prepared, the system was brought into operation. Jhansie first, Nagpore afterwards, evidenced the unflinching nature of Lord Dalhousie's resolve. A greater and more flagitious attempt was on the point of being executed in Oude, when the imprisonment of the masters of two British ships in Rangoon called his lordship's attention to other quarters. The imprisonment we have noted led to the second Burmese war, and to the incorporation of Pegu into the British Empire. It was a war entered into without justification, inasmuch as the Burmese authorities subscribed to all the conditions imposed upon them by Lord Dalhousie, and peace was only prevented in consequence of the aggression of the British Commodore. Of his acts Lord Dalhousie undertook the responsibility, and the war commenced. But if we are compelled to speak of that contest, as a war entered into without reason, and in defiance of right, we must do Lord Dalhousie the justice to add that he carried it out with all the vigour and skill of a statesman. If fortune still attended him it must be confessed that she could scarcely have resisted the earnest wooing of the Governor-General's ability and resolution. The germs of another empire were thus brought under the dominion of the British flag, and Lord Dalhousie, more than ever impressed with his mission, turned to other districts whereupon to exercise his address. He was constantly urged to this course by the specious sophistries of the unprincipled men by whom he had surrounded himself. Enviroined by the halo of Lord Dalhousie's brilliancy, these lacqueys imagined that they were driving the coach, and that the renown of their master would be reflected upon themselves. The annexation of Oude was the consequence—an untoward act, craftily performed, and bringing with it its own punishment. Lord Dalhousie had scarcely left the country before the reaction against his policy of spoliation commenced. It was like a hurricane or an earthquake. In a moment the showy but fragile fabric was entirely swept away, and with it, in a great measure, his own reputation. Fortune utterly abandoned him. At an hour when the statesman needs most the possession of all his faculties, Lord Dalhousie was compelled to absolute inaction, mental and bodily. He saw himself condemned by facts, but was not able to utter a word, even in palliation.

Unsparringly, however, as we have condemned and must ever condemn the great principles of Lord Dalhousie's administration, we must admit that he possessed many of the qualities of a great man. He was gifted with a capacity of a very high order for governing; he was thoroughly acquainted with human nature, and none knew better how to use the incentives by which the ordinary springs of human action are affected. He possessed an iron will, inflexible resolution, and was an able administrator. Had his intellect been as lofty as it was vigorous, he would have been one of the greatest governors the world has ever seen. Here, however, it failed him. He was a prey to the tale-bearer and the flatterer. His moral perceptions were not of a high order, and to this the general failure of his policy may be attributed. Still, viewing him all in all, especially in comparison with others of the same class, he may fairly be styled a great statesman. He finished his career when yet in the prime of manhood, and when, if health and life had been vouchsafed to him, he might have corrected many errors, and have achieved a greater reputation. With all his faults, he was yet a thorough Englishman; English in every sentiment, as well in the aim of his policy as in the devotion of his life to public duty. And though his brows will not, for the causes we have stated, be crowned with the greenest bays, England will not grudge the title of a great statesman to one who so thoroughly gave his life to her interests.—Englishman.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Self-government is the perfection of civil administration. The highest art of the statesman is to secure the greatest amount of public peace and happiness with the smallest expenditure of interference. The growth of nations, like that of children, must be towards self-government on the one hand, and towards the fusion of small self-governed communities into a great national organisation on the other. The difference between the East and the West is that the former has been arrested in its growth at the stage of the family, village, or caste; while, in the latter, families, villages, and castes have united to swell the majestic flow of nations and whole races towards the perfection of civilisation. The Aryan in his varieties of Celt, Saxon, Scandinavian and French Norman, has grown up into the great English people which owns one half the globe and will reform the other. His brother, who, ethnology tells us, went to the lands of the sun, and from the country of the five rivers spread South and East and West till arrested by the Vindhyas, has grown also, but into a form which is stunted, dwarfed and hideous. He grew from the family to the village community and there caste stamped him with an impress which has ever since caused him to wither. Allowing a little, a very little, for climate, it is Christianity which has made all the difference, which has made the English soil fertile in the growth of the expansive virtues, of the self-denying and yet self-helpful energies, while in India freedom, patriotism, nationality, virtue in its higher forms, are unknown. Greece was but one stage removed above the Hindoo type. From the village stage she grew to that of the city or petty State, and then perished before Rome, the impersonation of the self governing power, which needed only Christianity to make it also self-expansive and eternal. Heir to the seeds of her glory, and early adopting the Protestant, or self-reliant, form of Christianity, England has grown till she governs not only herself through the fiction of a constitution of which the monarch is the mere incarnation, but that Southern brother whom priestcraft arrested and dwarfed in his infancy till he has become like the hero of the fable, ever young but ever hideous. Europe has grown old, a new nation has been born in the far West, but Asia which made Europe what she is, is still at the same stage as when Solomon built his temple and sages dreamed of Om in the great forests of the old world.

And now England has been for a century master of India, and thinks it time to teach the priest-ridden and caste-bound Hindoo that there is a higher form of social and political action than that of the husband in his prison zenana, or the old "Punches" beneath the shade of the village tree. For a century has the Government of India been trying experiments in the art of ruling men, different and often opposite to each other in each province. In one the village system was considered the perfection of institutions. In another it was obliterated to make way for the rule of great landholders. In a third each of these was tried alternately. In a fourth all were alike scouted, and the State would do justice by dealing with each ryot individually. But whatever was the system the heel of the conqueror kept all down with an even pressure. If it did not crush the peasant at once, it bruised him with a heavier weight through the village community or the grasping landlord. While it kept down the dumb who could not cry, it equally kept down the powerful whose wealth it had created. It declared that property had no rights but one—to pay its dues to the State, while it winked at or shut its eyes to the illegal and oppressive exercise of these rights which are as inherent in property as life is in all organisms. It broke up the little fusion there was among classes before it came: it destroyed the village community and put no thing in its place, so that between the family and itself no middle power, no series of powers, was recognised, except the payer of the Land-tax. This great gulf which self-government bridged in Europe, yawned wide and turbulent in India and at last was bridged by the sepoy, the very class whom the State had nursed and petted. The rebellion of 1857 was a revolt, unconscious but no less real, of the mass which had been kept at the dead level of uniformity; was a cry, vague but no less terrible, for room to grow, as society has grown elsewhere. Even the dwarfed Aryan of the south kicked against his prison bars.

Lord Canning learned the lesson. Sir Henry Lawrence learned it long before, and because he would apply it to a nation of military priests just subdued, Lord Dalhousie gave the power to Sir John, who would have no tall poppies in the Punjab. Sir Robert Montgomery learned it from Sir Henry Lawrence and taught it to Lord Canning. The ousting of the talookdars caused the rebellion in Oude in 1857, their restoration led to its pacification in 1858. And when there was conferred on them limited magisterial and revenue power, and the same privilege was given to the chiefs of the Sikh nation, whom ten years of Sir John Lawrence's pressure had tamed, the era of self-government began in Indian history. Society, for the first time out of Bengal, reached a permanent soil out of which it might grow into a goodly tree, subject no longer to the incessant transplanting and the different treatment of successive lieutenant governors and collectors with theories which were often the fruit of prejudice and always the result of ignorance. And when the new policy grew, and the sole tenure on which the princes of India held their rights was made fealty to the British sovereign, a stability was given to infant society which will enable it to spring up vigorously until the work of Britain in India is done.

And now the privilege extended to the rebellious north has been given to peaceful Bengal. Seventy years ago property was created by Lord Cornwallis, and it has obeyed its natural laws of increase and influence. Only now is that influence recognised by the resolution of the Supreme Government to appoint honorary magistrates and justices of the peace in the city as well as rural districts. In the county districts of England and Wales alone, so long ago as 1831, there were 6,075 unpaid justices of the peace. Yet Bengal has three times the population of England, and when the experiment of honorary magistrates was tried in 1858, had but twenty-nine, of whom only one was a native of the soil. Now the principle has been conceded that up to a certain limit, almost the same as in England and quite sufficient to begin with—the limit, that is, of an assistant magistrate—the men of intelligence and property in it shall govern Bengal, and shall administer justice in Calcutta. Under these powers they should "be competent to receive complaints in all except heinous offences including a fray, to issue summons, warrants, and subpoenas, to take evidence, to punish up to fifteen days' imprisonment and Rs. 50 fine, and in cases of theft with one month's further imprisonment in lieu of stripes, and to refer to the magistrate or deputy magistrate for final orders cases requiring a severer measure of punishment." It is unnecessary to allude to police powers, as by the time the system comes into play, the new constabulary should be in existence, and that will be subject only to its own officers and they to the district officer. But if the scheme is to succeed at once the new magistrates should be made subject not, as Lord Canning's Minute suggests, to the magistrate in appeal cases, but directly to the commissioner. The Government should learn a lesson from the interference of Mr. Chapman, Magistrate of Rajshaye, with Mr. Deverell, an honorary magistrate, in 1858, which the lieutenant-governor pronounced altogether unwarranted. In Calcutta the self-governing element should be introduced into municipal affairs, not merely as in Bombay for the election of a paid municipal commission, but for the creation of a town council or mayoralty. The objection that European society is too fluctuating would be met by yearly election. Similar bodies, such as the Chamber of Commerce, thrive in spite of this.

Apart from the great result which we have, somewhat abstractly, noticed, in the natural development of society caused by the scope given to the self-governing principle, the creation of honorary justices of the peace will have these important consequences.

When "interlopers," native or European, are once called on to administer the law, they will not tolerate the abuses which have made it a by-word in Bengal. They will procure a reform in the whole judicial administration at a more rapid rate than hitherto.

The distinction between the official and non-official classes will cease to have any meaning, and class asperities will be thus removed.

As by conceding the right of adoption we have created a nobility in the higher class, so, by fostering the right of self-government, we establish a standard of respectability in the middle class, of which the moral element, and not as hitherto that of wealth or caste, is the basis.—Friend of India.

THE GREAT TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY AND ITS SUPERINTENDENT.

Amongst the public duties which devolve on us, there are none more pleasant than to trace the closing career of successful public men. Colonel Sir Andrew Scott Waugh, Surveyor-general of India, and Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, will resign his appointments and leave India in five weeks. His successes in after life were presaged by the victories he earned at Adliscombe. Passing through that institution in less than half the ordinary period, yet first of his term and leading in the majority of subjects,—specially recommended to the notice of the Court of Directors, and by Sir Charles Pasley to the chief engineer of Bengal, Lieutenant Waugh landed in India on the 25th May, 1829. When assistant of the Foundry, Fort William, he volunteered and successfully removed the roof of St. Peter's Church. From the time of his appointment to a second assistantship in the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India his talents and energies were continuously devoted to one special profession. Little more than two years after his nomination, he was promoted to first assistant, and a few months subsequently he was made Astronomical Assistant to the late distinguished Surveyor-general of India. Throughout this period of his services his name is mentioned in terms of the highest commendation, "and indeed," writes Colonel Everest, "I would not hesitate to stake my professional reputation on the fact, that if your honourable court had the whole world at your disposal, wherefrom to select a person whose sum total of practical skill and theoretical attainments, powers of endurance, and all other essential qualities were a maximum, Lieutenant Waugh would be the very person of your choice." After this it is needless to add that Lieutenant Waugh was duly nominated Surveyor-general of India and Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey.

To consult a map and elicit therefrom the required information is to claim a very ordinary convenience. But beyond the fact, how many a suggestion, how many a sympathy may the inquirer experience, who considers for a moment at what cost of human endurance and energies the compilation before him was obtained! That ridge, this stream, were sketched from an altitude full 20,000 feet above sea level, where respiration itself was painful and slumber not to be counted. Those angles were measured over miles of forest and swamp, where deadly fevers prostrated scores of his companions, and the surveyor himself, though stricken by the plague, though far separated from medical aid and even the sympathy of a countryman, yet, carefully tending his more feeble native comrades, returned to civilized life with an ample field book and a shattered constitution. True men have frozen and died, and forty out of some one hundred and fifty were once buried in and around the swampy forests of Gorruckpore; but such circumstances are not usually noted on maps. To rise early and know but little sleep, to roam a wanderer over the face of the earth, between Karakorum in Thibet, Bombay, Cape Comorin and Madras, is merely to fulfil the ordinary duties inseparable from the life of an Indian surveyor. But whatever these trials, Lieut. Waugh had had ample and painful experience of them, so that in these respects he succeeded to no new difficulty.

Sir Andrew Waugh has advanced the Triangulation of India by no less than 316,000 square miles, that is over a surface nearly equivalent to three times the area of England and Wales, Scotland and Ireland put together. And of this portion 94,000 square miles of country have been topographically surveyed, with precision, truthfulness, and wonderful beauty. The introduction of this system of surveying into India, based as it is on accurate principles, is also entirely due to him. He has been present at all the bases, or fundamental lines, which have been measured in India with Colonel Colby's compensating apparatus. And of the seven such lines now determined, the major number have been executed under his personal direction. These lines afford both linear checks, and, as implied by their designation, furnish the original elements for length. They are necessarily conducted with all the precision that science and skill can compass, and the extent to which this object has been attained may be signified by the fact that two such independent measurements, executed under the orders of the late Surveyor-general, disagreed from each other per hundred feet by only .006 of an inch. The probable error in the distance named may be taken at a smaller quantity than the thickness of this leaf of paper! It is to him, too, that we owe the discovery of the highest known mountain in the world, Mount Everest, 29,002 feet above the sea level. He leaves his department in a high state of efficiency, with more than one disciple able and worthy to follow in his footsteps.

Nor can it be said that his services are unacknowledged, either by Government or by the learned societies. The thanks of Government were awarded to him on eight occasions, and the acknowledgments of the Home authorities in thirteen instances, while his name appears on the list of members of nearly all the great scientific societies of Europe. With these numerous and varied distinctions, as Commandant of her Majesty's Bengal Engineers, as Surveyor-general of India, and Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey; finally, with the honour of Knighthood conferred on him by her Majesty the Queen, Colonel Sir Andrew Scott Waugh leaves the land where he has laboured for one score and twelve years, with a wreath of laurel both fresh and green.—Friend of India.

The following scale of food has been found to be that most suited for the class of people who are entitled to relief; for men and women, attā 8 chittaks, dal 2 chittaks, salt 6 masas, and 1 chilli; for children able to run about, attā 6 chittaks, dal 1 chittak, salt, &c., as before; for children in their mother's arms, attā 2 chittaks (this may be considered as sustenance to the mother.) The work of distribution takes from two to three hours, beginning at eight in the morning. It is superintended by three members of the committee. No difficulties have been experienced in regard to serving out cooked rice.

TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—Government has, very properly, directed that every telegraph office in India be shut on Sundays and Christian holidays from 8 morning to 4 afternoon, and that a double charge be levied on messages received for transmission between 6 and 8 A.M. and 4 and 6 P.M. of these days. Of 13,644 messages sent from the Calcutta office in the first five months of 1860, only 1047 were on Sunday, of which 63 were Government messages, 235 sent by Europeans, and 749 by natives.

PUBLIC WORKS.—Government shows itself to be thoroughly in earnest in providing occupation by which the starving population may obtain means of subsistence, in having sanctioned the expenditure of nearly eight lakhs and three-quarters of rupees for works of public utility to be undertaken between the Sutlej and Jumna. Nearly half of this large sum will be devoted to what may be justly styled "famine relief works," seeing that their execution would have been delayed until the treasury was in a more prosperous condition, had not the necessity of finding employment for the poor people been paramount to other considerations. A large proportion of these works are within the limits of the Delhi division, and consist of repairs on the Delhi and Muttra, and Delhi and Bawarra roads, estimated to cost two lakhs and a-half; Bund irrigation, and Bheema Pass road, each Rs. 40,000. Umballa and Kalka road Rs. 70,000, Delhi and Sirsa road Rs. 12,000, and towards the building of the Lawrence Institute at Delhi Rs. 30,000. The works upon which the other half of the funds will be expended, although not originally designed with the view of relieving the present distress, have nevertheless had a larger amount allotted to them than otherwise would have been the case, and will be pushed forward just now in order to furnish additional employment to those in need of it. They comprise barrack accommodation within the enclosure of the palace at Delhi at an outlay of one lakh and a quarter; remodelling the Delhi branch of the Western Jumna Canal one lakh and a-half; and constructing large bridges on the Grand Trunk Road over streams near Umballa one lakh and a-half. Independent of the various sums we have mentioned, Sir Robert Montgomery has authorised the disbursement of 1,50,000 during the first four months of this year, within the distressed districts, so as to find work for some of the poor at their own doors. But even this is not all, as the local funds are still disposable to a large amount, first in repairing and metalling the Grand Trunk road, estimated to cost about 5 lakhs, and next, in numerous necessary works in the Delhi, Hissar, and Cis-Sutlej divisions, aggregating about one lakh and a-half more.—Lahore Chronicle.

MOHAMMED, PROTECTOR OF THE CHRISTIANS.—A correspondent furnishes the Lahore Chronicle with a curious document entitled—"The patent of Mahomet which he granted to the monks of Mount Sinai and to Christians in general." The original was considered by Sultan Selim too precious to remain in the possession of the monks of Mount Sinai, and he gave them a duplicate of it, keeping the original himself. The authenticity of it, says the correspondent, may be established by reference to the Greek, British, or other consuls at Constantinople. The patent consists of eighteen short sections, of which the first eleven refer to the monks and the other seven to Christians in general. The chief injunctions regarding the treatment of the latter are that Mahometans are not to molest those who have a veneration for the books that are sent from God, but rather to be kind to them and hinder every one from molesting them; that a Mussulman is not to prevent a Christian wife from practising her religion; and that no one shall bear arms against them, but on the contrary, the Mussulman shall wage war for them. The document is dated in the second year of the Hegira.

ULWUR.—The State Secretary has given positive instructions for the immediate making over the wardship of the young Rajah of Ulwur and the Government of the State to the Council of Regency, and desires that the agent (Lieut. Impey) shall confine himself simply to giving his counsel, and prohibits all other interference, reporting everything to his own Government. The State Secretary also desires that this should not be hastily done, but that the agent should withdraw with discretion. He also advises that the young Rajah should be accustomed to power by degrees.

THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.—The ladies of Calcutta are subscribing in aid of the Dalhousie Institute, and the subscription list is headed by Lady Canning, who has subscribed Rs. 200.

JUBBULPORE, Jan. 31.—I will try and give you a small description of all the grand doings whilst the Governor-general was here. On the 10th instant the Begum of Bhopal arrived with a retinue of 5,000 followers; they were encamped about four miles from this. On the 11th his lordship arrived, and he had some 10,000 with him; on the same day Holkar, the Maharajah of Indore, arrived; he had some 6,000 with him, and there were several others of less note, with followers of a smaller number—in all, I should say, about 40,000—300 elephants, 1,000 camels, and horses innumerable. This great increase of population of course increased the price of provisions considerably. We went to see the Governor-general's camp—in fact, I should first tell you we saw him arrive. It was a pretty sight, but not so grand as I had anticipated, as he had no elephants with state howdahs, as I fancied he would have. His Lordship and Lady Canning arrived on horseback, the body guard in front and behind, several companies of different regiments accompanying, and on entering the station the cavalry and infantry formed themselves in lines on either side of the road. He was met by the brigadier in full uniform. It was at the best a motley group. The grand durbar was held on the 14th, when Holkar, the Rajah of Bijawur and the adopted son of the late Rajah of Nowgong, with many others, were presented. Holkar had, of course, precedence, and he, on account of his supposed lukewarmness during the mutiny, had what is called a quiet wigging; he had some very handsome presents made him, but, as usual with these people, he was not satisfied; he wanted more territory, but did not get it. He went in grand state; his party passed by our place, so that we had a full view of him. We went to see them go in state, and as we could not get near the Governor-general's tent we soon came back again, and on our way back we had a view of his favourite horses; I cannot tell how many, but there were many; they were all most beautifully caparisoned. Many of them had ornaments of gold, with plumes of birds of paradise feathers on their heads, tipped with gold, some with large gold chains around their necks, bangles of gold on their legs, and the velvet saddle cloths were beautifully embroidered; others were dressed similarly with silver. His soldiers, the lancers especially, looked very pretty; their dress was blue and silver, turbans to match, and on their lances flags of gold cloth. These, as you may suppose, looked most dazzling in the sun; there were many of his chuprassies with gold and silver sticks, and one had a gold mace, which he brought for me to see; it was about two and a-half feet long, with a lion's head, and it was some three inches in diameter; this was pure gold; it was of course not solid, which would have been too heavy for me to lift. As it was, it was a good weight. His elephant with state howdah was superb; the animal was an immense one, the howdah was silver washed with gold, and ornamented with crimson velvet; on his head he had a large plate of solid gold, with ornaments forming ear-rings. We were told it was worth £20,000. He, you may suppose, was handsomely dressed; his jewels were worth £50,000 or £60,000; it was indeed a gorgeous sight. I forgot to mention that immediately behind him was his brother on his elephant, similarly attired, but in lieu of gold, silver. It is needless for me to attempt to describe it minutely, as it would require the pen of some able man to do that, so I will not attempt to describe the procession of those of less note, as they will not bear mentioning the same day.—Englishman.

DELHI, Feb. 1.—Head quarters camp moved from the encamping ground on the morning of the 30th, and the Commander-in-chief left the same evening for Agra by dawk, accompanied by Colonel Arthur Becher and an aide-de-camp. I suppose we may expect his Excellency to rejoin his camp at Kurnal about the 4th or 5th. One good thing was done during the chief's visit—the boundary of the new cantonment inside the city was settled. His Excellency was highly pleased with all he saw, and approved of the old line marked out from the Delhi to the Cashmere gate for the cantonment. It is now probable that some good houses may be built by native speculators, and not before they are wanted. The uncertainty about this prevented them from commencing the work earlier. Some extensive clearances are now going on from the Calcutta gate towards the Cabul gate, to make room for the line of railway. This and other road works afford employment to some thousands of coolies, male and female, who would otherwise suffer from the scarcity. It is pitiable to witness the amount of wretchedness presented in an evening's drive; a walk is almost impossible, owing to the number of beggars, whose urgent appeals for food are heartrending. I myself saw a poor starved child fall dead last evening; he was endeavouring to run up to my conveyance to beg, but could not get so far. I made inquiries as soon as I saw him fall, and found that his troubles were over. I do not think the charity kitchens established here effect the object for which they were intended. Great care should be observed in distributing the food. As it is, I fear that poor, miserable children, unable to keep what is given, are deprived of the food by the stronger men and women; unless it be so, I cannot account for the hundreds of living skeletons in the form of native children thronging most of the public thoroughfares. In the Darceba this is particularly observable, and is the more marked by the contrast which a huge fat Brahminess bull, the well-fed pet of the Bunniyahs, presents to them.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—The two companies of the Calcutta Volunteers have elected their officers with great wisdom and unanimity. They are—

1st Company.	2nd Company.
Capt. Picher.	Capt. Stewart.
Lieut. Wray.	Lieut. Abbott.
Ensign Adams.	Ensign Bruce.
Sergeant Walker.	Sergeant Payne.
" Lee.	" Nicholls.
" Cowan.	" Carpenter.
" DeSails.	" Barham.
Corporal Greene.	Corporal Stanford.
" Whitten.	" Robb.
" Wilson.	" Wright.
" Harrison.	" Radclyffe.

Honorary surgeon Dr. Fayrer. Sir Bartle Frere has been appointed honorary colonel. It is to be regretted that Lord Canning's policy has made it impossible for him in any way to identify himself with the movement. Both companies are now under the command of Captain Malleson.

SOLDIERS AS WATCHMEN.—Government has decided that henceforth regular soldiers should not be employed on the duties of mere watchmen, and is of opinion that the enforcement of this rule should be commenced at once at every military station throughout India. The Commander-in-Chief is accordingly instructed to see that every military guard in cantonments, except those required for purely military purposes, is relieved, and "to arrange with the civil authorities for the substitution of police guards, the departments (whether Commissariat, Public Works, or other) requiring such special police guard having to pay for the same, being debited with the expense, a bill for which should in every case be sent in for counter signature monthly to the head of the department requiring the watchmen, in the same manner as has been lately directed in the case of expenditure incurred in the Commissariat Department on account of other departments." While expressing our hearty approval of this we would ask what reduction in the strength of the native army will be effected in consequence? Mr. Wauchope has done the same in Calcutta, but the native army instead of being reduced in proportion has been actually increased.—Friend of India.

A NEW SANITARIUM.—Dr. Balfour, the Dinapore Inspector General of Hospitals, has drawn the attention of Government to the hill of Moah Gurrea in the Sonthal Pergunnahs, about 35 miles to the left of the Rajmahal branch of the East India Railway. It is of the elevation of Burhee (1,670 feet), on the Grand Trunk Road, abounds in water, stone, bamboo, and grass, has a fertile soil for cotton and tobacco, and has splendid sites for barracks. Dr. Balfour recommends the spot as a military sanitarium.

DARJEELING, Feb. 3.—The bridge of rafts has been thrown over the Runjeet, and we are now in possession of the Sikkim side of the river. The advance of the Europeans took place on the 30th. Colonel Gawler, with four companies of the 6th making a detour, so as to cross the river higher up and take them in the rear, whilst the Sikhs and sappers covered by the artillery, threw their bridge over and attacked them in front. Yesterday morning, as soon as the mist cleared up, the artillery opened fire on their principal stockade, to which the enemy made no reply, so the working parties advanced and commenced carrying the rafts to the river side. About a quarter of an hour they worked unmolested, when the Sikkimites opened fire from a small stockade on the right, and hit one Sikh in the shoulder; a few shrapnel and shell, thrown with great precision, soon moved them; and although they fired now and then from different parts of the hill, no further annoyance occurred, and the bridge was finished about eleven o'clock. Nothing as yet had been seen or heard of Colonel Gawler's party, but they were now seen coming down towards the river to the left, having looked in vain for either the stockades or enemy; they had a most fatiguing march of it. The Sikkimites made a complete bolt of it, leaving nothing behind them. Their stockades were strong, and without the shells might have given some trouble. The Sikhs in two parties made a short dour up the hillside, but nothing was seen; they destroyed the stockades they came across. The whole of the troops are here on the Darjeeling side of the river, where the standing camp is formed, a picket being left on the other side to guard the bridge. The whole of the available force will most likely start to-morrow on their way to Toonilong. Little or no resistance is expected. The Dewan of Sikkim is at Mainchee with 800 men, among whom there are 100 Thibetans, who are considered warlike; the rest are mere cultivators. The Sikkimites have divided into two parties—the Bootias and Lepchas. The former want to place on the throne the legitimate son of the rajah, and the latter an illegitimate son by a slave girl. The Dewan named Mangoy having married a daughter of the slave girl, is inclined to support the illegitimate son. The Bootias are all opposed to the Dewan, and will most probably fraternise with the British force as soon as it crosses the frontier. There is a second Dewan, who is also opposed to the first; it is thought that he will also join the British. Mr. Eden intends marching against the Dewan immediately; but it is understood that before moving he will, in form, make certain demands on the Rajah, but as the Rajah is in Thibet, he is not likely to get an answer to the purpose. Rinchimpong, the intended new station in the interior of Sikkim, is in latitude 27° 10', about fifteen geographical miles north of Darjeeling, and thirty-one from the plains of Bengal; the road by Saigong from Darjeeling is thirty-five miles. It is situated on a spur of the Himalaya running from the Hee mountain, and is 8,000 feet above the sea, bounded on the north by the Kelait river, and on the east by the great Runjeet; on the south by the Pisch river. The proposed site for the station is 5,600 feet high, the highest point being 8,150 feet. The spot chosen is in the form of an amphitheatre, with a North-West exposure, which gives it a magnificent view to the north of the Kelait. The mean temperature may be taken at 60 deg.—Englishman.

MAJOR DAVIS, commandant Jhansie divisional military police, has been selected by his Honour the Lieutenant-governor, N.W.P., for laying down the boundary line of the new territory to be made over to Scindiah on 1st May next. Captain Swiney, commandant of the Jaloun military police, has been appointed to act as divisional commandant during the time Major Davis is employed on this special duty.

INVALIDS.—The British ship Malabar has been engaged for the conveyance of about 110 invalids to England. The British ship Gosforth, bound for London via the Cape, embarked her invalids on the 4th February, and left Calcutta by steam on the 5th.

SIR ROBERT NAPIER.—Our special telegram from Bombay announces the appointment of Sir Robert Napier to the Supreme Council, a selection which, we believe, will be justified by the unanimous approval of all the good soldiers of the Indian army. Irrespective of General Napier's personal qualities, the choice is a satisfactory one, as showing that, for once, distinguished conduct in the field is held to confer higher claims than half-a-dozen years' indifferent management of a post in the secretariat, or a prolonged residence at a native court. Sir James Outram, indeed, was distinguished both as a soldier and statesman, but the Indian army has been too often represented in the Government by men who, though able enough in their proper capacities, have been only soldiers in name, and have wanted both the knowledge of military subjects and the prestige of a military career which are requisite to give the military member due weight in the Council. The new member possesses these qualities in a high degree, and super-adds to them the energy of character and largeness of views which procured him his deservedly high reputation as chief engineer in the Punjab, and which have contributed so greatly to his success during his subsequent military occupations. Happily for the administration of the Lawrences, while the rest of India groaned under the incubus of the military board, they had Colonel Napier for their chief engineer, and the result was that in half-a-dozen years the Punjab had in all respects of material progress outstripped the rest of India, and is now about as much ahead of Bengal as Kent of Kamschatka. Active and energetic himself, Sir Robert Napier possesses in a large degree the happy faculty—a true attribute of genius—of inspiring those around him with his own energy and public spirit. The spirit which distinguished the whole engineer department in the Punjab while he was at the head of it was a remarkable instance of one man's vigour pervading a whole service, while the accounts of all who served under him in China are unanimous in their expressions of affectionate admiration of his gallantry and skill. But Sir R. Napier enters on his new office at a time when it will try the highest qualities. He has, as the representative of the Indian army, to guard its interests while passing through the critical process of amalgamation, and he has also to regulate the extent to which the interest of the army must be sacrificed to the still graver interest of the State. The present army must be reduced, and reduced largely; and reduction means stoppage of promotion, abolition of appointments, and generally, pecuniary loss and hardship to a great many individuals. But all real friends of the army must wish these reductions to be made, and made quickly; the tree must be pruned if it is not to decay and crumble away altogether. It is not pleasant, however, to wield the knife on such occasions, and if Sir Robert Napier succeed in bringing the army within proper dimensions, and in retaining his present popularity, he will be a fortunate man. Sir Robert Napier, though he has now reached almost the highest post an Indian officer can hope to hold, has scarcely been a lucky man in his profession, considering his services. The Lucknow campaign, in which he held a conspicuous part, first as Outram's chief of the staff, afterwards as chief engineer, though followed by a shower of brevet promotions, left him as they found him—a colonel in the army. Subsequently, while commanding the Gwalior division, he, with a small cavalry force, overthrew Tantia Topee and captured all his guns, and afterwards with a handful of the 14th dragoons he surprised and dispersed the rebels under Feroze Shah, who had till then evaded all pursuits, two actions as brilliant as any in the war, but which passed without notice; and the most prominent officer in the China campaign has not yet received any recognition of his services. We believe, however, that this last will not be much longer delayed.—Englishman.

MR. BELCHAMBERS, of the Supreme Court, has succeeded Mr. Wells as clerk to Sir Mordaunt Wells, in consequence of the latter gentleman proceeding to England.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—As under a recent Act the French Government are allowed to export coolies from India in number of which it is required the proportion of women need not be more than a fourth, Sir Charles Wood has extended the rule to exporters of labourers to British colonies. At the same time the latter are directed to cease no effort to obtain a larger proportion of females. Sir Charles Wood's despatch says:—"I consider the importation of a large number of women as the greatest possible benefit, not to the coolies only, but to the colony itself and to the colonial landholders, as it tends to convert an immigration of migratory labourers into a resident labouring population. That the French can but partially obtain this advantage is no reason whatever why the English should abandon it."

THE BISHOP'S SCHOOLS IN THE HIMALAYAS.—The Bishop of Calcutta has decided on recommending Simla as the site of the first school to be founded for the children of European and Eurasian residents in India of small incomes. He has sent home a statement of the urgent necessity of the institution, and the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge has headed the English subscription list by a donation of 500*l*. He has also prepared a similar statement for circulation in India, but has been advised to delay its publication till the pressure of the famine is over, as charity is now naturally devoted chiefly to the relief of that pressing need. But preliminary inquiries have been made about the selection and purchase of ground at Simla by three gentlemen requested by the bishop to act for him in the matter, the Rev. J. N. Parker, principal of the Lawrence Asylum, Mr. Bernard, assistant commissioner of Simla, and Dr. Townsend, civil surgeon.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.—The Governor-general has conferred magisterial and revenue powers on Major A. Orr, Captain Bunbury, Mr. G. Schilling, Captain J. Hearsey, and Baboo Dhukinaran-jun Mookerjya, landholders in Oude.

THE NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL has subscribed the munificent sum of Rs. 5,000, and his Dewan the sum of Rs. 250, towards the relief of their countrymen who are suffering from the effects of famine in the North-West Provinces.

COMMISSARIAT DEPARTMENT.—From the publication of the order on the Commissariat Department we find that the expenditure in 1859-60 amounted to the enormous sum of £6,490,000. This extravagance in the Department, which has been carried on for so many years, will in future be prevented by Government rendering the officers who make the demands responsible for them.

SHIPS ASHORE.—The American ship Star of Peace, Hale, master, from Calcutta to Bombay, with Government beer, &c., was on shore near Shipgunge on her way down the river, but has proceeded to sea; cargo supposed to have shifted, as she left the Sand Heads with a list. The French ship Sindbad, for Havre, was on shore, has been surveyed, and apparently has sustained no damage.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT, DARJEELING.—It has been decided by the Supreme Government that criminal cases committed by the magistrate of Darjeeling shall be heard by the superintendent. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal had recommended that judicial officers on leave at Darjeeling should be asked to undertake this duty; but the Supreme Government were of opinion that it should not be left to the mere chances of a judge being at the place on leave, and decided as above.

COLONEL BAIRD SMITH is deputed by Government to the North-West Provinces, to examine the state of the districts suffering from drought, to report on them, and to suggest modes of assisting which will benefit the Government as well as the people.

LIEUTENANT MORTON, the magistrate of Goalpara, has been directed to proceed on an expedition into the Garrows.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The total amount of specie sent to the East in the ten years up to 1860 was, from Great Britain,—gold, £7,270,281; silver, £74,936,452. And in the eight years up to 1860 from the Mediterranean ports,—gold, £1,791,760; silver, £14,361,288; total, £98,359,781.

HER MAJESTY'S 37TH REGIMENT.—The British ships Matilda Atheling and Lady Ann are taken up for the conveyance of H.M.'s 37th regiment to England.

FREIGHTS.

To London, £3. to £4.
To Liverpool, £3. to £3. 10s.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 8).—The market continues depressed under repeated unfavourable accounts from Europe and America; but as stocks of most staples are very moderate their prices are not very seriously affected, and as the native dealers are still showing firmness, shippers do not show much disposition to operate freely.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Feb. 8).—Accounts from the Upper Provinces are still very unfavourable; famine prevails almost throughout the North-West, and there is little or no business doing in the principal marts. As subscriptions are being freely raised here and in several other places for the relief of the distressed, and news being reported to have fallen in some parts of the Provinces, we expect in a short time hence to hear of a revival of trade. The market at present is devoid of actual demand or speculative inquiry; the little business that has been done and is now doing in Piece Goods is by the Affghans, and for immediate local requirement. In Mule Twist little also has been done; but as the weavers are now returning to their looms, we expect the market soon to revive. Metals have engaged a little inquiry.

CANNANORE, Jan. 2.—Yesterday being New Year's-day, the officers of H.M.'s 18th regiment Madras Native Infantry gave a splendid banquet at their mess-house to the officers and ladies of the staff of H.M.'s 66th regiment of foot, and 3rd regiment Pallamcottah Light Infantry. Dancing was kept up until the small hours this morning. Arrived at Cannanore last week by H.M.S. Dalhousie from Madras: Ensigns J. S. Bruff, T. B. Turner, A. F. Wilkinson, and L. Smith, to do duty with H.M.'s 66th Regiment; Sub-conductor Bennett, 24 men, and 4 women and children of H.M.'s 66th Regiment. Departed from Cannanore to Bombay for embarkation for Europe: Major W. T. Gordon, H.M.'s 66th Regiment, on furlough. Lieutenant C. J. T. Duesbury, in charge of invalids and time-expired men of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, Lieutenant F. Tyrrell, of the 3rd Regiment Light Infantry, on sick leave. The following promotion by purchase last week in H.M.'s 66th Regiment:—Lieutenant A. Austin to Captain and Ensign T. Gambell to Lieutenant, vice Captain C. J. K. Gore, permitted to resign by the sale of his commission. A defalcation of eight thousand rupees was discovered last week in the treasury of the Civil Court at Tellicherry; the Shroff (a Brahmin) in charge has bolted. The constabulary force has been sent in every direction, but the Brahmin is as yet non est inventus.—Englishman.

MALABAR COAST, Jan. 11.—The Brahmin Shroff of the Session Court at Tellicherry, whom I mentioned in my last as having levanted, leaving the cash chest minus 8,000 rupees, is now at Goa, on his way to Bhooj, in the territories of the Gaicowar. A constable and two subundies have been sent to apprehend him at Goa, i. e., if the Portuguese authorities will deliver him up. The defalcation in the treasury has been reported, and the mandate of the Sudder Court is, that the Sessions Judge and the Court Sheristadar should make good the deficiency. The ship Windsor Castle, from Bombay to London, arrived at Cannanore the day before yesterday, and left yesterday. The following are the passengers who have embarked from Cannanore:—Captain and Mrs. W. Serres, 51st Regiment N. I., and six children; Captain and Mrs. Alcock, Bombay army, four children and European servant; Mrs. Major J. F. Stevens, 18th Regt. N.I., two children and European servant; Rev. C. Muller, German Mission Society, four children of Captain Magrath, paymaster of Cannanore; Mr. Zeigler, band master H.M.'s 66th Regt., and wife. The two companies of H.M.'s 66th Regt. at Malbapooram and Calicut, under the command of Captains C. Perrin and R. H. Paget, are to be relieved by the end of this month by other two companies from the head quarters of the same corps from Cannanore. Lieut. and Adjutant J. V. Morris, of the 18th Regt. N.I., has had his certificate for sick leave to Europe confirmed by a board of medical officers at Cannanore.—Englishman.

HYDERABAD, Jan. 10.—On Monday last, the 14th, Colonel Davidson was at the Nizam's durbar, and made over the districts to the Nizam, who appointed two of his especial talookdars, Noosrut Jung, and Husun Moonuvur Khan, to the charge of them, with orders to take possession immediately. The next day his highness closeted Shums-ool-oomrah and his son Ekhtadar-ool-moolk, and on the day following admitted Mookhtar-ool-moolk, the minister, Rajah Nurendeer, the Peshkar, and Oomdat-ool-moolk, the eldest son of Shums-ool-oomrah. The Nizam seeing the latter in conjunction with his two ministers would lead to the conclusion that his opinions were concurrent with the ministers', and his seeing this party at all would appear to indicate that the great Ameer Shums-ool-oomrah and his son had influenced the Nizam to see his minister and to take his opinion as to any arrangement which his Highness might be disposed to make before he decided it definitively. The only result we hear of as proceeding from this interview is, that his Highness has directed the talookdars to defer taking possession for three days. The eldest son of Shums-ool-oomrah did not attend the audience given to the ministers, either as a spy or to prompt his highness's replies, but as the minister's friend; rather, I should say, as concurring in his views. The proceedings of the Nizam are slow and vacillating, so it may be long before I have anything conclusive to relate with regard to those estates.—Englishman.

BURMAH.—We (Englishman) have received papers from Rangoon and Maulmain up to the 31st January. The amalgamation of the provinces is expected to take place on the 1st of April, when great and important changes are looked for. The only subjects which seem to occupy public attention are the police and the forests. The former, according to the local journals, is in the last stage of disorganisation and inefficiency, and the administration of the latter calls for all sorts of reform. Innumerable letters appear on the subject, but the pith of the matter is, that the merchants of Maulmain connected with the timber trade have presented a petition to the Supreme Government, complaining of the insecurity of the frontiers, whereby the foresters are prevented from obtaining their supplies for the season. The elopement case at Maulmain has assumed a more serious aspect. The Friend of Burma says that it has more the form of an abduction, and that a military court of inquiry has been ordered to investigate the matter. A military officer and the wife of a road overseer are the parties concerned. In opposition to this slight advantage obtained by the "immoral," the missionaries are pluming themselves on some conversions recently made in Pegu, amongst others that of a Subadar of a N. I. regiment. This man made a public profession of his faith, was incontinent sent to Coventry by his fellows, and it was only after the interference of the colonel that they consented to associate with him. A rough estimate has been made of the Income-tax for the town and suburbs of Rangoon. The amount shown is from 60,000 to 70,000 rupees a-year. Captain Sladen has taken over charge of the office of extra assistant commissioner at Maulmain. Major General Carthew has been appointed to the command of the Pegu division. The ship Catherine Apcar, bound for Calcutta, ran aground in the Maulmain river, and her pilot has been punished for his carelessness.

CINCHONA NURSERIES.—The Madras Times understands that Dr. Macpherson has been sent by the local Government to the Neilgherries to select sites for the experimental cinchona nurseries and plantations there. Dr. Macpherson had on his recent visit to Java many opportunities of inspecting the extensive operations in progress in that island towards the acclimatisation of this most valuable tree within these tropics, and it is with reference to the success which has attended the labours of the Dutch for the last few years that the Government have hopes that Dr. Macpherson will be able to afford valuable advice regarding the localities suitable for the growth of the plant on the hill slopes within the Madras presidency.

THE PEGU REPORT.—Government has published the Pegu report of Mr. Temple and Col. Bruce. At present the military force in Pegu costs Rs. 64,65,000. As Capt. Duncan is now organising the new constabulary there the force will be reduced so as to cost Rs. 29,95,000. This is a saving of 35 lakhs. That force will be thus divided. Rangoon.—One company artillery, one wing European and one regiment native infantry. Moulmein.—On regiment native infantry. Tonghoo.—One company artillery, with four mountain guns attached, for pony draught, one wing European and one regiment native infantry. Thyetmvo.—One horse battery, one regiment European, and two regiments native infantry. The men of the regiments withdrawn will be allowed to volunteer for the three line corps which remain, so that the strength of each shall not exceed 800 men. If the Madras Government prefer it the corps in Burmah are to be local. The commanding officers of the native corps will provide accommodation for them. Thus one real and economical reform has been carried out. The Government thank Mr. Temple and Col. Bruce for their "clear and practical" report.

MAJOR CARTER, the father of the young lady who recently met her death on the parade ground of Bangalore, writes a letter to the Bangalore Herald to show that his daughter was free from blame or want of forethought in being where she was at the time the Artillery came down upon her. Her pony was a very quiet one and she strictly followed her father's injunctions as to the safe limits of her ride. The progress of the guns was checked by the sad accident, and if this had not been the case another lady a little further on would have been killed. Major Carter says he sent in a written statement of the whole affair, of which he was an eye-witness, during the time the court was sitting, and on the following day wrote officially, requesting to be called upon as a witness, but was verbally told the proceedings were closed. From the evidence the verdict is disgraceful to the Court of Inquiry and the occurrence to the Brigadier.

WYNAAD.—The crop being nearly all secured throughout the district enables us (Cochin Courier) to judge with a fair degree of accuracy of this year's yield. There seems little doubt the output will be considerably short of the average. The complaint of small crops is almost universal. There has been no lack of hands this year, and the season has been most favourable for bearing coffee. The great dearth of labour last year, and general want of cultivation has evidently told severely in reduced crops, and this strongly impresses the necessity of an organised system for the procuring a sufficient, sustained, and regular supply of labour. We have no cause to fear any sustained dearth of labour, but six months is sufficient to cause heavy loss. We all know, or ought to know, what the labour market of India is. For years the Wynaad planters have entirely depended on Mysore, and for years we have been subject to periodical fluctuations, not so much felt formerly when the chronic state of plantations was weeds and suckers, and the land under cultivation one-tenth that of the present. A good season and cheap food in Mysore means dear labour or no labour in Wynaad. Rice and raggi must be as cheap in Wynaad as in Mysore, or the planters must pay an equivalent in money to the coolies, and even this equivalent will not induce labour because it is principally the pressure of want which produces emigration, and where this does not exist, inducement fails. We must therefore endeavour to make Wynaad more independent of Mysore than hitherto, by encouraging and procuring labour from other districts—having, in fact, more than one string to our bow. Two strings to one's bow, however, though generally convenient, are sometimes liable to accidents, and a suit for damages is likely to arise shortly therefrom. The agent of a Bombay Banking Company, in his anxiety to invest money in coffee, appointed two agents to buy him an estate. The one agent succeeded in purchasing him a plantation in N. E. Wynaad. The other agent purchased him the half share of a plantation in the south. The banker only wanted one estate. His agents, who had worked if not wisely, too well, and according to instructions, had bought him two. The act of one agent is repudiated, hence is likely to arise a petty quarrel in the Tellicherry Court.

INAM COMMISSION.—The total number of cases decided by the Inam Commission in the month of December was 8,377, making a total of 102,735 decided since the commencement of operations. Besides these 2,527 cases of village service inams were recorded during the month, raising the total number to 23,507. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of December was 80,395, of which 9,630 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character, 43,826 personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars, 25,295 personal grants enfranchised compulsorily, and 1,644 personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds issued up to the end of last month was 45,320. The total amount of quit-rent now payable to Government in addition to former jodi is Rs. 1,31,462. The amount paid in redemption of the quit-rent Rs. 7,740 8-0. Combined quit-rent annually payable to Government for the future upon personal inams confirmed to the holders Rs. 2,32,380 4-0, which is about one fourth of their full assessment, Rs. 9,47,142 8-0.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT.—We (Madras Times) regret to learn from Bangalore that a lamentable accident occurred there on Thursday morning, Jan. 10, at a field day on the general parade, terminating in the death of the daughter of Captain Carter, of the 1st Madras Fusiliers—a girl twelve years of age. A court of inquiry was immediately assembled by the officer commanding the division, to investigate the circumstances; and it appears from the evidence produced that as the C troop horse artillery was retiring at some speed they suddenly came upon the young lady on horseback, her horsekeeper holding the horse's head, close to the posts and chain which divide the walk from the parade, the horsekeeper being on the inside. Unfortunately as the outside gun approached, the horse backed, reared, and threw the fair rider backwards, she falling among the artillery horses before they could be pulled up. The drivers seeing the young lady's position had turned their horses, and had ample room to have cleared her had her horse remained steady. Miss Carter was taken up senseless, and died three hours afterwards from the injuries she received. This melancholy occurrence has thrown a great gloom over the European community of Bangalore. The finding of the court of inquiry was recorded in the following terms:—"The Court is of opinion that no blame attaches to the officers or men of the C troop Madras Horse Artillery, but that the fatal accident was occasioned by the deceased having had undue confidence in the 'Ride' not being used by the guns."

GOOD PRACTICE.—At the rifle match of the Waltair (Vizagapatam) Rifle Club on the 3rd of January, Lieut. Smith, 38th M.N.I., was victor, making a total score of 122 points in 135 rounds, or an average of practice of 1-1. The firing was at 100, 150, and 200 yards.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE "ST. ABBS."—From inquiries made by Brigadier Coghlan some traces of the St. Abbs, which was wrecked in 1855, have been discovered. In October of that year a number of cases were washed ashore at Brava, a dependency of Zanzibar, situated in the first degree north latitude. The contents were picked up by the natives and sold at Zanzibar during the month following. They consisted of a set of band instruments, ivory billiard balls, new uncut books, and several sets of surgical instruments bearing the mark of the East India Company. A coffin also drifted ashore. The natives thinking it contained something valuable opened it, but upon seeing the dead body of a female inside they immediately recommitting it to the sea. No writing of any kind was discovered. The parties who shipped goods by the St. Abbs will probably be able to identify the vessel by the above-named articles.

DR. HARDING, the Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Bombay, is making something like a tour of visitation this season. His lordship has been all through Guzerat, and is now in the heart of Central India, having last been heard of at Nusseerabad, which station, by the way, has no Protestant church fit to perform divine service in, and a subscription is being got up to raise four or five thousand rupees to build one. The old church has, ever since the mutinies, been turned into a hospital for the European troops, and service is now performed in the Assembly Rooms. The bishop left Nusseerabad for Neemuch and Mhow on the 9th January, and will return to the Presidency via Dhoolia and Malligam, taking up his residence at Mahabuleswar during the hot season.

BRANCH BANK AT KURRACHEE.—The directors of the Agra and United Service Bank have determined to open a branch at Kurrachee. Mr. Baker, of the Calcutta office, has been appointed manager.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS.—We are glad to learn that Mr. Gallianjee Sewjee, the wealthy commissariat contractor, has given orders to Messrs. Walker and Co., ironmongers, to procure for him three ornamental drinking fountains from England. These fountains are intended for public use, and will be located in the most prominent spots of the island.

SIND.—From the reports of the various collectors we are happy to find that the rubber crops are everywhere looking well. The fall of rain has been general, and hopes are entertained of a good crop. In Shikarpoor and other districts there appears to be a great pestilence among cattle, hundreds of which have been carried off. Gram generally is rising in price. The karkars of Mitte and Depla state that "it is very dear, owing to the great demand for it made from Cutch;" and, horrible to relate, they report "that madness among donkeys is on the increase!" which melancholy fact, no doubt, will elicit the profound and fraternal sympathy of the editor of Our Paper. The general health of the districts is reported good, and it is also stated that the Income-tax assessment is progressing very favourably over the province, and the payments thereon are coming in fast.—Sindian.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Feb. 1.—The London mail of the 10th December last arrived here on the 28th ultimo.

Letters have been received from Tien-tsin up to the 7th ult., which report everything quiet at Peking. The Emperor was not expected to return from the Zehol until spring. The Empress is said to have come back to the capital in bad health. San-ko-lin-sin is reported to have met and been defeated by the rebels about the south of Shantung, where they have become troublesome. The troops at Tien-tsin find amusement in skating, shooting, hawking, and running sledges. The boundary of the foreign settlement there has been defined. It gives an area of about sixty acres, on the east bank of the Peiho, not far from the city. Of course nothing has yet been done about the sale of lots. Mr. Wade has gone to Peking, and Mr. Morrison to his post at Sang-chow. The coast in the Gulf of Pechili is still icebound and unapproachable. The expedition for opening the Yangtze to trade, and in which so much interest at present centres, is being organized under the auspices of Admiral Hope, and will be ready to start, it is said, in a few days. The rebels are reported to have been defeated at Khsien, which has been retaken by the Imperialists, and also at Wen Chang, in the province of Sze-chuen. The Governors-general of Chekiang and Fokien have urged the Emperor to make a levy of money in all the provinces, accompanying their request with a subscription of 3,000 taels to begin with. The North China Herald, from which the above items of news are extracted, also tells us, on the authority of a recent number of the Pekin Gazette, that Prince Hung, of Peking celebrity, has been promoted from the third to the first rank for his skill and energy in conducting the exchange of the ratifications of the Tien-tsin treaty.

The recent treaty is continuing to receive promulgation throughout various parts of the Empire. In some cases the posting of it up is reported to have given offence, but as yet those cases appear to be quite exceptional. The Chinese are said to show an aptness for discovering and applying any of its clauses that are to their advantage.

A correspondent who writes from Tien-tsin via Che-foo and Shanghai, describes the place as unapproachable, or nearly so. A mail had reached the Gulf, and many attempts had been made to land it, but without success, save in the case of two boxes which were got ashore. Only a few of our friends there had received their letters. They expect to be shut up till spring. The ice at present is a foot thick. There is scarcely a single vessel outside, all having gone to the Miataou Islands or to Che-foo. At a later date the Plow is reported to have arrived at Tien-tsin, but without any likelihood of being able to land.

At Peking a house is being prepared for Mr. Bruce, and it is rumoured that he will go up next month.

In answer to a memorial praying his return to the capital, the Emperor is said to have threatened the memorialists with severe punishment in the event of their repeating the offence. The effort to raise the indemnity money has led to a stoppage of the soldiers' pay and a depreciation in the value of paper money.

At Tien-tsin the people are very anxious to begin trade in the spring, and in the meantime amuse themselves by taking as much of the indemnity money back as they can possibly get out of the foreigners' pockets by levying high prices on their articles. It is possible that the garrison at Tien-tsin may be broken up by May.

The heads of the expedition have now nearly all returned from the north. Lord Elgin, whose arrival here we noticed last mail, departed for Manilla on the 21st of last month in the Feroze, H.M.I.N. Admiral Jones arrived in Hong Kong on the 2nd, and Lieut.-general Sir Hope Grant on the 24th January.

We are glad to report that affairs in Japan, which were a little unsettled, and were giving rise to some slight anxiety when the last mail went home, are now quite peaceful. In an affray with the Japanese officials, arising out of the arrest of a foreigner for shooting a goose, one of the Japanese officers was badly wounded by a bullet from the pistol of a Mr. Moss, which Mr. Moss alleges to have been accidental. The feelings of both parties ran high, and there began to be room for apprehending more serious results. Mr. Moss was at once brought to trial and found guilty by a majority. Acting-Consul Vyse passed sentence upon him of 1,000 dollars fine and banishment from Japan. Mr. Alcock, the Consul, in reviewing the sentence, added to Mr. Moss's punishment three months' imprisonment in Hong Kong gaol. He was accordingly incarcerated here, but has since been liberated, owing to the informality of the warrant. A reply to Consul Vyse's notification on the subject of carrying firearms and infringing Japanese statutes was followed, as stated in our last summary, by a protest on the part of the foreign residents against such restrictions. This protest has called forth from Captain Vyse a most temperate and well-written lecture upon the exact amount of license which a stranger in a foreign country should allow himself if he wishes the treatment of those whose intentions are pacific. The excessive severity of Mr. Alcock's revised sentence upon Mr. Moss meets with little sympathy, and deserves less. Happily the issue of all this has been peaceful. Its lessons ought not soon to be forgotten.

From Shanghai we learn accounts of the rebels that prove them to be a curse to the country. About the beginning of the year a party of five hundred of the insurgents left S'ai-tsanchow and paid a visit to Woosung, a small town near the mouth of the Yangtze. The terrified inhabitants, of every age and sex, fled before them, and the utmost misery ensued. A party of imperialists left Shanghai to repel the rebels, but without any decided success, although some engagements were fought. A general named Sang has been deprived of rank for refusing to obey orders and march against them. He was succeeded by an officer named Ching, and later accounts describe the rebels as having been defeated and driven back upon Chootee. At Paulung-chan they had burnt the town and all the neighbouring hamlets, after having looted them and taken the women into captivity. From Chewangmiao they were compelled to retreat. The latest news reports the insurgents as returning from the villages to Tsing-poo with large booty, in rice, women, and money. An interesting expedition is about to start from Shanghai, with a view of travelling on an excursion of inquiry, through China and Tibet to India. Among them are some men of science, and they are accompanied by an interpreter. They go so far with the Yang-tsze expedition already referred to; and after leaving it these excursionists wander westward until they reach Lassa, a place little known, and supposed to be dangerous to strangers. They proposed debouching upon India in October near the source of the four great rivers Indus, Jamna, Ganges, and Brahmapootra. Some foreigners who went up the Yang-tsze some time since have not returned, and fears are entertained for their safety.

From Fuhchau we have reports which speak of the new Treaty as having been not only fully published, but well received. A case of self-immolation by a young widow is described by a correspondent; it is painfully interesting in its details.

From Amoy there is no news of importance.

From Swatow we learn that Ting-chow, in Fuhkien, fell on the 11th instant before the Chang-maous; the whole country, therefore, is now open for them to Chauchowfoo. Hing-lin and Keaying are already threatened. The Imperialists are now falling back from Wooping, which lies on the road to them. The Chuntai (commandant) at Chauchowfoo has called out the militia from the district about Swatow, and 3,000 have already been collected and marched to the city.

At Swatow itself, a notice has been lately posted up, purporting to be issued by the local gentry, naming foreigners kih, guests, calling on the people to remain quiet on seeing them, and expostulating on the folly of hooting and pelting them. The proclamations about the new treaty have, however, been defaced at Chau-chow, and squibs appeared against the Yaoutas, one of which said that a conspiracy had been formed to kill him directly foreigners entered the city. This roused his ire, and he at once issued peremptory orders to his subordinates to seize any one caught posting up anonymous papers of any kind. The people seem afraid lest the foreign customs system, which they do not at all understand, should extend as foreigners advance. Of course, like all Chinese they are opposed to innovation of any kind, but this appears at present the great stumbling-block to progression here.

From Canton we learn that Consul Robertson has been appointed Commissioner of Chinese claims at Kowloon, and that he left on Saturday, with Mr. Mayers as interpreter, for that purpose. Canton will be evacuated in May by our troops, and the city handed over to the Chinese authorities. The Shamien site still goes on, and rapidly approaches completion. On Saturday and Sunday night a heavy gale of wind, accompanied by thunder and lightning, occurred. According to usage, the Chinese officials all closed their offices on January 30th, when the ceremony took place of sealing up the official seal, which is not unsealed for a month, during which time the Chinese officer has a respite from the drudgery of office. This is a wise provision for the hard-worked official. The bands of marauders on the north and west rivers are quiet at present. The literary examinations for the department of Kwang-chau for obtaining the first degree of merit have been held this year at Hah-shan instead of Canton, and are now over. There were thousands of applicants for the few honours to be given away. In some of the large districts, where twenty persons are admitted to the degree at one examination, the number of aspirants to the honour may be about three thousand. The system exerts a marvellous influence upon the best interests of the country.

The Canton Evening Advertiser tells us that,—“A Chinese family being displeased at the conduct of one of their servants, discharged him from their service; but he had not quitted the house until another one had been engaged in his stead. During the night succeeding the advent of the new comer, the discharged servant began to rob the premises of all the valuable articles which were capable of being bundled and carried away; but the inmates being aroused and discovering what was going on, gave the alarm, upon which the scoundrel attacked three of the inmates with a sharp weapon, inflicting several wounds on their respective persons, one of whom was the old lady of the family, who has since died in consequence; and of the other two, one is the youngest member of the family, a girl of eight years of age, and the other the newly engaged servant, both of whom are not yet pronounced out of danger. The scoundrel who perpetrated this diabolical act was apprehended two days after the occurrence, and is now waiting to receive his deserts.” The same authority of date 30th January says:—“We understand that a third dividend on the American Canton claims has been just paid, leaving less than twenty per cent. for the final discharge of the certificates. Lord Elgin, we are informed, has not been so unkind as to dishearten the Britishers with any ambiguous reply, but it ‘shall be paid soon’ was all that could be elicited from his lordship touching the British Canton claims. By the departure of his lordship his successful career in China has been brought to a close, but his name will not be forgotten by this generation.”

The Granada and Chusan, P. and O. steamers, have been chartered by the French for the conveyance of troops to Saigon. A considerable force is now on its way thither, and the French seem determined to prosecute the war with vigour.

The Elizabeth, of Penang, Captain Glendinning, from Manila, bound to Amoy, foundered sixty miles South-East of the Pratas shoal on the 25th inst. The mate, with twenty-seven hands in the long-boat, was picked up off the Ninepin by the P. and O. Company's steamer Formosa, one of the crew in a dying state, and the others very much exhausted. The captain, with the gig and seven hands, is supposed to have reached the Pratas island, as a light was seen ashore as the long-boat passed. It was certainly to have been expected that a man of war should have been despatched to search for the men still missing.

In Hong Kong some little stir is still kept up by the departure of troops and officers for England and India. The old familiar faces are fast disappearing, and almost the whole of the expeditionary force may now be said to have left China, excepting, of course, the troops in occupation at Canton and at the North. Kowloon has been formally ceded to the British Government. It is now, therefore, under the rule of Sir Hercules Robinson, who is losing no time in setting it in order. He has appointed Mr. May, commissioner at Kowloon, an appointment that will, no doubt, produce good results. Mr. May has been long in the colony, and as superintendent of police, and more recently as assistant magistrate, has shown himself fully equal to the duties of both offices. The disposal of the choicest portions of ground for building upon is not settled nor likely to be for some little time. It is rumoured that his Excellency the Governor will go to England shortly to confer with the Home authorities upon the matter.

Some little alarm was felt here, and not unnaturally, when it was ascertained that the Imperieuse, in which Admiral Jones came from the north, had 150 cases of smallpox on board, and that no precautions whatever had been taken to isolate the vessel. Fortunately no contagion has been communicated on shore, that we have heard of. A heavy fall of rain, heavy at least for this rainless season, is said by the experienced to have been a very fortunate occurrence in the circumstances. The commission of inquiry into the alleged abuses in the Civil Service threaten to come to a curious termination of their labours. Mr. Caldwell, who has for upwards of twenty sittings of the commission listened to charges against him, made by Mr. Murrow, editor of the Daily Press, began his defence some few weeks ago, and called witnesses in his support. Mr. Murrow, the accuser, however, at an early stage of the defence, asked and obtained permission from the council to visit the gaol in search of witnesses to bear him out in new charges against Mr. Caldwell, who, in sheer disgust, has come to a determination to discontinue his defence under such treatment. The commission being a court of honour and not a court of law, allows of this wonderful elasticity of action. An excellent amateur theatre conducted by gentlemen resident here continues to amuse a few of our winter evenings.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Feb. 16.—The weather during the fortnight has continued hot and dry—all that the most enthusiastic coffee curer could wish—and it would appear as if every berry was prepared, shipped, and exported as soon as it arrived from the interior. The customs returns for January prove that in the first month of 1861 we exported coffee from Colombo at the rate of more than 2,000 cwt. a-day, 64,000 cwt. in all; but during the first fortnight of February we have far exceeded this rate, having sent away no less than 50,000 cwt. in fourteen days. Six ships have sailed for London with cargoes, which included:—Plantation coffee, 38,466 cwt.; native ditto, 5,881 cwt.; together, 44,347 cwt. One ship went to Falmouth for orders, carrying:—Plantation coffee, 3,163 cwt.; native ditto, 3,137 cwt.; together, 6,300 cwt. The total for the fortnight is, as we have said, 50,647 cwt., in the proportions of 41,692 cwt. plantation and 9,018 cwt. native. Our total exports since 1st Oct., 1860, are 153,418 cwt. plantation, against 146,486 cwt. to the same date last season; while of native we only sent away 48,745 cwt. against 74,238 cwt. The result is that of both kinds we have only 208,000 cwt. to show instead of 220,000 cwt. last season. We suspect that as the season advances the deficiency will become still more apparent. In the face of short crops come the news of troubles on both sides of the Atlantic, calculated to limit consumption and depress prices. On the other hand, the troubles in America ought favourably to affect the prospects of Indian cotton. At Tuticoreen operations will be disturbed by the approaching pearl fishery. Our exports of cocoa nut oil are largely in excess of previous seasons.

The gathering of the coffee crop is fast approaching completion in many districts, and the result in a good proportion of instances is better than was anticipated; but there can be no doubt that the out-turn will be short as compared with last season. Meantime exchange rules here, as in Bombay and London, high.

The select committee on the railway continues its sittings, and the general impression is that the report of its members will be decidedly in favour of a railway, which they believe can be completed at a sum far below that estimated by Mr. Doyne. But it would appear as if our perplexities in this matter were never to cease, for if the Lords of the Admiralty really agree to the proposal to make Trincomalee the port of call for steamers, we must reconsider the whole question of the railway and its route. The change of port would, for a long time at least, be productive of nothing but loss and embarrassment to Ceylon.

The local event of the fortnight has been an exhibition of the products of Ceylon at the Queen's house in connection with the local branch of the Asiatic society. It was highly successful, and afforded profit and gratification to a large assemblage.

The Governor, we hear, does not leave for the Hills until March. By that time we ought to know something definite about the railway question.

Sir William Denison has passed Galle en route to his new government at Madras.

It is confidently stated that Mr. A. Y. Adams is to succeed Mr. F. Layard as acting Assistant Agent at Badulla.

We regret to have to record the death of Mr. Sinclair, of the firm of Sinclair, Acland & Co., of Kandy.

While our overland paper is being printed the planters are holding their annual meeting at Kandy. Amongst other business a new chairman and secretary must be elected. Captain Galwey would doubtless be re-elected, but he is going home. The members will dine together in the evening.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Jan. 5.—The Ameer having consulted with Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan, desired Sirdar Shere Allee Khan to order two of his battalions, 1,000 sowars, and two guns, to march under Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan and one of the sons of Sooltan Mohamed, to Bajore. On this Shere Allee Khan stated that he was preparing himself to march to Sungo Khyle, as previously ordered, but now he should warn his troops to be ready for Bajore. Accordingly he ordered two battalions of Mohamed Ukkur Khan, 1,000 sowars, and two guns, to be ready at a moment's notice. Shahmurd Khan was directed by the Ameer to send his men to Bishpoolak, and there to collect the provisions for the troops to march shortly under Sirdar Shere Allee Khan to Sungo Khyle.—Jan. 6. —To-day the Ameer held his durbar in the garden of the late Wuzer Mohamed Ukkur Khan, and, having received the Khans and Sirdars, for awhile he broke up the durbar. As the Ameer was playing at chess with Sirdar Peer Mohamed, the bagh bashee (the head malee) came and informed the Ameer that the wall of the garden situated towards the north was out of repair. Shahmurd Khan was ordered to have it done as soon as possible. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan intimated to the Ameer that he had received the uniforms, &c., for the new regiment of cavalry from Peshawur, and asked the Ameer's permission to distribute them amongst the sowars. The Ameer complied with the Sirdar's request, and desired him to order Hakeem Ubdoolwasai Khan to attend on the ambassador of the King of Bokhara, who was not well. Towards evening the Ameer went to the river, and there amused himself with fishing.

—Jan. 7.—An urzee was this day received from Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, from Kandahar, informing the Ameer that he (Mohamed Ameer Khan) was getting the workmen to work in the gold mines at night, and as there was very little gold to come out from the old mine, he had ordered them to commence with the new one. From Herat he (Mohamed Ameen Khan) had received intelligence to the effect that Sooltan Ahmed Jan, the ruler of that place, had been taken so seriously ill that he had been under the necessity of sending for his brothers and making out a will, and that the King of Persia had sent Hakeem Mohamed Mirza Khan from Teheran to look after Sooltan Ahmed Jan's sickness. It was given out at Herat that 10,000 troops of all arms had left Mushed to relieve the present troops at Herat. The Ameer was very sorry to hear about Sooltan Ahmed Jan's sickness, and said that he hoped God would grant recovery to this the only son of the late Sirdar Mohamed Azim Khan. On account of the fall of snow this time it has taken fourteen days for the kossid to travel from Kandahar to Jellalabad.—Jan. 8.—The durbar was held as usual. Sirdars Peer Mohamed, Mohamed Oosman Khan, and Shere Allee Khan reminded the Ameer, that on his leaving Cabool, the Ameer had settled that the marriage of Mohamed Allee Khan, son of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, with the daughter of Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, was to come off on the Ameer's arrival at Jellalabad. As Shere Allee Khan was ordered to Sungoo Khyle, and Peer Mohamed Khan to Bajore, was the marriage to be put off till their return? The Ameer desired them to have the marriage over before they left Jellalabad, to send on some of their troops and the camp towards the above-named places.—Jan. 9.—A letter was this day received from Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan from Lughman, stating that he would be at Jellalabad next day. The camps of Sirdars Shere Allee Khan and Peer Mohamed Khan marched from Jellalabad this morning. That of the former was pitched at Allee Booghan, and that of the latter at a little distance from Jellalabad on the way to Koonair.—Jan. 10.—Subz Allee Khan, Kotwal of Jellalabad, brought three thieves who had last night stolen some loonges and other property belonging to some merchants in the Sarai. After investigating into the case the Ameer ordered the thieves to be imprisoned, and the property to be given back to the merchants. It is given out that the thieves are of the Shunwar tribe. About one o'clock this afternoon, after the kossid had been despatched with the last budget of news, Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, the Quazee, some Moollas, and the chiefs of Lughman arrived at Jellalabad, and went direct to the durbar to pay their respects to the Ameer. After the Sirdar had talked with the Ameer about some public business, he looked at the Ameer and thus spoke to him on the part of the Lughman Affghans who had accompanied him:—"The Affghani people who are now waiting on the Ameer say that they have no one else in the world but God their Creator, and the Ameer their King and protector of the Mussulman religion; as the Ameer has ordered an army to march against Bajore, whose people are also Mohamedans, it would have been better if the Ameer would have postponed his intention of doing so for the present, and ordered the same army to accompany them against Peshawur. They could collect all the Mussulmans from this to Peshawur to fight for the faith (continued Sooltan Mohamed Khan) and take Peshawur for the Ameer." The Ameer was thunderstruck by the above speech made by Sooltan Mohamed Khan in the durbar. At first he (the Ameer) tried to keep himself quiet and said nothing to the Sirdar, but being too much enraged by the Sirdar's nonsensical conversation to restrain himself, he addressed him as follows:—"Whenever you have gone to Lughman you have always conspired with the Affghans of that place, and have put them up to some mischief or other. I have repeatedly told you never to indulge such foolish ideas as these, but without any use. You are talking about Peshawur; I tell you I can have it whenever I like, as I am sure the British authorities would never refuse me if I were to apply to them for the place." The Ameer then, turning towards the Affghans and the Moollas, told them to have patience; after he had settled the Bajore business he would listen to them. The Ameer is really very much displeased with Sooltan Mohamed Khan for this unworthy conduct.—Jan. 11.—It is ascertained by letters received this day from Toorkistan, that when the Russian troops had arrived at Agha Musjid they built a fort called Phulwan Huttee at a little distance from the Musjid. Having made necessary preparations at this place they ordered a portion of their army to march on Kokan via Tashkund. The King of Kokan was taken by surprise when he heard of this, and, having summoned all his kahns and chiefs, ordered them to be ready with their different troops, as he was going to march and give battle to the Russians, who were advancing with full speed on his capital. On this the khans and the chiefs replied that the king would have done better to remain in Kokan, and to have entrusted them with the expedition. Accordingly an army of about forty thousand of all arms had marched from Kokan to meet the Russians. The Ameer, after taking the contents of this letter into his consideration, looked up at Goolam Mohamed Khan and said, "He was glad to hear that the King of Kokan had made up his mind to withstand the Russians, who are no doubt far stronger than he is."—Jan. 12.—Sirdar Peer Mohamed Khan took leave from the Ameer, and with his troops left Jellalabad for Bajore. Syd Baboo Jan, the King of Koonair, has accompanied Peer Mohamed Khan, and has assured the Ameer that he would get Bajore taken without any fighting. Shah Murd Khan and the King of Koonair were the whole day busy in seeing the troops cross the river. This day the troops were encamped at the Sood Boodahn pass on the Koonair road. Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan has been warned to get himself ready for Bajore.—Jan. 13.—The following news from Bookhara was this day received through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan from Surhool in Turkistan. After the demise of the King of Bookhara the King of Kokan had sent his vakeel to the Hakim of Ooratpa, a place belonging to Bookhara, with a request that he would shake off the yoke of the Bookhara Government and consider himself the servant of the King of Kokan. The ruler of Ooratpa having declined to the requisition of the Kokan King was suddenly besieged, and having been unable to oppose the enemy, was obliged to surrender. He was taken prisoner and put to death. The young King of Bookhara having been informed of this had sent some of his troops to Ooratpa to recover that place from the Kokanees. After the perusal of Ufzul Khan's urzee, the Ameer remarked that since the death of the King of Bookhara, the King of Kokan had encroached upon many places belonging to the Bookhara Government. Was it not very unbecoming of the King of Kokan?—Jan. 14.—The King of Koonair informed the Ameer that the whole troops under Peer Mohamed Khan had crossed the river and had reached the Koonair Pass. The Ameer conferred a khilut upon Syd Baboo Jan, the King of Koonair, and gave him leave to go and join the camp. It was ascertained from Shah Murd Khan that the number of the troops sent to Bajore is 5,000 of all arms with four guns. Sirdar Ghoolam Mohamed Khan was desired by the Ameer to go to Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, who had been offended by him the other day, and to tell him not to build castles in the air, because his foolish ideas would some day or other cause enmity between the two powers, that is, between him, the Ameer, and the British.—Delhi Gazette.

ARMY SCHOOLMISTRESSES.

The C. in C. is pleased to publish the following transcript of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 420, dated 8th Nov. last:—

"In consequence of a reference from the Govt. of Bombay, it has been ascertained that in the British service trained army schoolmistresses are granted free passages from foreign stations, when recommended for sick leave by a medical board.

"A similar privilege may be extended to trained army schoolmistresses on duty in India, who may be declared by a medical board to be in such a state of ill health that a return to Europe is absolutely necessary for their recovery; but in all cases where it may be practicable, a change of residence in India should be tried, before obliging the revenues with the expense involved in sending persons of this class to England, and others from this country to replace them.

The Services of the Native Troops in China.

Military Dept., Camp Jubbulpore, Jan. 17.—No. 11a.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. of India has much satisfaction in publishing for general information the subjoined letter, dated Nov. 21, 1860, from Lieut. gen. Sir J. Hope Grant, G.C.B., comdr. of the forces in China, bringing to notice the services, during the campaign in that country, of the native troops of all arms which proceeded to China from Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

The Gov. gen. congratulates the troops on the high testimony which they have earned for themselves from their distinguished commander by their exemplary conduct in camp and garrison, and by their valour in the field. And it is an additional source of gratification to the Gov. gen., and a matter of which the troops may justly be proud, that their brilliant conduct in the field excited the admiration, not only of their British comrades, but also of the French troops which served in the same campaign.

It will be the grateful task of the Gov. gen. to make known to H.M.'s Govt. the report of Lieut. gen. Sir Hope Grant, and to bring particularly to notice the officers specially mentioned by him:—

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL CANNING, G.C.B., &c., &c., &c.

My Lord.—Peace having been concluded with this country, and many of the native troops serving in the expeditionary force being about to return to India, it becomes my duty to bring to your Excellency's notice the services of the regts. and corps of H.M.'s Indian army which have been serving during the campaign.

The 1st Sikh irreg. cav., under Maj. Probyn, and Fane's horse, under Capt. Fane, have performed their work most admirably.

On more than one occasion these regts. have been opposed to, and have successfully charged a vastly superior force of the enemy's cavalry, and their conduct in the field has excited the admiration of the French as well as of the English troops. It is not only on the field of battle that their services have been so important during the recent campaign, but in performing the numerous other duties required of them, of an infinitely more harassing nature; patrols, escorts, reconnaissances, as well as the task of carrying letters almost daily between Tien-tsin and Peking (a distance of seventy-five miles), for upwards of a month, during which they were frequently fired upon; their services have been of the utmost value to the expedition.

I beg to recommend Maj. Probyn and Capt. Fane to your Excellency's most favourable notice.

The two companies of Madras artillery under Capt. Hicks, and the two companies of Madras sappers under Capt. Shaw Stewart, rendered good and useful services in the operations which preceded and led to the fall of the Takee Forts. The latter corps was most energetic in working, without relief at the construction of the batteries, and have always shown themselves to be cheerful and willing workmen. A detachment of the former corps, under Capt. MacIntyre, was summoned from its station at Chusan to the assistance of Shanghai, and was fortunate enough to reach that city on the day it was attacked by the rebels, and to assist in repelling their attacks.

The regt. of Loodianah was stationed at Shanghai during the attack of the rebels on that city, and under the command of Lieut. col. Walsh contributed to their repul-e.

The 8th and 15th regts. of Punjab inf. have accompanied the army in all the active operations in the field, and although, owing to the nature of the operations, they have not come into collision with the enemy so frequently as they have perhaps wished, their services have not been of the less value to the expedition. The 15th Punjab inf., however, was particularly forward during the action of the 18th September; and on Sept. 21 a detachment under Lieut. Harris distinguished itself by crossing the river and capturing a gun which had opened on our lines.

The 8th Punjab inf. has been ably commanded throughout the campaign by Capt. Brownlow, Capt. Shebbeare, an excellent officer, the comdt. of the 15th Punjab inf., was unfortunately compelled by ill-health to leave just when active operations were commencing, but the regt. has been efficiently commanded by Lieut. Randall.

The 11th and 19th Punjab infantry have been employed in garrisoning the depots, &c., while the 3rd and 5th Bombay native inf. and the 21st Madras native inf. have formed portions of the garrisons of Hong Kong and Canton.

I have much pleasure in informing your Excellency that the behaviour of the Indian troops, both in camp and in garrison, has been everything that I could wish; and it has given me much satisfaction that the course of events have enabled me to send a considerable portion of them back to their homes in India before the end of the present year.

I have, &c.,

(Signed) J. HOPE GRANT, Lieut.-gen.,
Commander of the Forces.

Chaplains' Duties in Military Schools.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Jan. 19.—With the sanction of Govt., H.E. the C. in C. is pleased to cancel Articles 4 and 5 Section XIV. of the Military Regulations, and to substitute the following:—

Art. 4. It is also the duty of these functionaries to visit the European, regimental, and other schools, and afford religious instruction to the pupils under the following rules:—

1. Religious instruction shall, as a general rule, be communicated on two days in every week, for one hour each day, to be taken out of the ordinary hours of school attendance. It shall also be given on Sundays at such time as shall be found most convenient. The children and others of the several persuasions shall attend their respective chaplains for this instruction.

2. The hours during which the chaplain gives this instruction in the week shall be arranged by him with the commanding officer.

3. In stations where there are more military schools than one, and only one chaplain of the Church of England, it may be difficult for him, if he has much work in the hospitals, to give the requisite time for religious instruction to each school. Where two schools are not far apart it may be possible for him to collect the children from both into one building, but where this cannot be, he is authorised, if he find it absolutely necessary, to omit one hour a-week in each school alternately.

4. Similarly, if his Sunday duties are very heavy, the instruction on Sunday may be omitted, with the consent of the bishop. Or he may find it possible to intrust it, with the commanding officer's concurrence, to some lay member of his congregation.

5. ### Durbars.

Foreign Dep., Camp Rewah, Dec. 28, 1860.—No. 278.—This day, Dec. 28, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a private darbar for the reception of the Maharajah of Rewah.

The Maharajah was received and conducted to H.E.'s camp with the usual ceremonies. A salute of 17 guns was fired both on the arrival and departure of the Maharajah.

The Maharajah presented a nuzzer, which was accepted, and H.E. received a dress of honour and presents, in accordance with established custom.

On the same day the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by the secretary to the Government of India and H.E.'s personal staff, proceeded to pay a return visit to the Maharajah. The customary ceremonies were observed.

A royal salute was fired on H.E.'s arrival at the Maharajah's camp, and again on H.E.'s departure.

Camp Jubbulpore, Jan. 18.—No. 187.—On Monday the 14th inst., the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held private durbars for the reception successively of the Maharajah of Indore, the Rajah of Bijawur and Rajah Suleman Shah of the Nagpore province.

The Maharajah of Indore was accompanied by five of his principal officers, and the Rajah of Bijawur by three of his followers.

On arrival and departure, the Maharajah of Indore received a salute of 19 guns, and the Rajah of Bijawur a salute of 11 guns.

On the same day, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a public durbar for the reception of the three chiefs abovementioned, and of the native gentlemen of the province of Nagpore. At the public durbar the Maharajah of Indore was attended by thirty, and the Rajah of Bijawur by ten of his followers.

The native chiefs and gentlemen were placed on the right of the chair of State, and the European officers, civil and military, who were present, were seated on the left.

When all were assembled, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. entered and took his seat in the durbar under a royal salute.

The native chiefs and gentlemen present were introduced one by one to H.E., and presented the usual nuzzers. The nuzzers of such as were to receive khilluts were accepted, and the nuzzers of the others were remitted by the Gov. gen. Khilluts were conferred on the following chiefs and gentlemen:—

1. The Maharajah of Indore and four of his attendants, namely:—

Kashee Rao Dada Sahib.
Rao Ram Chunder Rao Bhow Sahib.
Bukhshee Kooman Singh.
Gunput Rao Seta Ram.

2. The Rajah of Bijawur, of the Nagpore Province.

3. Rajah Suleman Shah, ditto ditto.
4. Eshwunt Rao Goojur, ditto ditto.
5. Chitkajee Rao Goojur, ditto ditto.
6. Trimbukjee Ahirao, ditto ditto.
7. Luchman Rao Sirkia, ditto ditto.
8. Nawab Hussun Ali Khan, ditto ditto.
9. Rao Bahadoor Bunsee Lall Abeer Chund, ditto ditto.

In conferring the khillut on the Maharajah of Indore, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. addressed his Highness in the following words:—

“MAHARAJAH HOLKAR,

“I am glad that the time is come when I can have the pleasure of receiving your Highness and your Court in British territory. It was my wish to do so long ago on my former visit to Upper India, but time did not suffice.

“I am glad to congratulate your Highness upon the complete restoration of peace to your dominions and upon the re-establishment of your authority. This happy end has been achieved by the instrumentality of the British arms, to which your Highness has given on many occasions seasonable and effectual aid.

“I thank you for this, and I am glad to believe that the ties which bind the State of Indore to the British power will thereby be strengthened.

“I need not express the desire of the Queen's Government that the house of Holkar should be perpetuated and flourish, because the assurance which I have already given to you on this head has been given publicly, and is known to all India; but I wish to declare my own confident expectation that your Highness will not be backward to justify that friendly desire by a faithful discharge of all the obligations of your State to the Paramount Power.”

In bestowing a khillut on the Rajah of Bijawur, the Gov. gen. addressed his Highness as follows:—

“RAJAH OF BIJAWUR,

“It is satisfactory to me to have this opportunity of receiving you publicly in durbar, just as you are about to assume the government of your State.

“You are young for the task, but I am glad to have seen proof that you are alive to your duties to the British Government, and resolved to perform them.

“The promptitude with which you have lately punished some of your subjects who dared to revive the practice of suttee in your territory is very creditable to you.

“I enjoin you to continue to govern in a spirit of fidelity to your obligations and of loyalty to the British power. You may be sure that so long as you do so, the honour of your family and the integrity of your possessions will be protected.”

After the concluding ceremonies, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. left the durbar under a royal salute. The Maharajah of Indore and the Rajah of Bijawur were then conducted from the tent, and the assembly broke up.

On Tuesday the 15th instant, the Viceroy and Gov. gen. held a private durbar for the reception of the Secunder Begum and other members of the Bhopal family. A salute of 19 guns was fired on the arrival and departure of the Begum.

After the private durbar, the Secunder Begum and other members of the Bhopal family, together with the native chiefs and gentlemen of the Jubulpore division were received by H.E. in public durbar. The arrangements and proceeding were similar to those observed at the durbar held on the previous day.

Khilluts were conferred on—

1. Her Highness the Secunder Begum of Bhopal.
2. The Nawab Koodsea Begum of Bhopal.
3. Moonsee Bhowanee Purshad, Vakeel of the Bhopal Agency.

4. Baba Bulwunt Rao of Jubulpore.

5. Rajah Bahadoor Soornt Singh of Imjhera.

H.E. also conferred on her Highness the Secunder Begum the Pergunnah Baisraeh in perpetual sovereignty as a reward for the services which she rendered to the British Government during the rebellion.

In conferring this reward the Gov. gen. addressed her Highness in the following terms:—

“SECUNDER BEGUM,

“Your Highness is very welcome to this durbar. I have long desired to thank you for the services which you have rendered to the Queen's Government.

“Your Highness is the ruler of a State which is conspicuous in Indian history for never having been in arms against the British Power; and lately, when that State was beset and threatened by our enemies, you, a woman, guided its affairs with a courage, an ability, and a success, that would have done honour to any statesman or soldier.

“Besides the great services of repressing revolt around you, and of securing the safety of all Englishmen, amongst whom was the agent of the Gov. gen., you never failed to aid and expedite to the utmost of your power all bodies of British troops that came within your reach.

“Such services must not go unrewarded.

“I now place in your hands the grant in sovereignty of the district of Baisraeh. This district was formerly a dependency of the State of Dhar; but Dhar has, by rebellion, forfeited all claim to it; and now it is given in perpetuity to Bhopal for a memorial of loyalty under your wise and brave guidance in a time of trial.

“It is a pleasure to me to deliver this grant to your Highness in person, in the presence of the Queen's officers here assembled, of the native gentlemen of Jubulpore and Saugor, and of your own Court.”

After the usual ceremonies the Viceroy and Gov. gen. left the durbar under a royal salute. Her Highness the Secunder Begum and the Nawab Koodsea Begum were then conducted from the durbar, and the assembly broke up.

On Wednesday, the 16th inst., the Viceroy and Gov. gen., accompanied by the secretary and the under secretary to the Government of India, the agent to the Gov. gen. in Central India, and the officers of H.E.'s personal staff, paid return visits to the Maharajah of Indore, the Secunder Begum of Bhopal, and the Rajah of Bijawur, at their respective encampments.

H.E. was received at each encampment in accordance with established custom. On each occasion both on the arrival and departure of H.E. a royal salute was fired.

CENTRAL ASIA; Jan. 15.—It is ascertained by the Paish Khidmut of the Ameer that a letter has been received from Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, from Kandahar, with the following intelligence from Persia and Heerat. Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, the ruler of Heerat, is said to have sent his brother, Mohamed Oomer Khan, and his eldest son, Shah-nawaz Khan, with 3,000 sawars, to Mamana. From Tehran, in Persia, it was given out that when Usmut-ood-dowlah, the ruler of Mushhed, and Kawam-ood-dowlah, his Wuzer, went to Tehran, and informed the King that the 28,000 troops which had been sent to Toorkamund and Murve Shahjehan, had been defeated and had lost forty guns and the treasure, &c., they had been ordered to be imprisoned. Kawam-ood-dowlah was ordered to be put to death, and the hands of Usmut-ood-dowlah were directed to be cut off. On hearing this sad news the King of Persia had ordered the Meer Lushkur (the Commander-in-Chief), who had commanded the troops at Bushire, to march with an army of 60,000 men to Murve Shahjehan and pay them off well. The Meer Lushkur was to leave Tehran after Nouroze (the new year). The Ameer, talking to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan about the Sungoo Khyal affair, told him that after he had taken Sungoo Khyal, he was to leave some troops there and go with some to the Khyber, and to see the matters between the Shummaree people under Mullick Goolistan Khan and Mullick Allah Dad Khan, who had been quarrelling for a long time, settled. Some Mullicks of this tribe being present at the time were ordered to accompany the camp of Shere Allee Khan. Shah Murd Khan was also desired by the Ameer to go with Shere Allee Khan as far as Khyber.—Delhi Gazette.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES.

A STEP is about to be taken in Bengal that is likely to lead to the most beneficial results. The Viceroy has penned a brief Minute, in his best style, in favour of investing European and Native gentlemen of good character and recognised social position with the powers of an assistant magistrate, but without remuneration. His Excellency proposes that they shall be competent to "receive complaints in all except heinous offences, including affray, to issue summonses, warrants, and subpoenas, to take evidence, to punish up to fifteen days' imprisonment, and Rs. 50 fine, and in cases of theft with one month's further imprisonment in lieu of stripes, and to refer to the magistrate or deputy-magistrate, for final orders, cases requiring a severer measure of punishment." It will rarely happen that a limited authority of this description will be abused, especially if ordinary care be taken in the selection of individuals for this honourable distinction. The temptation to go wrong will be very slight, and more than counterbalanced by the new and wholesome feeling of self-respect certain to be engendered by the idea of responsibility. Hitherto no confidence has been placed by Government in any one not actually belonging to its service, and consequently the notion has gone abroad that no extra-official persons were worthy of confidence. Trust begets trustworthiness, as surely as suspicion is apt to suggest the very errors against which it is prematurely and unjustly directed. And wherever the experiment has been fairly tried, as in the Punjab and in Oude, it has been found that the native landholders dispense justice with quite as much ability and integrity as the paid servants of the Government. Indeed, as Lord Canning sagaciously observes, "Property and superior station will carry influence with them, do what we will. This is a law as inevitable as any in nature. If the possessors of that influence cannot hope to use it legitimately and usefully, the temptation to use it illegitimately and mischievously will be enormous." Already, and for many years past, both the European planters and the great Native zamindars do actually administer justice in their respective neighbourhoods, and for the most part very beneficially. It is only wise, then, to sanction and develop what has been proved on a small scale to be advantageous to the people, and elevating to the moral character of the exercisers of authority. It cannot be a healthy state, says Sir Bartle Frere, where an utter severance between property and official authority exists. Such has, unhappily, been too much the case hitherto, but the measure now recommended will go far to "bridge the gulf." The Governor-general likewise suggests that honorary magistrates shall be appointed in Calcutta, as well as in the rural districts of Bengal. For nearly thirty years there have been Native Justices of the Peace in the island of Bombay, and during a shorter period non-official Europeans have been placed on the commission of peace, and "nothing but good had resulted in both cases." There can be no reason, then, why the same consequences should not follow in Calcutta, where many influential gentlemen of either race would gladly give time and attention to the hearing of petty police cases, and the various questions that arise in connection with the Municipal Conservancy Act. The compliment, we believe, would be highly prized, and men would labour to render themselves worthy of the social distinction.

"AND THE FAMINE WAS SORE IN THE LAND."

AND the famine is very sore in the land—in our own land, the territory of our Sovereign, and inhabited by our own fellow-subjects. Hundreds of human beings are helplessly, hopelessly, dying every day. Not an hour passes in which men, women, and little children, do not lie down on the parched unfruitful soil, and perish by dozens. The cattle can find no herbage, and so pine away and starve to death. The birds of the air fall fainting to the ground, for though harvest time has come and gone, no seed or corn has fallen from the ear for them, and the fruits and berries on the trees are shrivelled up, or are gathered by hungry mortals. Even the beasts of the forest come forth from their lairs only to die and taint the air with corruption. This is no highly coloured picture. There is here no straining after effect—no attempt at fine writing. It is a plain and unvarnished statement of the terrible calamity that is stalking through the north-western and southern provinces of India. Nor is it a merely temporary disaster—one that will cease and be forgotten as soon as the spring crops are gathered in. In the first place, there is no little disquietude felt as to whether those crops also may not fail; but assuming that the early rains do not prove as scanty as did the latter rains, the effect of their present sufferings upon the physical and moral condition of the native population cannot be otherwise than most deplorable. Debilitated in frame and depressed in mind, what sort of labour will these poor creatures be capable of during the present year? The pressure on the Indian Government will be very severe, and the more it strives to do its duty the greater will be the sacrifices it will be called upon to make. But is the Home Government to do nothing? Will it look on apathetically while thousands of its subjects are seeking in vain for a morsel of bread? A famine in Ireland, a failure of the crops in the Orkneys, is at once met by liberal grants and profuse contributions. An inundation in France, a temporary stoppage of employment in London, a massacre of very indifferent Christians in Syria, makes every heart throb with compassion, and opens every purse. But week after week we receive more and more heartrending accounts of the almost inconceivable sufferings of our Indian fellow-subjects, and no one comes forward with so much as a word of compassion. No: it is unjust to say so, for it is not true. One generous, noble-minded Englishman, at least, speaks from the abundance of his heart and from the painful recollection of the scenes of misery he has himself witnessed and laboured to relieve. A correspondent, whose letter we publish elsewhere, expresses his readiness to contribute £50 towards a fund for the alleviation of the present distress, and for averting the pestilence that may be expected to follow. As a liberal subscriber, too, to the Mutiny Relief Fund he urges the immediate application of the large surplus balance in hand, towards rescuing from the cruellest of all deaths myriads of our fellow-creatures. We implore our readers to lend their aid to this good work. We ask of them to use their influence so that the £200,000 now uselessly tied up in the Funds or in Indian debentures shall be set free and circulated in the shape of food to those who must otherwise sink under protracted inanition. We intreat them to spare something from their own superfluities to save if it be only one little child from the horrors of starvation. For four annas and a half—for less than sevenpence—mothers are offering their children for sale to strangers. The fate of the innocent girls thus bartered for a handful of rice cannot be contemplated without a shudder. Purchased for a meal, fed and fattened for the vilest purposes, and not a hand stretched forth to save—not even the value of this wretched meal, the price of a mother's love, the price of a maiden's honour—not even this much offered in redemption by a rich and generous, a charitable and Christian nation! We appeal to our brethren of the press. We call upon them to do their duty, to awaken the sluggish sympathies of their countrymen, to paint this appalling woe in its true colours, to bring help to those who are in the utmost need of it. Could one-half of the misery now prevailing in India be realised, there would be no lack of sympathy, no stinted offers of aid. It is for the press to take the initiative, to indicate the true nature and extent of the famine that is so sore in the land, and the British public will not be untrue to its time-honoured traditions and character.

JOINT MAGISTRATES' JUSTICE.

THE utter incompetency of the junior members of the Indian Civil Service to sift conflicting evidence, and unravel the entangled testimony of native witnesses, has been illustrated in a very remarkable manner in a case lately tried before the Joint Magistrate of Cawnpore. On the 17th of September last the Commissioner of the Allahabad division received a memorial or petition, dated the 15th, and bearing the Cawnpore postmark of the 16th, the purport of which was to effect the removal of Mr. Lance, the collector, on the ground of systematic malversation and corruption. It is almost superfluous to remark that there is not the slightest reason for the accusation, and that Mr. Lance's honour and integrity are quite unimpeachable. The charge, however, being made, it became necessary for that gentleman's thorough justification to ascertain who were his calumniators, and a reward of fifty rupees was offered for any information that might lead to the detection of the offenders. A similar petition, we should have stated, was sent in the same handwriting to the office of the Sessions Judge.

It was on the 28th of September that the petition and the offer of a reward were posted up in the magistrates' court at Cawnpore, and on the following morning a man named Misree Chowbey went to the uncovenanted deputy magistrate, a native named Dabeechurn, and volunteered to give information respecting the writers of the libel. He accordingly stated that about ten days previously a petition against the collector had been written in the house of Urjun Sing, a pleader in the Civil Courts, lately deceased, in the presence of Unund Pershad, the Tehsildar of Ghatumpore, Salar Bux, the city Kotwal, and Nanuk Chund, the author of a narrative of what occurred at Cawnpore during the mutiny, and reputed to be a man of substance; the actual penman was Koor Bahadoor, the son of Urjun Singh. His statement being so precise, the deputy magistrate could not well do otherwise than take prompt action upon it, and his first step was to obtain some specimens of Koor Bahadoor's ordinary handwriting. On comparison this was found to bear a certain but not very well defined resemblance to that of the petition. Koor Bahadoor was therefore apprehended, and Misree Chowbey's deposition was then taken down in regular form. It was now the 4th of October. Some fifteen or sixteen days previously, he said, he happened to go to the Kotwal's house, who desired him to bring one Ali Raza to Koor Bahadoor's house in order to write a certain paper. He did so, and found seven persons assembled there—namely, Unund Pershad, Salar Bux, Nanuk Chund, Koor Bahadoor, Doorga Pershad, the Naib Tehsildar of the collectorate, Akbar Ali, a Mooktear in the District Courts, and Budree Nath, the treasurer of two collectorates in Oude. Having taken an oath of secrecy, Ali Raza was made to read aloud the draft of a petition which he was then required to copy. His writing, however, proved so indifferent that he was not allowed to go beyond a couple of lines, and finally Koor Bahadoor was persuaded to copy the draft, which was afterwards sent to the post-office by Salar Jung,—by whose hands does not appear. This evidence was supported by that of Ali Raza, except that he could only recognise Unund Pershad and Koor Bahadoor, and admitted that he was a stranger to all except Salar Bux, the Kotwal, who had sent for him. Neither of these witnesses, be it observed, makes mention of more than one petition being drawn up and sent off. It is rather singular, too, that Ali Raza's penmanship should not have been tested before he was initiated into the conspiracy, and also that Misree Chowbey should have been permitted to be present without any precautions whatever being taken to secure his secrecy. And what manner of men were these two witnesses? In plain English, they made their living by perjury. They were professional informers and witnesses, and ready to depose to anything for a consideration. And yet their testimony was received by the joint magistrate, though fully aware of their character. His words are, "There can be no doubt several of the witnesses cannot boast of unimpeachable character," and he naively adds, "Were it otherwise, it is most unlikely that they would have obtained a knowledge of the occurrences stated to have been witnessed by them." There might, indeed, be something to be said in favour of this remark had it been shown that they were at all serviceable to the alleged conspirators, but, according to their own account, one was merely employed as a messenger, and the other was not actually employed at all; and we may be quite certain that the Kotwal knew them for what they really were, and would trust them no further than was absolutely necessary. But we have not yet heard all that the joint magistrate has to say on their behalf. "With reference," he continues, "to the circumstance of their having given evidence in other cases, I consider that this by no means invalidates their testimony in the present instance, or materially diminishes the amount of credit that may be attached to it." Truly a novel doctrine, that the same reliance is to be placed in the word of a truthful man and of a suborned perjurer—for it amounts to that. And so far as Misree Chowbey is concerned, something very like an atibi was proved against him. He says that he was at the house of Salar Bux in the evening of the 14th or 15th September, but a Mr. Du Narohna produced a book in which this man is entered as his chowkeydar, or watchman, who came to him at four P.M., and remained all night, from the 10th to the 20th September, both inclusive; on the last night he got drunk, quarrelled with a chuprassie, and was turned off. The joint magistrate, however, coolly insinuates that this entry may have been made to suit the contingency, and refuses to attach any credit to it.

Two other witnesses now appear on the stage, who also depose to have been present at a meeting of several persons in Salar Bux's house, and the joint magistrate thinks it "very probable that this is the same meeting as the one alluded to by Misree Chowbey and Ali Raza." Abdool Rahman, jemadar of the Kotwalee, states on the 16th of October, that a month and one or two days previously he went one evening to the Kotwal's house, where he found Unund Pershad, Nanuk Chund, and Budree Nath. The Kotwal mentioned a case in which Mr. Lance had taken 1,000 rupees: Unund Pershad capped this by asserting that he knew an instance of Mr. Lance's accepting 2,000 rupees; whereupon Nanuk Chund declared that he himself had given that gentleman several thousand rupees. Unable to bear this, Budree Nath struck out the "Moral," and suggested that petitions should be sent to the superior authorities, offering himself to defray all the expenses. Now, assuming this conversation to have really taken place, it is clear that there was no conspiracy in the matter. The speakers are represented as saying what they believed to be true, and in that case it was their duty to bring Mr. Lance's turpitude to the knowledge of his superiors. However, at this point they were interrupted by the arrival of a messenger, who said that they were wanted immediately at Urjun's house, and they all got into a carriage and drove off. The witness then returned to the Kotwalee in company with Bund Ali, whose evidence was to a similar effect. Neither of these, however, whispered a word of what they had heard until evidence was being sought for against the "Septem contra Lanceam." It further appears that Abdool Rahman had been punished last spring for misconduct which had been exposed by Salar Bux, and that Bund Ali had acted as counsel for one Newal Ki-hore, who had accused Salar Bux of corrupt exercise of authority. This happened on the 18th September, only three or four days after the evening he spent at Salar Bux's house.

A fifth witness turns up in one Jugal Ki-shore, who pretends that about five P.M. of the 13th or 14th September he met Unund Pershad, who took him into the Kotwal's house, to whom he was a stranger, and that he there saw two men whom he now recognises as Nanuk Chund and Budree Nath. They were consulting how they should get rid of Mr. Lance, and somebody proposed that a petition of complaint should be sent in to Government, when Unund Pershad observed that he would make Koor Bahadoor write it.

A drunken fellow, named Henry Mendes, apparently a Portuguese half-caste, now figures in the scene, and deposes that about eight A.M. of the 13th or 14th September Nanuk Chund and Akbar Ali came to him and asked him to write a petition for them. They took him to the Kotwal's house and read a paper in Hindostani to him, which they wanted him to translate into English, but as it imputed corrupt conduct to the magistrate he refused to have anything to do with it. Two men named Rikhey Fawarre and Badil Khan assert that they saw Mendes go away with Nanuk Chund and Akbar Ali, and waited at his house till he came back. Mendes added that he went to Allahabad for eight days, and returned to Cawnpore on the 7th October, and on the following day some one told him that a petition had been sent in against the magistrate, upon which he came forward and mentioned what had occurred. On the other hand, Mr. Du Narohna deposes that on the 13th, 14th, and 15th September Mendes was at his office making out bills from six to eleven A.M., and he positively declares that Mendes was in Cawnpore from the 1st to the 6th October, both inclusive.

Finally, Jwala Nath, Dwarka Pershad, and two others depose that one day after the commencement of the investigation Nanuk Chund, Budree Nath, and Koor Bahadoor were standing near a tree close to the magistrate's kitchen, when Jwala Nath asked those three men what they had gained by their complaint. Nanuk replied that he had sent a petition to the Sudder, and, if necessary, he would address the Government on the subject. On this the joint magistrate remarks that the witnesses "depose to having heard Nanuk Chund, Budree Nath, and Koor Bahadoor publicly boast of having sent the petition to the commissioner."

Upon this evidence the joint magistrate found all seven defendants guilty of "Calumny and conspiracy," and sentenced Nanuk Chund, Salar Bux, and Unund Pershad to six months' imprisonment and a fine of two hundred rupees each, or in default to six months' additional imprisonment with labour redeemable by a fine of one hundred rupees; and the other four to two months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of one hundred rupees each, with labour redeemable by a fine of fifty rupees. These unfortunate men naturally appealed to the higher court, and obtained a fair and impartial revival of the whole proceedings at the hands of Mr. F. B. Pearson, sessions judge. That experienced official had no difficulty in discovering the exact state of the case. There had been a conspiracy no doubt, but the appellants were the victims, not the conspirators. The judge, therefore, acquits them and releases them from bail, after making the following pungent remarks on the character of the evidence:—

"Of the witnesses adduced on the side of the prosecution several, as for instance, Misree Chowbey, Ali Kaza, Henry Mendes, Ikkhee Tewaree, Badil Khan, Bund Ali, Seetaram, and Bhugwandass, appeared to be needy, ill-conditioned persons: some of them are understood to be available, and some may fairly be believed to be available as witnesses for a price. Those of the witnesses who have not, like Abdool Rahman, a personal cause for disliking one or other of the defendants, may reasonably be believed to be under the influence of parties who are inimical to them. Such is the character of the witnesses for the prosecution; and the character of the evidence given by them is equally unsatisfactory. Their statements are in many respects loose, and on the most important points so opposed to probability as to be incredible. With the exception of the evidence of Misree Chowbey and Ali Kaza, who pretend to have seen the defamatory petition written and sent to the post, at a meeting of all the defendants, the remainder of the evidence is inconclusive as to the connection of the defendants with that petition. The entire evidence consists in the mass of reported conversations, a kind of evidence on which it is impossible to rely with confidence. It is easy to put words into another's mouth, or to distort by a slight alteration words actually uttered by another, and we know, by daily experience, that people of the strictest veracity and the most upright intentions, are often extremely inaccurate in their recollection of what they hear said. For this cause the different parts of the evidence, though designed to fit and blend together, do not fully accord, and the crude product resulting from their combination betrays at once contrivance and falsehood. My opinion is that not a single element of the proof is genuine or trustworthy. I have formed that opinion without reference to many of the pleas urged in defence or appeal by the defendants, or the evidence adduced on their behalf, which, if I had leisure, and if it were necessary for me to hear, would presumably tend to strengthen my opinion. Holding such an opinion, I cannot affirm the sentences passed by the joint magistrate on the appellants, but must annul them as resting on a basis of evidence too unsound and unsafe to sustain a judicial conviction and sentence of punishment."

But how long are young magistrates to be permitted to pervert justice through their ignorance of law, as well as of human nature? Such a case as this is a frightful scandal, and likely to do more towards alienating the middle and lower classes than acts of downright oppression would do. Clearly, they who administer the law; must first make themselves masters of the law, otherwise, there will be neither justice nor mercy in the land.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE FAMINE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your Mail of the 8th inst. I observe a most important article, page 185, on "The Indian Mutiny Fund."

It appears that there is a large balance in hand of upwards of £200,000, and a proposal is most judiciously and humanely made that it should be appropriated, either in whole or in part, to the relief of those suffering from the present awful famine so extensively raging in India. As a subscriber of £25 to the original fund, I most heartily and urgently concur in this proposal, and earnestly wish that it may be promptly carried out; and further, that a new subscription may be opened for additional aid.

Some seem to think four or five hundred deaths a-day may be an over estimate, but the probability is that it is rather under than over the calamity. Having witnessed such distress on several occasions, and on one had to meet the severe trials imposed, singlehanded, in the part of the country where famine raged in a most unmitigated degree, I feel called upon to press most devotedly the prompt adoption of remedial measures.—Yours, &c., H. H.

P.S.—Experience fully warrants the confident belief that the present sad times will be followed next year by a general prostration of the survivors.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary for India what arrangement was being made for the medical charge of her Majesty's native troops in India, regular and irregular, to ensure the language of the patients in hospital being understood by the European medical officer prescribing for them; and what number of European officers were for the future to be attached to each of her Majesty's native regiments in India, regular and irregular?

After a few observations from Mr. CRAWFORD, Sir M. FARQUHAR asked the Secretary for India whether, in future, upon the appointment of officers of the local or line regiments in India to the new staff corps, or any civil employment, they would be struck off the strength of their regiments, and whether the vacancies so caused would be filled by the officers next in succession in their respective regiments; and whether there was to be any distinction between the services in this respect?

Mr. VASSITTART asked the right hon. baronet the Secretary of State for India whether it was his intention to introduce any Bills relating to India during the present session; and, if so, whether he had any objection to state the nature and objects of such Bills?

Sir C. WOOD: In reply to the first question put to me by my hon. and gallant friend behind, as to the medical service in India, all I have to say is, that the whole question is under the consideration of the Indian Council, and I am not prepared to say what resolution they are likely to arrive at; but this I may state, that every pains will be taken to obviate the evils which have been so strongly felt in India of putting medical officers in charge of the hospitals who may be unable to converse with the natives under their charge. In answer to my hon. friend the member for the city of London, I may say that the statement to which he has referred was made, not by me, but by the Under-secretary for War, and related to the competition for surgeons in the general army of the Queen. What was said was that there were many cases in which natives of India and Africa, subjects of the Queen, could not be held entitled to serve in the general army. I do not consider at all that natives of India and Africa have a right to enter by competition generally into the army of the Queen. With regard to the hon. and gallant officer's second question, he is aware that the number of officers usually attached to an irregular regiment is three or four. The Government of India recommended that there should be six; and that recommendation, substantially, will be carried out. With regard to regular regiments no change has at present taken place. My own belief is that regiments would be more efficient, on the irregular system, of six officers, and certainly it would lead to the economy of the service. With regard to the question of the hon. baronet opposite, I have to state that it is not intended to place both services on identically the same footing. It is necessary to ensure to every Indian officer precisely the promotion he has a right to expect. That arrangement must be strictly maintained. When an officer is taken from his regiment and put into the staff corps he will be precisely in the same position with regard to that regiment in which he is at present on staff employment, and the effect of the arrangement will be this, that every Indian officer will attain his promotion precisely as soon—neither sooner nor later—than he would have done if no change whatever had been made in the Indian service. With regard to officers going from the line to the staff, the Commander-in-Chief has submitted to her Majesty, and her Majesty has approved an arrangement which will be eminently for the benefit of the Indian army. If a captain in the line, for instance, goes into the staff corps his position must be filled up, or the regiment would not be efficient; and the arrangement is that whenever a vacancy occurs in a line regiment by an officer going into the staff corps an officer of the Indian army will be placed in the line regiment, such Indian officer being a person of good character, recommended by the Governor-general and approved by the Commander-in-Chief. That will clearly be to the advantage of the Indian army, and must tend to obliterate all distinctions between them and the line. In regard to the question of the hon. member for Windsor, he has stated quite correctly what I said last year, that it had been my intention to introduce a Bill for the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts. In fact, I had a Bill in draught for the purpose; but he will remember that about the month of May there was great indisposition to deal with these Indian subjects, and I was unwillingly obliged to postpone the introduction of the Bill to carry out the intention of the Government in 1853, when I was President of the Board of Control. I have since consulted the Governor-general of India, thinking it desirable to avail myself of any information I could procure on the subject, and I had hoped before now to have received his observations. I have again prepared the Bill, but have rather delayed its introduction, expecting to receive information from India. The Bill is ready in draught, and will be introduced, I hope, at an early period. With regard to the other question, which is of still greater importance, as to alteration in the Legislative Council of India, the subject, as I stated last session, was under the consideration of the members of the Indian Council. What had occurred in India, and the different opinions held on the subject of taxation in India, had rendered this a matter of more grave consideration than it was at the early period of last session. I communicated with the Governor-general of India on the subject, and it is only to-day that I have received his opinions. All the information and assistance that could be expected from India having now come to hand, no time shall be lost in introducing those measures into the House.

ADDISCOMBE.

In answer to Sir F. SMITH,

Sir C. WOOD said there were a considerable number of cadets at Addiscombe undergoing training preparatory to going to Woolwich. There were a number of Indian cadets who would pass out in June; but the college would remain till other arrangements could be made for the preparatory training of engineers and artillery cadets.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 15.

DISARMAMENT IN INDIA.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH presented petitions from residents in India, complaining that in the Arms Act of last year Europeans and natives were placed on the same footing, and were equally required to deliver up the arms in their possession to the magistrates. The British residents maintained that under the Bill of Rights they were entitled to possess arms for their own protection, and that the Indian Government had not authority to take them away. It was right to add that in a circular issued by the Governor-general the objectionable features of the Act were done away with; but he was, nevertheless, bound to express his sympathy with the petitioners in the indignation which they expressed.

Earl DE GREY and RIXON said the Governor-general of India entertained the opinion, in which he was cordially supported by the Home Government, that it was impossible with fairness and justice to make a distinction in an Act of Parliament between her Majesty's native and European subjects. But in the Act as it passed the Council power was given to the Governor-general to exempt from its operation such persons and classes as he might think it unnecessary to bring under its provisions. A circular letter was accordingly issued, in which it was stated that the European residents ought properly to come under the exemption, not being persons from whom an improper use of these weapons was to be apprehended.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH could not appreciate the distinction drawn by the noble earl. If it were wrong to place natives and Europeans on a different footing in an Act of Parliament, could it be right to do so in a proclamation by the Governor-general?

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 15.

THE PRINCES OF TANJORE.

Mr. SMOLLETT called the attention of the Secretary of State for India to the judgment of the Privy Council delivered, on the 27th of July, 1859, in the appeal "Kamachee Boye Sahibee v. the East India Company," and asked if any orders had been sent to the Government of India for the disposal of the property under litigation in that suit, and if any adequate permanent provision would be made for the support of the descendants of the Princes of Tanjore.

Mr. H. BAILLIE said that the seizure of this private property was an act of plunder and robbery, deliberately planned and carried out by the Government of India, who seemed to suppose that the necessities of the State justified spoliation.

Mr. BRIGHT did not wish the right hon. baronet to restore the raj of Tanjore, but he was convinced that nothing could be more dangerous to the position of England in India than that at the death of a man against whom there was no charge whatever, the Government should by main force seize everything that he had—the accumulations of a life of prudence and economy, and leave his widow and other relations entirely unprovided for.

Sir C. WOOD replied that a report had been made by Sir Charles Trevelyan, the late Governor of Madras, to the Government of India on the subject of the distribution of the property of the late Rajah of Tanjore, but it had not yet reached this country, though he had a considerable time ago requested the Government of India to forward it to him, along with their own recommendation. He believed, however, though he had no official information on the subject, that the recommendation of the Indian Government was that the whole of the property should be distributed among the relations of the rajah, and it would be the duty of the Government to make provisions for every person who had a fair claim upon the property.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

Mr. W. EWART rose to ask the Secretary of State for India what information it was in his power to give respecting the administration of relief to the sufferers by the famine in India; and whether works of irrigation would be vigorously promoted as the best means of preventing such calamities in future. The hon. gentleman said that it would, of course, be absurd to attempt to make the Government responsible for the famine; but he was convinced that if works of irrigation had been encouraged some years ago, there would have been fewer deaths in India than had lately occurred.

Mr. CAVE was understood to suggest that some of the families now suffering from famine in the North-West Provinces might be brought down to the port of Calcutta, and removed thence to the Mauritius or the West Indies, where they would find far more profitable employment than they could ever hope to obtain in India.

Sir C. WOOD answered that it was perfectly true that the people in the North-West Provinces had suffered severely from famine, but he had much pleasure in stating that the accounts brought by the last mail were of a much more favourable character than any received before. The famine, it appeared, was confined within a much narrower area than was at first supposed. It had been truly observed that it was impossible for the Government to deal with the population on a great scale; but large subscriptions had been raised in Calcutta and elsewhere in India for the relief of the sufferers, and he believed that both the Government and the colonists had done everything in their power to mitigate the distress which prevailed in the famine-stricken districts. It happened that the part of the country in which the greatest destitution might be apprehended was that in which the Indian Government had executed the most gigantic work of irrigation that had been undertaken in India for many years. The Ganges Canal passed through the central part of the district, and he was happy to say that the people in its neighbourhood had at last become aware of its value. These works of irrigation were most advantageous to the country and profitable to the Government, and, as far as their means would permit, the authorities were prepared to proceed with them. He hoped that before long the easier state in the money-market would enable them to raise the money necessary for these great undertakings.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVES.

Colonel SYKES inquired whether, in future, all the services in India would be open to all the natives of India without distinction of caste or creed? He stated that at the present moment there were hundreds of Indians in this country studying at our Universities and public schools, with the view of entering the public service by the process of open competition. They had come here for that purpose upon the faith of a clause in the Act of 1833. The noble lord at the head of the Government had given an unqualified assurance that under that clause the rights of the natives of India to public employment remained intact; and in a proclamation issued in 1858 her Majesty declared it to be her will that all her subjects, of whatever race or creed, should be freely and impartially admitted to offices in her service the duties of which they might be qualified by their education, ability, and integrity, duly to discharge. Considerable alarm had been created among the natives of India pursuing their studies in England by an answer recently given in that House by the Secretary of State, to the effect that there were some services to which Indians could not be admitted, and by the last mail from India he had received petitions from the nobility, gentry, and other inhabitants of the Deccan complaining of their exclusion from public employment, and praying for redress. It had been said that persons born in India were disqualified for some services, because they could not be sent to cold climates. That argument would exclude the sons of Englishmen born in India as well as Hindoos, but it really had no foundation in reason, because there were hundreds of Indians living in this country in a state of robust health. It was hardly necessary to state that to cut off the hopes of employment in the public service would be a fatal blow to the progress of native education in India.

Sir C. WOOD said that he had not seen the letter from the sirdars which had been referred to; that, as circumstances had not changed since 1833, no alteration had been made as to the admission of natives to Government offices, and that he believed the remarks of the hon. and gallant member were calculated to produce unnecessary agitation and alarm.

DEATH OF SIR ARCHIBALD MACLAINE, K.C.B.—The colonelcy of the 52nd (Oxfordshire) Regt. of Foot has become vacant by the death of General Sir Archibald MacLaine, K.C.B., who expired on Saturday last at his house in Cumberland-street. The gallant veteran, who was in his 89th year, had seen much active service, particularly in the East Indies and in the Peninsula. He served in the Mysore campaign of 1797 against Tippoo Sultan, including the battle of Mallavelly, siege and storming of Seringapatam, where he received three wounds, from the effects of which he was confined in hospital for upwards of a year. In the capture of the Danish settlement of Tranquebar, and the Polygar war in 1801, including the battle of Ardingry and affair of Seringapatam, where he was wounded; in the Mahratta war of 1802-3-4 against Scindia, Holkar, and Berar Rajah, including the storm of Junnagur, siege and storming of Gawilghur, siege of Asseerghur (in which he was wounded), and the battle of Argaum. He was ordered home in 1804, in consequence of the severe wounds he received in the different actions from 1799 to 1804. In the Peninsular campaigns of 1810, 1811, and 1812, including the defence of Cadiz, the defence of Matagorda (an outwork of Cadiz, and a ruined redoubt, when taken possession of from the enemy) from the 22nd of February to the 22nd of April, 1810, during which long period Sir Archibald, then a captain in the old 94th Regt., made his gallant defence against a force of 8,000 men under Marshal Soult, keeping the enemy at bay for fifty-five days. For his services on that occasion he was decorated with the Order of the Bath, and received the Order of Charles III. of Spain. He served also at the battle of Barossa (in which he was dangerously wounded and had his horse killed), and at the capture of Seville. His commissions bore date—Ensign, 16th of April, 1794; Lieutenant, 29th of April, 1795; Captain, 22nd of December, 1804; Major, 4th of October, 1810; Lieutenant-colonel, 25th of January, 1813; Colonel, 22nd of July, 1830; Major-general, 23rd of November, 1841; Lieut.-general, 11th of November, 1851; General, 5th of June, 1855. He was appointed colonel of the 52nd Foot in February, 1847, and in 1832 was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath. The late general was the second son of Mr. Gillian MacLaine, Isle of Mull, by the eldest daughter of Macquarie, chief of Ulva.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—On Wednesday afternoon, March 6, a special meeting of the court of directors and proprietors was held at the East India House, Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of adopting a petition to her Majesty, praying for an increase of the allowance made by the Government for the salaries of the directors and other incidental expenses attendant upon the management of their own affairs. Colonel Sykes, M.P., occupied the chair. After a short discussion the petition for an increase was unanimously adopted, and a deputation appointed to wait upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

On his return the poor barber was ousted from his caste as having travelled into the country of the Mellachas, or barbarians. He appealed to his caste people for re-admission amongst them, and it was resolved that he should contribute a fine of Rs. 100 to the caste fund, and give a dinner party to 400 people to entitle him to be re-admitted into the caste.”

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The Indian papers received by the Bombay Mail of the 27th of February continue to give the most harrowing accounts of the ravages of the famine. Instead of the area of suffering being less than was expected, as was stated by Sir Charles Wood in the House of Commons, it appears to be rapidly extending, and every week, of course, adds to the intensity of the distress in the districts that were the first afflicted. The Government has deputed Colonel Baird Smith to make a second report upon the subject, and to point out any remedies that may suggest themselves to his active and experienced mind. The voluntary contributions from Bombay alone will amount to £12,500, but this aid, munificent in itself, is so totally inadequate to the necessities of the occasion that relief must positively be afforded from this country. The Calcutta Committee are so fully conscious of the fact, that they have addressed a letter to the Lord Mayor of London, praying his lordship to lend his great influence in rousing the people of England to some degree of sympathy for their starving fellow-subjects in the East.

The British force engaged in Sikkim was posted, on the 10th of last month, at a place called Namchi, about twelve miles from the Runjeet river. As to the successful result of the expedition there need be no apprehension.

Major-General Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., took his oaths and seat, on the 11th of February, as an ordinary member of the Council of the Governor-general, in the room of Lieutenant-General Sir James Outram, Bart., G.C.B., resigned.

On the 16th of the same month Mr. Laing delivered an important speech on the Currency Bill left incomplete by his predecessor. He admitted that Mr. Wilson's views on the Currency Question were not approved by the Home Government, and were totally at variance with his own opinions. A tolerably clear resumé of the new Bill will be found among our extracts from the Hurkaru, and we shall probably have occasion to revert to the subject in our next issue. In the meantime a general idea of Mr. Laing's scheme may be gathered from the following leading points:—

The issues of the Presidency Banks to be called in, in favour of Government notes made legal tender.

The Banks will manage the circulation of the Presidencies, and it is proposed that they shall establish branches for the same purpose in the Mofussil.

The notes will be legal tender in each presidency town.

Twenty rupees will be the lowest denomination of note issued.

The Banks will issue notes to any amount against bullion, one fourth of which may be gold, which will be receivable at a fixed price, liable to alteration only upon six months' notice.

The Banks will be allowed, beyond this, to issue four crores of notes against Government securities in their hands.

In return for this privilege, the Banks will undertake the duties now devolving upon the presidency treasuries,—namely, the custody of the cash balance and the payment of all accounts, dividends, &c.

The measure to come into operation as soon as the sanction of the Secretary of State is received.

On his way to Calcutta the Viceroy diverged from the regular route to pay an unexpected visit to Lucknow. Several mysterious, if not astute, reasons of state have been assigned for this step; but it appears that his Excellency's chief, and probably his sole, motive was to ascertain, from personal observation, how far the revived talooqdaree system had justified his expectations. Judging from the noble earl's speech to the talooqdars, the experiment has proved all that could be desired.

Sir Hugh Rose intends, it is said, to proceed very shortly to Calcutta, in order to superintend on the spot the re-organisation of the Indian army.

His Excellency Sir William Thomas Denison, K.C.B., arrived at Madras by the steamer Arracan on the 18th, and was received with the usual honours. His Excellency took the prescribed oaths and his seat as Governor and President in Council under the usual salute.

THE OUTWARD MAILS.

The Ceylon (from Southampton 4th of March) reached Malta at six A.M. on the 13th, and left at midnight for Alexandria.

The Euzine (from Marseilles 13th of March) arrived at Malta at two A.M., and sailed again at eight A.M., on the 16th.

BENGAL.

THE PERIODICAL LULL.

India waits on Mr. Laing. Mr. Laing waits on the local Governments and the return of Lord Canning to the capital. The Legislative Council amuses itself before the public with discussions on the land-tenures of Malacca, and seems to have so little to do that occasionally the members take a holiday when they ought to legislate. But in select committee they are none the less busy deciding on the organisation and discipline of the new constabulary. Meanwhile India passes through another of those lulls both of news and political excitement which recur periodically. The last and worst was that just a year ago, which preceded Mr. Wilson's speech of 18th February. For more than two months after his arrival, the public sat patiently before the curtain, from which occasionally issued sounds of the manager's preparations, and behind which fitted the lights of the scene-shifter, and was heard the heavy tread of the great actor. Patience was just exhausted, curiosity was just quickened to the point of excitement, when the curtain drew up and the financial wizard played well to a crowded house. 'Twas a weary but a splendid five-act piece relieved, while the action was lengthened, by the dangerous antics of a rival actor who perished soon after he entered on the stage, but not before he had complicated the plot and caused a glaring violation of the unities. The denouement would have been almost as triumphant as the prologue was boastful, had not the leading actor been accidentally killed on the stage at the end of the third act. The manager made a faint attempt to continue the play with an inferior company, and at first the audience were content to be pleased with the performance of men who were both good-natured and willing. But the action dragged along, the actors lost confidence in their own ability, and the public gladly resolved to wait for the continuance of the play till a first-class artist should have been engaged. They have waited long, and now want to know when the fourth and fifth acts will begin—when the new player will be ready for his part.

Mr. Laing does wisely in reserving his strength till the completion of the Imperial Budget for 1861-62. That Budget is now being prepared by the various local Governments. Each is now busily putting together the estimated items of expenditure for the year which begins in May next, and after a very microscopic fashion pursuing the art of economy in pice. A chuprassee is being sacrificed here, and a clerk on ten rupees a month there; the daring imagination of one Lieutenant-Governor has even soared to the height of sacrificing a judgeship. Secretaries are attempting reforms now on the same scale as the ministers of Louis XVI., and as poor Francis Joseph of Austria, all unaware of the revolution which will soon burst over them. They do not understand that England will have reduction of expenditure; though in the East they are innocent of all knowledge of the Oriental proverb that the little finger of England will be thicker than the loins of Finance Commissions. And so each local Government will send up its Budget to the new Audit Board. As even the Bengal Budget has not yet gone in, we cannot expect that the whole materials of an Imperial Budget will be in the hands of the Audit Board, or be submitted to Mr. Laing before the 1st of March. Then will come the tug of war, and when the conflict is over Mr. Laing will speak the prologue to the fourth act, and publish the first scientific, accurate, and economical Budget India has seen. We again warn him that he will gain the lasting success he dreams of only by reducing expenditure. Should the process be as slow as it will be painful to the departments, we shall be content to wait, if only the result be finally accomplished. Let him beware of references, of promising to "consider," of yielding to the blandishments of secretaries and their chatter about experience. Let him be a despot.

For he must by this time be aware it is folly to think of imposing a universal License and Tobacco tax. Our opposition to the latter has been consistent, and it will triumph. Mr. Laing is not the man to raise a revolt for ten lakhs of rupees, and the most experienced collectors of the North-West and Bengal, as well as of Madras, assure us the tax will not yield that sum. And the famine has placed us in this dilemma that we must either make the License-tax applicable to only a portion of India, which is fatal to any scheme of taxation professing to be at once universal and uniform in its incidence, or suspend it altogether till better times. It exists already in Madras as moturpha and vesabaddy, and in Pegu it is even popular as a poll-tax. It could be introduced into Bengal and Bombay to-morrow, either as a poll-tax or a shop and stall-duty, levied by the landholders, with the greatest ease. It is familiar to the classes of Oude and the Punjab who do not pay Income-tax. There is no reason why districts so rich in traders as Benares, Mirzapore and Goruckpore, and why the whole class of grain-dealers who are now making fortunes by the famine, should escape. The principle of a tax on traders, as such is too just and too precious to be lost sight of in any scheme of Indian taxation, especially one which professes that the tax on incomes will be temporary. That tax, moreover, even during these five years, promises to yield but a trifle. Benares, the city of retired millionaires, offers £13,000, a fifth part of what it ought to give, and for political reasons the Lieut. Governor and the Governor-General express their joy. While the town of Akyab will yield so much as £10,000, and that of Surat £12,280, Calcutta, a city which boasts of a trade of thirty millions sterling, whose numerous banks and public companies scorn any dividend under 12 per cent., whose merchants are the princes of the East, whose shopkeepers are the envy of their brethren in Regent-street, whose palaces are filled with native landholders boasting of a wealth before which that of England's nobility pales—this capital of Southern Asia is assessed at £100,000! Of this sum £45,000 is from house property alone, leaving only £55,000 from land, merchandise, trade, and public companies. If Benares and Calcutta are to be examples to the rest of India, then farewell to the Income-tax as the sheet-anchor of finance, farewell to public honesty, morality and honour. Yet this will be the result of the Income-tax for the first two years at least. Can we then do without a license or trade tax? Or can there be any objection to passing it at once into law, leaving it to the Governor-General to exempt the famine-stricken districts?—Friend of India.

MR. LAING'S SPEECH ON THE CURRENCY BILL.

Mr. Laing, in presenting the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for providing a Government Paper Currency, said that he would make a short statement of the changes made in the Bill to vindicate himself personally, for he thought that there was nothing more mischievous than that every fresh Finance Minister should, for the sake of his own theories, make a sweeping change in things either passed into law or just about to be so; but, he said, the despatch of the Secretary of State had made a great change in the principle of Mr. Wilson's Bill. In criticising Mr. Wilson's measures, he hoped that it would not be thought that he intended any disrespect to that lamented statesman's memory, for although he could not approve of his plan, still it was to his genius that the first impulse in the direction of a change in the currency was due.

Mr. Wilson's scheme was a very large and comprehensive one. As to its working, up to the extent of six or seven crores of rupees, it would have been much the same as that of Sir Charles Wood, but it was one which might and would have extended to some fifty crores of rupees. By Mr. Wilson's scheme the State was to act as a banker issuing promises to pay, and in times of emergency and pressure hoping to fulfil those promises by selling its securities. Now he did not think the State could do this with safety. The weight of authority was on the side of Sir Charles Wood's scheme, Sir Robert Peel, Lord Overstone, and other great financial authorities, all thought the principle involved in it, that of the Bank Charter Act of 1844, the only safe one. There was, however, a small knot of very able men, among whom Mr. Wilson was the chief, who held other views. He (Mr. Laing) was sure, however, that there was no profit without risk, and if the Government were to lay itself out for the banker's profits it must also take the banker's risks. He then pointed out how the risk of a Government was much greater even than that of a bank by its trade being confined to only its own securities, while it could not contract its circulation when it saw danger coming as a bank can. He deprecated the issue of a large number of small inconvertible notes, and instanced the bad effects produced by them in Austria. He said that there was one principle on which all were agreed, viz., that notes should never be issued except in exchange for silver, but he thought that Mr. Wilson's scheme would be so worked as that an addition would be made to the circulating medium. He pointed out the danger that would ensue to both commerce and the Government itself if the rise in wages and in the price of commodities were stimulated by an over-issue of paper money, which he thought would be the result of Mr. Wilson's plan.

Mr. Laing then unfolded his own plan. He intended to fix the limit of the notes to be issued at four crores of rupees (the issue of the Presidency Banks at present being five crores). This limit would not be overstepped, except in consequence of permission given by a fresh Bill in the Legislative Council. The notes of the banks would be replaced by the Government notes. The reserve in specie, and the cash balances of the empire, which are never much less than 10 or 12 millions, would be liable for the security of these notes. Mr. Wilson's scheme required a complicated machinery, but the present plan requires none. The existing banks would, he thought, be the best agency for converting and managing the note circulation. The Mint would be the head-quarters of the Issue department. Any bank or private party having bullion to be coined would send it to the Mint Master and receive notes in exchange from him, instead of Mint certificates. The management of the paper currency by the bank would be a great saving to the Government, and would be much more satisfactorily done. If any one required change for a fifty rupee note, the Government would say to him, "Go to our agents, the Bank." Then if the Bank accepted forged notes the loss would fall on the Bank, not the Government. All the correspondence about lost, or stolen, or stopped notes could be much better carried on by the Bank than by Government. Practically it was intended to introduce the system by which the Bank of England manages all the Government accounts, and negotiations are already going on with the Bank authorities to put an end to what he must call the barbarous system of having immense boxes of rupees locked up in the Treasury, and of making all payments in hard cash. How far this could be extended to the interior of the country he could not say. Experiments had been made to establish branch banks, but these had hitherto failed. However, he hoped that the opening up of the country by railways would make this more possible and profitable than formerly, and that an influx of European capital and enterprise would create a necessity for them. Another thing that was proposed by the select committee was the modified introduction of gold into the circulation. He thought it was barbarous to exclude the gold of Australia from India, so that an Australian merchant who wished to buy rice should have to send his gold first to England and there get it changed into silver, which he would have to send here again. Gold is an universal medium of exchange, and carries its own intrinsic value with it. The question of the double standard, however, was a very intricate one, and exceedingly complicated. He would propose, therefore, not to make gold a legal tender, but to issue it against silver specie to an extent not exceeding one-fourth of the notes to be issued against bullion, and at a rate which would be fixed every six months. For example, in the four crores of paper currency, two crores would be issued against securities, and of the remaining two crores to be issued against bullion 5,000,000<sup>l</sup>. worth might be issued in gold. To encourage the introduction of gold, he would fix the rate as high as could possibly be done without loss, and in course of time when it came to be more highly appreciated, and to rise to a premium, they might be able to fix some rate at which gold might be taken as a legal tender. If practically, he stated, we find that the attempt to introduce a gold currency does not succeed, we will not attempt to force it upon the people.

Another important question was, as to the division of the country into circles. These, according to the original Bill, were to be sixteen or seventeen in number, and the necessity of their formation is quite apparent, as it would be impossible to make notes issued at one place payable everywhere, as this would involve the necessity of keeping a very large reserve adequate for the whole circulation at each point, and it would not be right to make notes legal tender at any great distance from the place where they can be exchanged for cash. Still it was true that even if there were seventeen circles, the notes would be legal tender at a very great distance from the place of issue, and the division of India into circles would be in many respects an evil, and it was very desirable that the circulation should be as uniform as possible. It was proposed, therefore, that instead of at once dividing India into circles, a discretionary power should be given to the Government to appoint, from time to time, such circles as might be found convenient, always providing that the presidency towns should continue to be the centres of circles. Government will thus be able to feel its way and find by experience to what extent it will be necessary to resort to the circle system. It might be that as confidence was extended, the notes issued at the Presidencies, supplemented with a gold currency, would come so generally into use throughout India as to supersede in a great measure the necessity for local notes. But this discretion should be left with the Government. The Council should only lay down broad principles, and if they refrained from further interference such evidence of their practical wisdom would render them respected.

As to the lowest denomination of note which should be issued as legal tender, he remarked that it would be obviously inconvenient if two sorts of notes were issued, the one legal tender, and the other not; it seemed, therefore, desirable to make all notes uniform in this respect. The committee had come to the resolution that it would not at present be advisable to issue notes of a lower denomination than Rs. 20, bearing a certain analogy to the £5 notes of the Bank of England. Distrust and hostility would be excited if the humbler classes were compelled to take Rs. 5 or Rs. 10 notes. Two considerations with reference to this point weighed with the Government.—First, it was advisable to proceed cautiously. If there were a demand for smaller notes, and the principal merchants or bankers desired their issue, nothing would be easier than to bring in a Bill hereafter authorising it. Moreover, as was stated by Sir Charles Wood, our great object should be to inspire confidence, and when the public have grown familiar with the larger notes the limit may be extended. The second consideration which weighed with the Government was that, if under the proposed provisions as to gold it should come into general circulation, the use of small notes would be superseded.

The rest of the amendments were chiefly in matters of detail and would be seen by reference to the Bill itself, but he would mention one alteration with regard to the exchange of notes for bullion the rate would be 970 rupees for 1,000 tolas of silver.

The Bill, as amended in committee, will be sent home for approval, which he believed it would receive. It would be returned probably in about three months, and in the interval the Government would negotiate arrangements with the banks.

Mr. Laing concluded with a few general remarks as to the new era of peace and prosperity for India, which he believed we were entering upon.—Hurkaru.

DHULEEP SING IN HINDOOSTAN.

Maharajah Dhuleep Sing is now in Calcutta, whither he has arrived from England to visit his mother Ranees Chunda, lately a political refugee in Nepal. The circumstances of the meeting between the mother and son have so much of romantic interest, that we propose to give a brief sketch of the career of this remarkable woman, for the information more especially of that class of readers who may not be versed in the political history of India during the last quarter of a century.

In the East, where the will of the despot is the only patent of nobility, persons of the humblest origin not unfrequently attain to princely dignity and power. Ranees Chunda affords an instance of this: her father was a menial servant of Runjeet Sing, and the manner in which she was introduced to that monarch's notice is so naively characteristic of the manners of an Oriental court, that we extract the following narrative from a well-known and authentic work on Sikh affairs of that period:—

"Munnoo Sing, a poor jat of the Oolak caste, and a native of Gujerawalla, or a small village in its vicinity, at an early age entered the service of Runjeet Sing as a dog-keeper, but after about fifteen years' faithful service in this humble office, he was raised to the station of a door-keeper. He was, however, always regarded as a sort of buffoon, and in that character was privileged to exercise such wit as he possessed at the expense of the Maharajah and his chiefs, even in public darbar. This man was constantly telling Runjeet that he had a daughter, the most beautiful creature in the world, whom he would give to the Maharajah as his wife, and that she would make the old monarch young again. After some time he produced the little girl, and for months carried her on his shoulders to the darbar, or wherever Runjeet went. The old chief is said to have been pestered day and night by his importunities; but for some time he treated the matter as a joke, and nothing more. Yet he was vain enough to be pleased with the idea that Munnoo and others should believe and call him a young man, and he felt some pride in being the object of the facetious remarks of the Court and town on the occasion of his anticipated nuptials with a girl who might pass for his great-grandchild. At length, whether out of one of those whims which were so characteristic of the old Lion, or out of consideration for poor Munnoo, who had taken so much trouble on his account, or to put an end to the buffoonery of which he was the object, he one day eased the shoulders of his would-be father-in-law by committing the girl to the care of one Jewahir Mull, a rich Hindoo merchant of Umritsir, then in attendance at the Maharajah's Court. This man received orders to take the young Chunda home with him, and to rear her up at his house in Umritsir. Munnoo was overjoyed at this happy result of his labours, and in his exultation ventured to tell the Maharajah that as the world had now recognised him (Munnoo) as his father-in-law, it mattered little whether he did so or not."

Of the early years of the Ranees we shall say nothing. Female purity, never much prized among the Sikhs, was not to be looked for in such a Court as Runjeet Sing's. The fluent pens of our political officers are wont to expatiate over largely upon the morals of Indian princes and princesses with whom they come in contact, and the character of Ranees Chunda has met with but little mercy at their hands, even when she had ceased to be politically dangerous, and was a prisoner at Chunar. Lord Dalhousie, in his despatches to the Court, thought it not beneath him to place on record the publicly-received rumours as to her private conduct. Much of what has been alleged against her is doubtless more than probable; but if we reflect upon her early training, and the elevation which followed it, and the intoxication of wealth and power, we shall cease to wonder at excesses which partiality and political bias have no doubt exaggerated.

No marriage ceremony ever took place between the Maharajah and Ranees Chunda though she passed as his wife. And though it was well known that the former was not the father of Dhuleep Sing, yet he had acknowledged the child, and that was enough, according to Sikh notions, to establish his paternity, and to confer upon Ranees Chunda the authority of Regent mother after his death. The Ranees took a leading part in the political intrigues and commotions that convulsed the Lahore state during the stormy period that elapsed between the death of Runjeet Sing and the occupation by the British in 1846, evincing on many occasions great energy and decision of character. The history of that period is one unbroken succession of murders, plots, and revolutions. The empire consolidated and united by the wisdom of Runjeet Sing, began to decline the moment his guiding hand was withdrawn. The Khalsa, whose valour under Runjeet had built up the most singular empire of modern times, threw off at his death all obedience, and degenerated into mere banditti. The Panches of the Sikh army sold the short-lived empire of Runjeet's successors, as the Prætorian guards sold Rome, to the highest bidder; and disorder and misrule prevailed; till, happily for the Punjab, the turbulent soldiery turned their arms upon the British territory, and the campaign took place which resulted in the establishment of a mixed Government under the control of a British resident. Ranees Chunda contrived to bring herself and her son safely through, and, on the inauguration of the new Government, was permitted to reside at Lahore. The resident, Sir Frederic Currie, conceived, however, such a dread of her intriguing powers, that she was shortly afterwards arrested and sent a prisoner to Hindoostan, and confined in the fort of Chunar. With her usual adroitness she contrived to elude the vigilance of her guard, and caused one of her slave girls to personate her when the officer came round whose duty it was to visit her place of confinement, so as to lull suspicion while she effected her escape from the fort in disguise, and found an asylum at the court of Nepal. Here she appears to have remained for some years unmolested by the British Government, and though since her exile her name has once or twice been mentioned in connection with hostile intrigues in Hindoostan, it seems probable that these rumours are based more upon her antecedent career than actual occurrences. For many years past she has scarcely been heard of in India, and now to find her, after all her vicissitudes, emerging from her obscurity to meet her son Dhuleep Sing, in the British Indian capital, is indeed not the least wonderful incident in her strange eventful history. What a host of recollections will not the sight of that son call up. The infant whom she held up before the fiery warriors of the Khalsa, as the successor of Runjeet Sing, in all the barbaric pomp and pageant of an Oriental sovereign, returns to her in manhood a Christian, nurtured in the bosom of that people by whom his father's monarchy was overthrown. We sincerely trust that a yearning for her own faith and early predilections may call forth nothing on the part of Ranees Chunda to alloy the unmixed happiness such a meeting should inspire.

As for the political significance of Dhuleep Sing's visit to India, it is, we think, extremely likely that his presence in this country will greatly unsettle the minds, and excite the military restlessness of the Sikhs, whose devotion to the memory of their old chief is unbounded. It would be in the last degree imprudent to allow him to visit the Punjab, or, at any rate, to make any stay there; the fact of his visit being known, there will, of course, be no lack of Gooroos and Brahmins to operate upon the ardour of the Sikh mind, by means of prophecy, and to connect his presence with that coming struggle for independence which it is certain the Sikhs are looking forward to. We know beyond a doubt what has been the tone of the private conversation of the Sikh soldiery ever since they stepped in so opportunely to save our tottering empire in 1857, and as to what may or may not take place in this country in the shape of sudden revolt, he would be a bold man that would venture to predict. It is probable the Maharajah's visit has been dictated solely from filial affection, and if so, it is most creditable to his feelings and character that he has left the highest society in Europe to seek his mother in her sorrow and exile in Hindoostan,

Nor, for our part, bad as Ranee Chunda has been represented to have been, bad as she may have been, do we hesitate to hope that the joy of seeing her son, after such strange vicissitudes in the lives of both, may compensate her for the sufferings which have surrounded her later years.—Bombay Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN NAPIER.—On Monday, the 11th Feb., the 8th Hussars having just arrived from Nusseerabad at this station, was asked to dinner by the officers of the artillery; and after dinner most of the officers rode towards home together. Captain Napier cantered up to them, who were all quietly walking their horses at the time, and just as he reached them his pony, a headstrong, restive animal, got on the side of the road and fell over a small drain. Captain Napier was taken up at once, but he was insensible. He remained in that state until the afternoon of the 13th, when he expired. It was found he had sustained a fracture of the base of the skull. He was only twenty-three years of age, and a very quiet, amiable young man, much liked in the regiment, which he recently joined from the 11th Hussars. He was an only son, and would have inherited a handsome property in Scotland, had he survived. Captain Napier was no relation or connection of either the late Sir Charles Napier, or the present General Sir Robert Napier. His remains were conveyed to the grave-yard on the 14th.—Mofussilite.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S CAMP, having halted for several days at Kurnaul, to enable his Excellency to rejoin from Muttra and inspect the stud at the former station, was expected at Umballa, on the 11th February, where the sporting men hope he will stay to witness the races which are to commence on the 14th; but this is doubtful. Sir Hugh Rose's arrangements, as at present known, are, to proceed by dawk, from Umballa, and visit the stud depot at Saharunpore, proceeding thence to Deyrah to inspect the Sirmoor Battalion, paying a flying visit to the Landour Depot and Roorkee, where he will see, besides the college and workshops, the 2nd European Fusiliers, and Sappers and Miners. Returning to Umballa, the Commander-in-Chief will visit Simla, for a day or two, to select a residence, and will then decide as to whether his camp will move on to Lahore, or break up at Umballa. The latter, owing to the scarcity and high price of grain, &c., would be the wisest plan, and one which, from the scenes of misery he must have lately witnessed, Sir Hugh Rose is likely to adopt.

NUSSEERABAD, Feb. 13.—The accounts that I have heard of the distress round about here are truly most awful. Those who have the means of migrating are all doing so from their famine-cursed country; and my military informants told me that on the line of march they had passed many camps of these unfortunate refugees from hunger hurrying on in search of a new Canaan. Everywhere was exhibited the tragedy of the deserted village. The aged and the infirm could be hardly said to be tenants where the jackal and dog had undisputed sway. Human beings were seen grubbing up the ant-hills, and robbing the occupants of their tiny hoards of precious grains of precious corn. This, I assure you, is no fancied picture: it is a fearful tragedy of real life.

BAREILLY, Feb. 15.—I send an abstract of the proceedings of a meeting held on the 8th, for the consideration of measures for the relief of the poor and the destitute. The principal residents of the station and the city, being present at Mr. Inglis's house, Brigadier Milman, who was voted into the chair, opened the meeting by reading letter No. 1,441, dated 19th January, 1861, from the Secretary to Government North West Provinces to the Commissioner of the Agra division. For the information of the native gentry the letter was translated by the magistrate. The following resolutions embrace the operations of the general committee at its first meeting. 1st. Relief in money granted to women and children of the higher station in life, who have no male relatives to depend on; who are known to be in extremely destitute circumstances; and who cannot be expected to attend at the place where cooked rations are given. 2nd. That a sub-committee be appointed, 1st for the superintendence of the labouring gang. 2nd, for the issue of cooked rations. 3rd, for the relief of the women and children alluded to in the first resolution.—Delhi Gazette.

PATNA, Feb. 9.—There is little or no chance of famine here; for though the rubber crops have partially failed, yet the fertility of our soil will make amends for all. Still for all that, the market is becoming tighter every day, and complaints are daily heard to the effect that the Banians are taking advantage of the times. Unless a good look-out is kept on the sapient deeds of these worthies, it is much to be feared that the poorer classes will suffer. The magistrate's attention should be called to the malpractices of these clever rogues. We wish it would rain. The weather has been rather strange of late. Clouds are to be seen every morning, but they are determined to tantalise us. Before evening all is as dry and dusty as ever. The river, also, has gone down a good deal, and the steamers find it rather difficult to come on.

ETA.—The distress from the famine in this district is frightful. A little child was left by its parent one night close to the bungalow here and sent into the thannah. A subscription has been got up in Eta for their relief, and all the residents subscribe 20 to 30 rupees a month. The native zemindars, too, give something. One Bahadur Sing 5, Morad Allie 5, the Eta Rajah (the old Putwarraah of Belgram now dubbed a Rajah for his services during the rebellion) only 30 rupees. This man got estates from Government to the value of two lakhs of rupees' worth. The writer has put his name for Rs. 15, and Rs. 30 on the part of his principal. As we shall be able to send any very poor and deserving person to Eta where he will be fed daily—upwards of 200 poor devils were fed in the presence of the civil surgeon here on Sunday—we shall have to draw largely on the central fund at Agra, for as soon as it is generally known that relief is administered at Eta thousands will flock there. A fund has been raised at Futtighur. We must both look at home before we can subscribe to other stations.—Hurkaru.

CANNOPRE, Feb. 12.—The change of the moon has taken place, but, alas! not the sign of a cloud is there to be seen in the azure heavens, though the weather still continues cool and pleasant. Great depression prevails in every branch of trade in almost every city of the Upper Provinces. The Income-tax has created a bad feeling, and added to the miseries of a dreadful famine. Though nothing can be handsomer or more liberal than the subscriptions towards the relief of the starving population, the distress is real and most terrible, and must be relieved by work being found for "idle hands to do." The bulk of the natives do not understand the necessity for their being taxed, and their fertile imaginations surmise all sorts of reasons for such a measure. This commercial depression, added to the Income-tax, and the high price of provisions and European articles, and goods of every description, makes people with small salaries and means find it a very hard matter to make both ends meet. Owing to the destruction of houses during the mutiny, the few that have been rebuilt are of enormous hire, the rent asked being just double the amount it was before the rebellion. Many of the former bungalows are still in ruins, the owners of them having been killed; and a few have been rebuilt, but not enough to meet the demand for them. I see by the Delhi Gazette that some coolies in digging a mound at the ex-Imperial city, found old coins amounting to about 1,000 rupees. It would be a good speculation to employ the starving people by digging about the ruins of old Delhi, where, I have no doubt, immense treasures lie buried in different parts of brick-covered earth and debris of the crumbling edifices. The Nwab Mahommed Ullee Khan Bahadur has just left Cannopore for your good city of Bombay, from whence he will proceed to Bagdad to visit his mother, the widow of Agah Meer, one of the renowned Ministers of Lucknow, who died here many years ago, leaving enormous wealth behind him to be divided between his four sons and other members of his family.—Bombay Times.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—We have excellent news, says the Lahore Chronicle, for the members of the Uncovenanted Service, the authenticity of which is undoubted, as it comes direct from one who had a personal interview with Sir C. Wood, who has acceded to all and more than all asked for in the memorial, and rejected the idea of any deductions from salaries. The Uncovenanted Service is to be divided into two grades, the upper one to be on an equality as to pay, rank, &c., with the Covenanted Civil Service, and to be eligible for every situation hitherto monopolised by that class of public servants. The second grade will consist of men unfitted by education or capacity for other situations than that of clerks, but every one who possesses the necessary qualifications may aspire to the first grade, from which no man will be excluded by reason of birth or colour. The general correctness of the foregoing may be relied on, and it will not be long ere the Gazette confirms it in many individual instances.

MUSSOOREE, Feb. 12.—We have been in hopes here of more snow; but alas! not a sign is there of another fall: indeed, the sky has been looking too clear, and the weather is waxing warmer daily, to leave the least hope of our expectations being realised. The weather here being, in a great measure, an index of the state of that on the plains, we look wistfully to its alternations of cold and heat. Our fears become greater daily of the prevalence of extreme famine below. Small sums have been collected here by the worthy Superintendent of the Doon for the starving poor. We have, I am happy to say, not yet witnessed the heartrending scenes that meet the eye down-country; but yet, I regret to say, I have met with objects suffering from the effects of famine in the Doon; and a few miserable creatures have even found their way up here; escaping, as they fancy, from starvation, but only to thrust themselves into the jaws of death, if the charity of the passers-by do not afford relief. I was in the Dehra Doon two days ago, and not only met with objects of charity, but also with numbers of men, women, and children on their way into Oude from Rajpore. An exodus from this place (Rajpore) is taking place daily; the bazaar there does not look the same, the bustle of life is being gradually lessened into quietness, indicating the effects of famine, enhanced by the want of labour, in this time of the year more especially. In a month or so hence, when visitors and others for the ensuing season keep coming up, there will be employment; but how are the poor creatures to eke out existence until then? The new road from Roorkee has certainly found employment and bread for a great number, but then there are the helpless who cannot toil, who should be looked to likewise. It is believed that the ravages of famine have not shown themselves at all in these parts, but this is a mistake.—Delhi Gazette.

A NEW COMING TRIBULATION.—The arrival of Dulleep Singh in India is, so say the Sikhs, a most portentous event, for they now, more fully than ever, predict the fulfilment of their long-standing prophecy, viz., that in 1862 a contest between the British and the Sikhs will take place, when the latter will prove victorious and regain possession of the Punjab. The advent of Dulleep Singh, they say, is a proof that he is sent by God to be their king, and to be the leader of the Sikhs in this important and auspicious struggle. A few Sikhs in these parts have already resigned private service, and betaken themselves to the Punjab in anticipation of the coming struggle. Dulleep Singh, however, it is to be feared, will sadly disappoint the expectations of his countrymen, and thereby satisfy them that their Brahmins and sacred books have deceived them into believing a false prophecy. His education, his knowledge of British strength and resources, his early habits of Christian training, all forbid the remotest hope being indulged of Dulleep Singh waging war against the British, or encouraging his countrymen to do so. If the Government intend that Dulleep Singh should have any power or rule in the Punjab, no apprehensions need be entertained of his fidelity. Should the reverse unfortunately take place, then no amount of education, knowledge, Christian training, or fellowship with Christians, can be a safeguard against Asiatic perfidy; for of all natives of this country, it may safely be said that Dulleep Singh has had more advantages in the above respect than any native of India has had. The mother of Dulleep Singh has left Nepal, and is now on her way down to Calcutta to see her son. She passed the Behar provinces en route to Calcutta about six days ago. After so long a separation, the meeting between the mother and her only son can be better conceived than described. It is only to be hoped that the mother's early superstitious prejudices may not in any way mar the happiness and joy of this meeting, on account of Dulleep Singh having embraced the Christian religion.—Delhi Gazette.

TIPPERAH, Feb. 8.—Since writing to you the other day we have heard that the magistrate has captured five Keangs, being probably the followers of the Kookies, one and all of their gang having artfully escaped into dense jungles towards the east on the Sunday following. The magistrate is still at Oodeypoor, with his little band of forty-five men, holding a local inquiry, but we are tired of investigations without catching the guilty, since the last year. The captured Keangs have denied their complicity, but as no further evidence as to their guilt, such as to ensure a conviction in our Courts, was forthcoming, they have been, as before, made over to that independent potentate the Rajah of Tipperah, on condition of his delivering them when asked for again. It is the magistrate's intention, we hear, to go on another expedition into the Hills through Khundul, where he is about to proceed by the Hill path. Though we doubt of his success in getting the villains, still we believe that if he burns the barns and habitations (built of raw bamboo leaves and boughs of trees), it will be something in the way of punishing them. Two companies of the Kamroopso Regiment, under command of Captain Nicholson, have arrived here. They have their quarters in the station for the present, a detachment of 50 men being only located at the Beebe Bazar. It may be probable that they will go in a few days to reinforce the Magistrate. The Tipperah Rajah has at last sent about 50 wretched Chassas or ploughmen, clothed in the Sepoy uniform and armed with muskets without bayonets, to strengthen the Magistrate, but they, instead of rendering any assistance, will rather put him to trouble, for (though there may be no probability) if any scuffle ensues, they will be the first to bolt, leaving their muskets for the enemy's advantage. We have often said, and it is also the general conclusion, that the present Rajah is unable to rule such an extensive and troublesome, though advantageous territory; it is only the British sceptre and its terrible name that can put its subjects to awe and obedience. When will this come to pass? The Tipperah hills are not so unfruitful that they will not yield the expenses. Their elephants' tusks, mines, paddy, vegetables, cotton and wood, as they are at present, will soon make up the charges for rendering it habitable as well as for maintaining a force for its perpetual security. We would insist upon our Government to turn their eyes at once to this subject, and not again put their very fertile and rich valuable eastern lands into annual trouble. Just after finishing the above, we learn that the Kookies who committed the depredation at Oodeypoor, and were carrying women captives thence, were stopped by a jemadar of the police battalion with a small party at a place called Kakamara, close to Ramghur, and a short skirmish was the result. Twelve of the Kookies have been killed and about a score wounded; they fled by different routes through the jungles, which being very dense and impassable, the pursuit after them was unsuccessful. Not a single sepoy was killed or wounded. This shows how very good soldiers the Kookie savages are compared with the kokas of our police battalion, and still they are so daring as to trouble us annually. We also learn that Captain Raban has in some way punished the Saloo chief and his followers, and is now returning from the hills. Our magistrate, with his party, is shortly expected at the station. He might go to the Ramghur side again with some additional force.—Hurkaru.

UMBALLA, Feb. 15.—The Commander-in-Chief will rejoin his camp at this station on the 18th, and take it on to Lahore, beyond which the movements of the officers and establishments are yet uncertain. Sir George Barker, Commandant of the Royal Artillery in India, has left the camp on a few days' leave to Simla, for the purpose of hiring houses for himself, his staff, and clerks. Sir Hugh Rose is also likely to go up, which he can do by horse dawk in eight or ten hours, to fix upon a residence for the season.

SIMLA, Feb. 9.—The winter appears to have fled, no more clouds, no more immediate prospect of snow or rain. The days are very warm, the leaf-buds are already bursting their winter covering, in fact an early spring is coming on apace. The winter seems to have been compressed into the few snowy days we had in January. Yet the accounts of the crops are promising; all the country to the west and north under cultivation looks smiling, and the prospect of a fair average harvest is, under Providence, a certainty. This may be said of the whole of the Jullunder Doab and of the lower hills, and it is said there is also some hope regarding the crops round Roopur, and the Pinjoor Dhoon, but unhappily the reverse is the case towards the east and the south. The aspect of the country in that direction still continues to resemble a desert, except under irrigation.

QUESTIONS OF THE DAY.—There has been a good deal of speculation about the cause of Lord Canning's visit to Lucknow. Among others it seems to be generally believed that one object of this second advent so soon after the first is the amalgamation of Oude with the North-Western Provinces. Should this be finally determined upon, the office of Commissionership of Oude will be abolished on Mr. Wingfield's departure, and Oude will be absorbed as a province of the lieutenant-governorship of the north-west. With the exception of this annexation, the order of things, in main essentials, is expected to remain unchanged. But in the event of the amalgamation being decided upon, another question of importance will require to be determined, namely, whether Allahabad or Lucknow should be the seat of Government.

THE INDUS TUNNEL.—The Indus tunnel is a work in whose progress every one must take an interest. It is, we believe, the first work of the kind that has ever been attempted in this country, and in every point of view, both as an experiment and an operation which, if successful, must be followed by the most important practical results, we cannot but watch its progress with the utmost satisfaction. The breadth of the river at the point to be crossed is 1,505 feet; to get below the bed, the shaft had to be sunk, that on the east bank 168 feet, that on the west, 93. Both these shafts are completed, and in their whole course passed through solid work. In order to determine the question as to the feasibility or otherwise of constructing a tunnel that would be useful as a thoroughfare, a trial gallery was commenced. This on the 1st Feb. had extended 44 feet 9 inches from the east, and 117 feet 8 inches from the west bank. The deepest part of the river is close to the west bank, and ought to be passed about the middle of the next month. The whole of the work has been done under the superintendence of Major Robertson and Captain Sandiland, by a detachment of the 24th Punjab Infantry, who were instructed by six regular miners from H.M.'s 94th regiment. The detachment is under command of Captain Chalmers. As yet every inch of the way made has had to be blasted, and it is satisfactory and reflects much credit on the officers superintending and directing the work, that hitherto not a single accident has occurred.

LIEUT. DELAFOSSE, of the late 53rd N.I., one of the two survivors of the Cawnpore massacre, is to have the Victoria Cross. He is now with the Sikkim force. There are several cases yet under consideration for this enviable decoration.

THE OLD COMPLAINT.—In the thirty-eight infantry regiments of H.M.'s British forces serving in the Bengal Presidency, there were in the country on the 1st December, 77 field officers, 222 captains, 485 subalterns, 222 regimental staff, and 37,372 non-commissioned officers and privates, which gives an average of 1 captain to 168 men, and 1 subaltern to 80, supposing all to be present with their corps, which is by no means the case, as shown by the "return" of the 81st, which states that 5 captains, 9 subalterns, and 5 staff are in the country, whereas there were with the regiment at the time 1 captain, 6 subalterns, and 6 staff (that is 1 paymaster, 1 musketry instructor, 1 adjutant, 1 quartermaster, 1 assistant-surgeon, 1 interpreter). The regiment we have selected is by no means singular in the disproportion between the officers, as several others will bear comparison with it.

RAWUL PINDEE, Feb. 10.—The weather continues to be clear, and the slightest foretaste of the hot weather is already felt during the middle of the day in the open air. The peach blossoms and leaf buds proclaim the approach of spring. A rumour is at present very prevalent at Lahore and this station, that no less than two Commissionerships and ten districts are to be abolished. I can believe that it is practicable to diminish the number of Commissionerships by adding a fourth district to such as have at present only three; but I cannot conceive how the abolition of so many districts is possible. Many districts are so large that it would be highly beneficial to divide them into two, and I can think of only two or three small districts which might, without much trouble or inconvenience, be merged into their adjacent zillahs. But it should be remembered that these small districts have always been considered as models for imitation by all deputy commissioners, the secret of their good management lying in their compactness, every Thannah or Tehseel post being within the reach of an energetic officer in a few hours.—Delhi Gazette.

JULLUNDUR, Feb. 9.—Since my last the weather has taken a sudden change for the worse, and I am afraid we have bidden adieu to the cold season. The sun has become intolerably hot within the last few days, and the nights are not near so pleasantly cold as they were. Now, having disposed of that well-worn topic the weather, I will proceed to give you what little news we have in these parts. The high prices of grain, food, &c., still prevail, and are the same as formerly quoted; one would have thought that the rain that has fallen here would have reduced the nirikh slightly. I know for certain that things are obtainable at a far cheaper rate in the district, and that attah is selling at two seers more for the rupee there than it is here, and this, too, within twenty miles of cantonments; but our authorities do not exert themselves, and the bunnahs have it all their own way.

THE EARLY RAINS.—The ground has been refreshed with showers of rain in several parts of the Punjab. In some quarters of the Umballa district the out turn of the spring crop will be much as usual, whereas in other quarters not more than one-quarter of an average crop is expected. In Thanessur about an inch of rain has fallen, which, however, did little more than revive the grass, but not sufficient to moisten the ground for ploughing or sowing. In Loodiana about two and a-half inches fell during January throughout the district, and in some places considerable sowings of barley have taken place; and where wheat and gram had been planted they have benefited greatly, but the sowings have been scanty, the rain having come too late.

GONDA is likely to be left without European troops. The troop of horse artillery which had been there left for Umballa on the 6th Feb., and H.M.'s 20th regiment was to set off for Goruckpore on the 9th.

COLONEL POTT neither has been nor is he likely to be removed from his command, on account of the drum head court-martial and execution of the mutinous sepoy. Government having taken no unfavourable notice of the colonel's conduct, it is fair to presume that the proceedings in the case were not disapproved of.

DARJEELING, Feb. 9.—My last letter told you of the bridge being built across the Runjeet and of the first advance into Sikkim. Since then we have made but slow progress, owing to the want of coolies and difficulty in getting up supplies. The force is now encamped at Namchi, distant from the Runjeet about twelve miles, and daily expecting a move. The advance to this place, however, was not accomplished without loss on our side, for on the evening of the 5th, Colonel Gawler and our commandant, 6th Regiment, whilst on a dour from Mikki, on the Namchi road, were fired at from a stockade about fifteen or twenty yards in front; one private was shot through the leg, thigh broken, and an officer slightly wounded, arrows and bullets falling pretty thick. Before the party could double up, the enemy had disappeared, leaving nothing behind except a letter describing the passage of the Runjeet, in which they liken the fire to the burning of a bamboo jungle. The shells had evidently a wholesome effect on them. The next day we advanced cautiously to Namchi, the enemy firing only two shots at about half a mile range. This place we found deserted, and a large pucka house burnt down. It is supposed the owner was friendly to us. Colonel Gawler started the same night on a dour to Sandochi, and did not return until eleven o'clock the next day, marching all night. The Bhootians were, however, too quick for them. A large booby trap was found at the top of the hill, but troops coming up in rear prevented them making use of it. Major Maitland's party, consisting of two companies of the 6th, who started from the Runjeet on the 6th instant, making a detour to the right, came in yesterday; they were unsuccessful in seeing the enemy. The country about here is most beautiful, and the climate excellent, much warmer than Darjeeling, which is an advantage at this season. It certainly agrees with the troops, as I do not hear of any cases of sickness.—Englishman.

PESHAWUR, Feb. 15.—Orders have just been received from head-quarters, to despatch H.M.'s 94th Regiment as quickly as possible, from Nowshera to Ferozepore. Two Companies of H.M.'s 7th Royal Fusiliers, under Major Watson, leave for Attock on the 18th, to relieve the detachment of the 24th, at present there. The men of the 94th who are employed on the tunnel works remain behind. Nowshera is to be occupied by the 3rd European Light Cavalry, which are coming up from Ferozepore. I hear that Captain Blackall, of the Royal Fusiliers, is to take over the Brigade Majorship instead of Captain Iremonger.

MAHARAJA JUNG BAHADOOR.—The visit of Maharaja Jung Bahadoor, G.C.B., to the Terai in the neighbourhood of Sikkim was in reality a hunting expedition, and he had applied for twenty days' provisions for his party, rather a large one merely for hunting—3,000 men! He had applied for leave to hunt on the left bank of the Teesta, but the Terai portion of this country belongs to Bhootan, also a new fact to the Nepalese. It is altogether a strange coincidence; the Maharaja had intended to proceed to Gorukpoor, he suddenly changes his plans, declines to meet the Commissioners sent out to show him the new territory given him, and all at once makes his appearance with 3,000 men near Darjeeling on a hunting expedition. As to finding supplies for 3,000 men when there is the utmost difficulty of feeding our own troops, the thing is entirely out of the question, so the Maharaja had to retire. The commissariat can gain important advantages in the Hills.

SIR ROBERT MONTGOMERY, Lieut.-governor of the Punjab, is about to proceed on a tour to Delhi and the distressed district.

GOVERNMENT CURRENCY BILL.—Mr. Wilson's Currency Bill is fundamentally altered. Issues against Government Securities limited to four crores. Presidency Banks to be agents of Government in managing circulation. Gold to form one-fourth of reserve. Arrangements hoped to be carried out by establishment of branches for extending circulation. Lowest denomination of note twenty rupees. Presidency banks to have treasury balance under restrictions.

LUCKNOW, Feb. 11.—Since I last wrote, Lucknow has been favoured by a visit from the Viceroy, and was for a few days all alive. Lord Canning was accompanied by Mr. Young, Secretary to Government in the Foreign Department, Sir R. Birch, Sir Edward Campbell, Mr. Bowring, Doctor Beale and Captain Hill, and Colonel Yule. His Lordship arrived on Thursday evening, and departed on Sunday evening. A levee on the following day (Friday) was held, of all the civil and military officers of the station, at which (the most noticeable event of the day) the officers of the Oude Volunteers in their uniform were presented by their commandant, G. Campbell, Esq. Lord Canning was particularly pleased with the uniform, which is very light and comfortable. After the levee, the Governor-general went to see the Bailey Guard and burial-ground, and the Muchi Bhuwun Fort. At the gateway of the Bailey Guard he was met by the Oude volunteers in uniform, who formed a guard of honour and presented arms on the arrival and departure of his lordship, Colonel Abbot in command. The Governor-general addressed some words to the corps expressive of his approbation of the movement generally, and the very great pleasure he felt at meeting them on that spot which had been rendered immortal by the siege. He had, he said, from the commencement viewed the movement in Lucknow with peculiar interest, and other parts of India looked to Lucknow for an example. He would especially impress upon them the necessity of regular attendance to drill, one day a week being imperatively required for this object. Without an active spirit of emulation amongst them, he observed, the corps could exist only in name. He said he had received the assurance that her Majesty's Government looked with marked approval on the volunteer movement in India, and that it was his desire that it should be consolidated and perpetuated. The Bailey Guardites belonging to the corps were then called out and complimented upon their past conduct, and the Governor-general hoped that they would be a pattern to those of every other station in India, and he felt sure that, should occasion arise, they would again prove themselves as brave and indefatigable defenders of the honour and welfare of their queen and country as they had done during the ever-memorable siege. During his stay the Governor-general also inspected the rifle battalions, and expressed himself much interested in the matter. His lordship afterwards visited the residency burial ground, with which he expressed himself as quite satisfied, and proceeded to the forts and Hooseinabad. In the evening the chief commissioner entertained a large party. The next day, Saturday, at noon, a darbar was held of the Talookdars of Oude who had lately been invested with magisterial powers. In consequence of the short notice they were not all present. Notwithstanding all the surmises that have been made on the subject with reference to the visit of the Governor-general to Lucknow, it is now known for certain, that besides his desire to see Lucknow once more, and inspect all the improvements, the only specific object which he had on view was to see the Talookdar magistrates, and to express his admiration of the manner in which they had discharged the duties and exercised the powers committed to them. The following is the speech of his lordship on the occasion:—"Talookdars:—The Governor-general is delighted at meeting you again. The Governor-general has requested your presence here, for the purpose of expressing to you personally his approval of the excellent manner in which you have exercised the criminal and revenue powers with which you have been entrusted. Without doubt your services have greatly benefited your country, but the Governor-general is especially pleased at the convincing proof which they afford in Hindoostan of the ability of talookdars and zemindars to exercise with advantage such criminal and revenue powers as they may be entrusted with. The Governor-general has heard with pleasure, from the chief commissioner, that you have acquired with much facility a knowledge of these duties, and have performed them with intelligence and zeal: indeed, you have exceeded his lordship's highest expectations. Talookdars:—The favour with which Government regard you was on a former occasion evinced. You will now see that Government places every reliance in you. Should you feel any desire to evince your thankfulness for this 'favour and reliance,' you cannot better do so than by continuing to assist the chief commissioner in maintaining the superior administration of this province, which has ensured for her Majesty's Government a good name." It appears now that there was no idea of the amalgamation of this province with the N. W., nor of Lucknow being made the seat of Government, and that on the departure of Mr. Wingfield another chief commissioner will reign in his stead; who it is to be has not yet transpired. On Saturday evening the chief commissioner entertained a large party to meet his lordship, and he seems from the courteous and affable manner in which he spoke to all the civil and military officers, to have been well pleased with his visit and to have forgiven all the offence of the great libel case. On Sunday his Lordship attended divine service, on which occasion a sermon was preached by the Rev. J. R. Baldwin, in aid of the relief for the famine. The usual salute was (a very unusual practice) fired on Sunday evening previous to his departure.—Delhi Gazette.

AGRA.—An occurrence painfully illustrative of the great distress that prevails in these provinces took place the other day. Numbers of people on their way to this and other stations where relief is procurable, in the shape of food or wages for labour, perish from want and weakness; some get as far as this and fall, just as they reach the place which they have been fondly looking to as the goal where their sufferings are to end. A family consisting of father, mother, and three children were found in the road near the Fort. The father, mother, and two of the children were dead,—the remaining child still living was clinging to its dead mother's breast in the vain hope of obtaining sustenance. She was immediately taken away, and will be looked after. Arrangements will shortly be made by the local committee to meet the cases of those who arrive from the districts in an exhausted state. Many impoverished and starving parents are anxious to give away or sell their children to save their lives. Our readers will recollect it was in this way the colony of Secundra was formed during the famine of 1837. The mutineers destroyed the place and scattered the inhabitants, towards whom, as being Christians, they felt especially hostile. By the recurrence of the distress in 1861, the opportunity of re-establishing the colony somewhat on its former footing has been afforded. The matter has been taken into consideration by the Central Committee, and will not, we hope, be allowed to drop till something definite has been determined on.—Delhi Gazette.

SIMLA.—The Simla correspondent of the Bombay Times notices a fall of 18 inches of snow on the hills in little more than 24 hours. The thermometer did not fall more than 4 deg. below freezing point. So that India, on a very small scale, has imitated England where the snow was in the north four feet deep, not in the drift, and the thermometer 10 deg. below zero. The same writer says, the Rana of Dhami, while quarrying stone in front of his residence, found a treasure trove of old coins. From ten specimens it was found that they are chiefly coins of Akbar, the first dating from A.D. 1553 to 1600, two were minted at Ahmedabad and one at Lahore, the former in 1586 and 1600, the latter in 1597, the forty-first year of his reign; there are six coins of Shere Shah, dated three in 1506, and three in 1510, and one with the date illegible. This must be the Afghan who ruled Berar and won Khota between 1542 and 1545, as he coined money, and had the Khoobta read in his own name. There are also two coins of Mohamed Adil Shah, who governed Berar in 1553 and 1555. The Rajah of Burdwan has rented two houses at Simla—one of them formerly the residence of Lord Auckland.

COLONEL BAIRD SMITH.—At the request of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Colonel Baird Smith has been deputed by the President in Council to the Upper Provinces to obtain accurate and comprehensive information regarding the state of the districts which are now afflicted with famine, as well as of those in their immediate vicinity, with special reference to the influence which the calamity may have upon the import trade of Bengal. The appointment is admirable. Colonel B. Smith should obtain and periodically publish statistics of prices, &c.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN," says the report of the Madras Chamber just published, "in the early part of the year was pursuing with characteristic energy the wide measures of reform and improvement which he had inaugurated so shortly after his arrival. His strict supervision over departments, and sleepless activity in all the business of Government, had already been productive of the happiest effects, and had made themselves felt in every branch of the administration. It is impossible to over-estimate the advantages which would necessarily have followed from a long career of such vigorous and enlightened Government; one that immediately secured for itself the support and esteem of every independent Englishman. But the Government of Sir Charles, so full of promise, nay, already so fertile, was cut short by an act of his own, which, drawing on him the displeasure of her Majesty's Government, caused him to be recalled. The feeling of the mercantile community was one of sympathy and regret; and apart from all political considerations, there exists a lasting and grateful sense of the benefits derived from his administration."

THE MEMORIAL HALL, MADRAS.—The foundation stone of this building was laid on Saturday evening, the 16th of February, by the honourable the Governor, in the presence of a large concourse of people, European and native, Christian and heathen. Nearly three years ago, on the 23rd of April, 1858, a meeting, at which Mr. C. R. Baynes presided, was held in St. Andrew's Church to take into consideration the most fitting way of permanently recording the gratitude of the Christian public throughout the Presidency to Almighty God for his signal mercies and special providential care in preserving the Madras Presidency in peace and safety amidst the dreadful scenes of outrage, bloodshed, and confusion which had just then occurred in the North-West of India. It was then resolved to erect a Memorial Hall, surrounded by offices for the Bible, Tract, and South India Christian School Book Society, as a fitting monument of gratitude to God for his great mercies. A committee was formed for carrying out the project. Circulars were issued all over the country, and upwards of thirty thousand rupees have been received as contributions in furtherance of the work.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—The number of emigrants who left Madras for Mauritius during 1860 was, 2,510 men, 1,116 women, 296 boys, 229 girls, and 146 infants. To Demerara and Trinidad there went 1,002 men, 416 women, and 199 children; to Natal, 362 men, 163 women, and 95 children. During the same year there returned from Mauritius 660 men, 162 women and 154 children, and from Demerara 162 men, 95 women and 73 children.

BANK OF MADRAS.—At a meeting of the bank, W. H. Crake, Esq., was unanimously elected a Director of the Bank in the room of H. Nelson, Esq., resigned. The following resolution of the Board on Mr. Nelson's retirement was read at the meeting:—"Before proceeding to any other business, the Board desire to record their sense of the very efficient and able services rendered to the bank by Mr. Nelson during the lengthened periods that he has filled the office of president—having been elected to that office for three successive years by the unanimous vote of the Board, he now retires, carrying with him the best wishes of his colleagues."

TELEGRAPH SUPPORTS.—Dr. Macpherson, Inspector-General of Hospitals, Madras, has communicated to Government the following ingenious method of supporting the telegraph wire in Java:—"The stem of the cotton tree, twenty-five to thirty feet in length, is fixed into a hole in the ground four to five feet deep, the wire insulator being previously attached one to two feet from its upper end. So soon as the stem has struck root white ants cease to attack it, and as the upper branches spring above the insulators, the wire is not interfered with. One young tree is planted on each side of those posts, which in course of time will attain sufficient elevation to replace them when necessary, and in villages adjoining the course of the wire, at fixed distances, gardens of these cotton trees are placed under the care of the head village man, who has men attached to him for the purpose of protecting the posts between his village and the next adjoining."

RANGOON. more fortunate than the three Presidency cities, has had a census. Exclusive of military, its population is 56,762. Of this number 226 are Europeans, 21 Americans, 373 East Indians, 153 Armenians, 88 Jews, and 1,509 Chinese. There are 34,303 Burmese, 10,357 Talaings, 2,384 Bengalees, and 2,530 Madrassesees. The comparatively small number of European ladies accounts for much of the immorality of Pegu.

THE KARENS.—The Rev. Dr. Mason estimates the mountain Karen population east of the Sitang as follows:—True Karen, 62,326; Red Karens (or Ka-ya,) and Eastern and Western, 200,000. Total, 262,326 souls. Of these the former alone are British subjects, and of the whole 25,615 are Christians. It is thus, as quoted by the Rangoon Times, that Dr. Mason begins the work of civilisation:—"During the Burmese time, Karens settled their quarrels in their own way. They cut each other's throats; kidnapped women and children; stole cattle from the plains; and killed every straggling pedlar for his wares. Whenever a village is willing to support a teacher, forsake their heathenish practices, take the temperance pledge, observe the Sabbath, promise obedience to the teachings of the Bible, and send their children to school, we furnish them with a teacher if we have one available." Such are the preliminary vows made by a tribe, ere the people enter on their new career." Now there are 133 village schools with 2,200 pupils, and the Karens pay liberally for the support of their female institute.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PRESENTATION OF MEDALS FOR PERSIA.—The native regiments of the garrison paraded in review order on the 21st February on the esplanade, for the purpose of witnessing the presentation of medals for Persia, to the 23rd regiment Native Light Infantry, by Brigadier Sir Charles Stewart, K.C.B. A large concourse of Europeans and Natives had assembled on the occasion to witness the spectacle. The troops were formed up in lines of contiguous columns at quarter distance, the 23rd regiment being in the middle, flanked on each side by the 2nd Grenadier N. I. Regiment and the Marine Battalion. On his arrival on the ground, Sir Charles Stewart took his position in front of the 23rd, and then opened the ceremony by addressing their gallant commanding officer to the following effect:—

“LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TRAVERS,—It affords me great pleasure to have deputed to me the honour of presenting to the 23rd Regiment Native Light Infantry medals, awarded by her Majesty's Government for services in Persia. I had not the good fortune to be present at the Persian campaign, but at an early period of my career I served in the same brigade with your gallant regiment in the Mahee Kanta, where it distinguished itself on many occasions. The 23rd has always been a good and distinguished regiment for loyalty and valour, and I trust that the medals I have the honour this day of presenting may incite not only those now present in its ranks to acquire fresh laurels should opportunity offer, but also those who may join its ranks hereafter.”

The compliment having been duly returned by Colonel Travers, the brigadier distributed the medals, after which the troops formed into columns, and marched past him. This concluded the ceremony, and they then returned to their respective barracks.—Bombay Gazette.

SIR GEORGE CLERK IN KURRACHEE.—His Excellency Sir George Russel Clerk, K.C.B., Governor of Bombay, accompanied by Lieutenant-General Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief, arrived at Kurrachee on Thursday last, the 14th day of February, on the very day on which thirteen years ago he first landed on our shores. The military, of course, turned out in full force to escort him from the Bunder to Government House, where the 64th formed a guard of honour for his reception. His Excellency we fancy must have been struck with the great alteration that has occurred in the capital of Sind since his first visit. At that time the European portion of the town may be said to have been non-existent. The harbour then could show no ships as now, loading and unloading their freights, nor did merchants' stores line the road he traversed to the camp. Neither church nor hospitals as now: no rows of goodly private bungalows or Cutcherry, or Red Sea and Railway Telegraph offices, or public markets were in existence, nor were the military lodged in barracks. No Indus Flotilla or Oriental Inland Steam Navigation boats then floated on the Indus, or railway works to give employment to European capital, and afford example of European skill. We repeat his Excellency (much as we ourselves may grumble at our not progressing fast enough) must, after such an interval as has elapsed since 1848, see many signs of vast improvement. We trust that his coming will hasten the completion of what has already begun and be the origin of more. We hope that he will see the necessity of the various Government officers being located, if not in one building, at least more conveniently situated to each other; that the Government Telegraph-office be a structure more adapted to its purpose and more creditable in its appearance, and that the management of the Post-office be put upon a better footing. There are many other things his Excellency will, doubtless, see fit to alter and amend; but, on the whole, we repeat that gratification must be his principal feeling at the substantial progress Kurrachee has made since the period of his Excellency's first arrival.—Sindian.

CAPTAIN EVEZARD, Superintendent of Bazars at Poona, has been appointed collector of Income tax in the Poona Cantonment.

BELGAUM, Feb. 15.—The medals for the campaign in Central India were presented to the officers and men of the 83rd regiment on Monday evening last, by the niece of our worthy Brigadier. The troops composing the brigade were assembled for the purpose, and the bandstand was nicely fitted up for the occasion with tent walls to keep off the sun, and couches, chairs, &c., for the accommodation of the ladies. Men entitled to the medal were formed on the left of the bandstand, and passed through it to the right, alternately, receiving as they passed their medals from the hand of the fair donor. When the distribution was finished, the troops marched past in review order and returned to their lines. At night the officers of the 83rd gave a ball and supper, at which the elite of the station assembled. Dancing commenced at nine o'clock and was kept up with great animation till twelve, when all sat down to a table provided with all the delicacies of the season, to which, apparently, they did ample justice. After supper dancing commenced with renewed vigour, and continued till the small hours; when the party gradually broke up. The ball was a grand success, and went off with great clat. On Tuesday evening sports and games of all kinds were held for the amusement of the men. Climbing a greased pole, jumping, tattoo races, catching a pig by the tail, after the said tail had been well shaved and soaped, were amongst the list of sports carried on, and evidently created a great deal of fun, if I may judge by the roars of laughter from the assembled crowd. It was quite dark before the sports were over, and I would recommend that on the next occasion they commence a little earlier. Edibles of every description are increasing in price at this station, and indeed are 25 per cent. higher now than they have been at any period these last five years. This, along with the Income-tax, is not very agreeable, but nevertheless we must put up with it as best as we can, and hope for better times.—Bombay Times.

MAJOR R. JOHNSTONE has declined the appointment in the Jacobabad Brigade, and has been nominated to an important political charge at Dwarka.

WATER SUPPLY.—The Bombay Municipal Commissioners have decided upon a scheme for supplying private houses with water from the Vehar works. In houses with gardens of more than 1,000 square yards, or with stables containing more than two horses, or where a greater rent than Rs. 75 a month is paid, the use of meters is compulsory. In other cases an ad valorem rate on houses is to be charged. One thousand meters have been ordered out from England at a cost of Rs. 40 each. Water has already been laid on to 200 houses.

MR. BELLASIS took charge of his new appointment of sub-treasurer, &c., from Mr. Erskine, on the 15th February. Although Mr. Bellasis will still be president of the Income-tax commission, Mr. Gibbs, having been appointed a commissioner, will look to current business, as the sub-treasurer will have no time to attend to both places and duties. Mr. Gibbs still continues to act as special commissioner.

MURDER OF A POLICE DETECTIVE.—On the 18th December last one Yessoo, a Bheel Naique, employed in the Ahmednuggur police force as a detective, was murdered by one Mahadia, assisted by a gang of eight other Bheels, in revenge for his having given information to the police which enabled them to exterminate Bhagojee Naique's formidable “bund” in 1859. The outrage appears to have been a most daring one, and for some weeks afterwards the gang contrived to elude all the exertions of that intelligent officer, Mr. Souter, the superintendent of the Ahmednuggur police. We are now glad to hear that he has at last been successful in capturing Mahadia, the leader, and four of his accomplices in the murder of the unfortunate man Yessoo, which was attended with circumstances of great atrocity. The capture of these villains is most praiseworthy on the part of the Ahmednuggur police, who, ever since the murder of their comrade, have steadily persevered to secure this object, and they are entitled to some special mark of the favour of Government, which we hope will not be withheld. Mahadia Bheel is a notorious offender, and has long been “wanted” by Mr. Souter. He has been outlawed ever since 1857, and he originally formed one of Bhagojee Naique's “bund” and took part in all the atrocities perpetrated by them; and it has been ascertained since his capture that on the night previous to the spirited engagement at Meet-saghur between the Ahmednuggur police, led by Mr. Souter in person, and Bhagojee's “bund,” which resulted in the complete annihilation of the whole gang, Mahadia had gone off to a neighbouring village to meet his wife, and thus for a time escaped the fate which on that occasion overtook his confederates. After the extermination of Bhagojee's “bund,” Mahadia collected a few Bheels about him, and in last year committed three gang robberies in the Ahmednuggur, and two in the Tanna Zillah. In his raid in the latter Zillah he succeeded in carrying off property of the estimated value of 35,000 rupees. One of the latest atrocities of this freebooter and his gang was to murder the Bheel Naique Yessoo, as above mentioned, together with his wife and child. It appears that for this offence a reward of 500 rupees was offered for his apprehension, and this sum will be paid to those who captured him. We understand Babajee Ramchundra, the Foujdar of Yeola, has rendered the police much valuable assistance in the capture of this outlaw, who now awaits his doom in the Ahmednuggur jail.—Sindian.

CHRISTIAN LITERARY ASSOCIATION.—A meeting has been held at the Mission House, Ambrolie, to take steps for the formation of a Christian Literary Association for Bombay. The attendance on the occasion was considerable. The Rev. J. E. Carlile introduced the subject of the proposed Association by some general explanation as to the objects which it contemplated; and after this a draft of the rules was read. The Rev. D. Macpherson followed by some observations expressive of the benefit of such associations, and of his willingness to co-operate in this society, which it is proposed to establish on a broad Christian basis. The good which Christian literary associations have accomplished in the larger cities of England, Scotland, and America, is well known. They have formed admirable centres of Christian friendly association among young men, and by the lectures delivered in connection with them, a large amount of valuable Christian literature has been supplied to the public. It will be a leading object of this Bombay Association to extend a brotherly hand to young men arriving on the shores of India, often but scantily furnished with introductions, and exposed thus to the hazard of being thrown into society of a very injurious character. It is contemplated also to have occasional lectures after the model of those of the mechanics' institution, embracing, however, not merely literary and scientific, but also religious questions. It is intended in addition to have quarterly meetings, at which papers will be read by the members, and questions of discussion may be introduced as in the Calcutta Debating Society. A Book Society is also to be established in connection with the association, at a monthly charge of two rupees. The society engages for this sum to furnish not only a large selection of new literary and scientific works, but also all the leading monthlies and quarterlies, English and American. It will also provide a large amount of Christian literature and religious periodicals for Sunday reading. The benefits of the Book Society are open to the public at large, whether members of the association or not.

THE LIBRARY AND MUSEUM OF KURRACHEE seem to be in a prosperous state, and to be most useful. The income from subscribers for the past year was Rs. 3,441. There were 14,079 volumes taken out of the former by 123 subscribers, of which 5,924 were novels, 803 history, 587 travels, 403 biography, and 72 theology. There were 12,367 visitors to the museum, of whom 9,874 were natives. The officials seem to take an energetic part in supporting the library and museum.

Service Pensions of Chaplains.

The following extract from a despatch, in the Ecclesiastical Department, from the Secretary of State, No. 29, dated Dec. 15, 1860, is published for general information:—

In accordance with your request, I sanction the extension to chaplains on the Indian establishments of the rule laid down by the home authorities in 1857 and 1858, under which military officers are allowed to reckon as service for pension, sick leave taken by them in consequence of wounds or illness contracted by service in the field. The case of the Rev. seems to come within the operation of the rule, but before he can be admitted to the benefit of it, he will, of course, be subjected to all the regulations laid down in the case of military officers.

The regulations laid down in the case of military officers are contained in the following extracts from despatches of the Home Government.

Extract, paras. 18 and 19, of a military despatch from the Court of Directors to the Government of India, No. 126, dated July 22, 1857. 18. By the regulations established for the promotion of Lieut. colonels to the rank of colonel after three years' service, it is provided that no longer period than one month in each year, or a total of three months in three years, or six months in six years shall be allowed to reckon, whether the leave shall have been spent in India or out of the country, except in cases of wounds or illness contracted by the service in the field, duly certified by a medical board, when each case will be separately considered with reference to the time to be allowed.

* Letter, dated March 6, 1857, No. 82, requests Court's decision on the question whether leave of absence in or beyond India, taken in consequence of wounds received in action, shall be allowed to reckon as service for pension, both under the old and new regulations.

19. In reply to the question now put to us, we have much satisfaction in stating that we are prepared to extend the benefits of the exception above specified to the time required for retirement on full pay. Every claim to the benefit of this exception must be duly certified by a medical board and be forwarded to us for our decision, accompanied by the opinion thereon of the Government and Commander-in-Chief of the Presidency to which the officer belongs.

Extract paragraphs 19 to 24 of a military despatch from the Court of Directors to the Government of India No. 221, dated the 18th August.

19. The privilege of reckoning the time of absence in the period of service* required for retirement on full pay is authorised in cases of wounds or illness contracted by service in the field, duly certified by a medical board, when each case will be separately considered with reference to the time to be allowed.

20. Of the thirteen cases now reported four are those of officers who have received wounds in action.

21. The remaining nine cases are those of the officers named in the margin to whom certificates have been given by the Direc. gen. and Inspec. gen. testifying that leave has been granted to them on account of illness contracted by service in the field.

22. We desire that in future similar cases a specific description may be given in a report of a medical board of the nature of the illness and of the grounds upon which it is considered that the illness has been contracted by service in the field; also, that each separate case may be accompanied by the opinions thereon of your Govt. as well as that of H. E. the C. in C.

23. Meanwhile the applications of the officers above mentioned, as recommended by the C. in C., are complied with.

24. We are of opinion that all such grants hereafter should be made for periods not exceeding eighteen months, to be extended if necessary.

Chaplains or Assistant-chaplains, desirous to avail themselves of the privilege thus extended to them, should submit an application to the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be in the Military Department, through the Archdeacon, together with any documents they may desire to submit in support thereof. The application will be referred first to the head of the medical department for report, and then to the Commander-in-Chief for his Excellency's opinion thereon, after which it will be forwarded to the Secretary of State for the final disposal.

Civil and Military Law Courts.

Feb. 8.—The following letter is published for general information:—

From the Officiating Under-Sec. to the Govt. of India, in the Foreign Dept., to the Sec. to the Govt. of the Punjab and its Dependencies (No. 5618, dated the 21st November, 1860).

With reference to your docket, dated 5th instant, No. 710, I am directed to state, for the information of the Lieut.-govt., that the President in Council has no doubt that the Court of a cantonment joint magistrate, exercising civil jurisdiction under Act III. of 1859, is a civil court within the meaning of Act XXXVI. of 1850, and that all petitions and other documents filed in such a Court in cases under Act III. of 1859 are liable to stamp duty under Schedule B. of the Stamp Act.

2. H.H. in Council holds the same opinion in regard to Military Courts constituted under Act XI. of 1841. Though called Military Courts they are in reality nothing but Civil Courts appointed for the trial of "actions of debt and other personal actions" against native officers, soldiers, and camp followers. They are vested with the powers of Civil Courts in respect to the examination of witnesses, and their decrees are executed by civil process. H.H. in Council thinks therefore that, in the absence of any express exemption, all petitions and other documents filed in such Military Courts of requests are liable to duty under schedule B of the Stamp Act.

By order of the President in Council,

W. GREY,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

Court Martial.

ENSIGN JOHN JAMES O'BRIEN.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Feb. 6.—At a general court martial, re-assembled at Allahabad, Dec. 14, 1860, Ensign John J. O'Brien, H.M.'s Bengal Inf., and doing duty with H.M.'s 48th reg. of foot, was arraigned on the following charges:—

First.—With habitual neglect of duty, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, at Allahabad, in the month of September, 1860, as follows:—In failing to visit the regimental infirmary picket at guard mounting on Sept. 22, he being a regimental orderly officer on that day; in failing to send in his report as relieved regimental orderly officer on Sept. 23; in failing to march the Roman Catholic soldiers to chapel on Sept. 23, for which duty he had been warned; in failing to attend the parade ordered by his commanding officer on Sept. 24; and in failing to attend the parade ordered by his commanding officer on Sept. 23.

Letter, dated April 9, 1855, No. 64. 1 and 2.—Applications from certain officers proceeding to Europe on medical certificate, that their leave may be counted as service for retirement on full pay.

Second.—With having, at Allahabad, on Sept. 26, 1860, without leave from his commanding officer, absented himself from his quarters, and so continued absent until the 30th of the same month, when he was brought back under arrest.

Finding.—"Guilty" of the first charge preferred against him, leaving out, as regards the second averment, the word "relieved," and with exception of the whole of the third averment, viz., "his failing to march the Roman Catholic soldiers to chapel on the 23rd September, for which duty he had been warned," of which the Court does acquit him.

"Guilty" of the second charge preferred against him.

Sentence.—To be publicly and severely reprimanded.

W. B. WEMYSS, Colonel,

Allahabad, Dec. 20, 1860. President.

Confirmed.

The Court have not upheld discipline by their sentence.

To say nothing of the serious derelictions of duty of which the prisoner has been found guilty on the first charge, he was found guilty of no less an offence, on the second, than having been absent from his regiment for four days, till brought back in arrest. To punish such an offence with a reprimand hurts the influence of courts martial, and in no way act as a salutary example.

However, as the prisoner has been for a long time in arrest, and behaved with gallantry in the field, I shall not revise the Court; trusting that the narrow escape which he has had will be a warning to him, and that he will revert to the good conduct which justly won for him a commission.

HUGH ROSE, Gen. C. in C. in India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE DOUBLE INCOME-TAX.

THERE are some persons who object to paying anything—even the debt of nature—but all are averse to giving more than is fairly due from them, whether to individuals or the State. The latter is the most unpopular creditor in the world, and the one whose claims are most liable to dispute and evasion. A man—and especially a woman—who would shrink with horror from the idea of defrauding his neighbour, no matter with what benefit to himself, thinks nothing of baffling the vigilance of Custom-house officers, and even a prime minister has been known, under the influence of old port, to gallop past a toll-keeper, rather than pay a penny. What wonder, then, that an indisposition should be manifested to being called upon to pay twice over for the protection afforded by a paternal Government. This is the position of all who, while residing in England, derive their incomes from India. Some may be partners in mercantile houses, or shareholders in railways and navigation companies, others may be pensioned servants of the Government, and others again subscribers to Indian loans—but whatever their profession or vocation, they are all alike subject to this twofold demand to contribute to the exigencies of the State. There cannot be two opinions as to the hardship of such a state of things, or of its impolicy, but there may be reasonable doubts as to the quarter answerable for this injustice. Mr. Crawford, and many other gentlemen of intelligence and commercial experience have been of opinion that the Home Government should be held responsible, and be compelled to refund whatever amount of tax it may have levied upon income derived from India. But this is certainly an erroneous view. By Act of Parliament every person residing in this country is called upon to make a faithful return of his annual net receipts from every source of profit. His property may be scattered all over the world, but if he be domiciled in England he is bound to return the net aggregate profits, to be assessed according to the laws of the land. No one disputes the power of any foreign or colonial Government to tax as it thinks proper, such portion of his property as may lie within its jurisdiction, and in returning his income to the British tax-collector he makes due allowance for these previous deductions. But India, it is urged, comes under a different category. There is no representative assembly in that country to vote taxes. The taxing power belongs to the Viceregent of the Home Government, which has no right to levy, through its accredited agent, the same tax twice over. This position appears to us quite unassailable. It is in India, then, that the remission should be made and not here; but Parliament cannot interfere with the financial arrangements of the Indian Government without rendering itself morally, and therefore materially, liable for the debts of that Government. There is the difficulty. It is obvious that Lord Canning and his advisers are acting very injudiciously in thus frightening British capital from the empire entrusted to their control. They may possibly gain an immediate revenue of a few thousand pounds, but the tendency of the course they pursue is to deter speculators and capitalists from settling in the country, and applying their means and energies to the discovery of its hidden treasures. Nominally responsible to Parliament, they are virtually irresponsible, for the reason we have already submitted: that is, the Home Government cannot interfere without taking upon itself the entire burden of the debt of India. This might, or might not, be advisable, but it is a measure not likely to be sanctioned by the Legislature. The Indian Government is, therefore, practically autocratic, and being in great and pressing want it naturally abuses its power. The absence of Sir Charles Wood from the House on Tuesday night confined the discussion within narrower limits than might have been desired, but he would do well to suggest to the new Financial Member of the Calcutta Council, the propriety of exempting from taxation all such persons as are assessed upon the aggregate income they return in England. It is, indeed, not merely a question of propriety, but also of expediency, an argument that usually carries most weight with modern Governments, and on this ground we yet hope to learn that for the future no British subject will be compelled to pay more than is equitably due.

RESPONSIBILITY OF RIVER COMPANIES.

A COMMERCIAL trial of considerable importance in its results has attracted great attention from the mercantile community of Calcutta. Its bearings, however, are not confined to that city, but extend to the owners of all river and sea-going vessels in our Indian Empire. The facts of the case are simple enough, though some of the disclosures made are sadly discreditable to the parties concerned. It appears that on the 17th December, 1859, Messrs. Gilmore, Mackilligin, and Co., shipped 211 chests of indigo on board the India General Steam Navigation Company's flat, Doorgah, then lying off Lutcheeghur. The flat was in tow of the steamer Lucknow, the master of which, Captain Fox, signed the bills of lading. The Company in question particularly guard themselves against being held answerable for any damages sustained, through casualties of navigation, by goods committed to their care; but the question arises—What is a casualty of navigation? Without stopping to define that somewhat nice point, we are enabled to gather from the summing up of the Chief Justice of Calcutta in this case, what does not constitute such casualty, and consequently under what circumstances a river company may be made as responsible as ordinary carriers. But it is better to let the facts speak for themselves. On the passage, then, to Calcutta, the Doorgah struck upon a bank, filled, and went down. The cargo was saved with great difficulty, and after being much injured by the wet. Messrs.

Gilmore & Co.'s indigo, for instance, which was worth Rs.127,836, sold for only Rs.78,836, and they, therefore applied to the Company for the balance. This claim was disallowed on the ground that the flat had not been lost through any negligence on the part of their servants, but owing to "a snag" in the river having pierced its side, and caused it almost instantly to go down. The defence would have held good, but for one trifling defect—it was based upon fiction; the Company's statement of the case was a misrepresentation of the real facts. It was proved on the trial that the flat leaked more or less throughout the upward voyage from Calcutta to Lutcheeghur. It was an old flat-bottomed iron vessel that had been considerably lengthened a few years ago, and three of the water-tight compartments seem to have been pervious to water. The original entries in the log-book show that the leakage in the first days of the downward voyage averaged about 12 inches in the 24 hours, and the space between the cargo and the bottom of the flat was about 10 inches. Curiously enough the depth of water in the three "water-tight" compartments was exactly the same, and a pump inserted in one acted upon all three. It was also discovered that the entries in the log-book were erased, 2 inches being substituted for 12, and 1½ inches for 11, and so on. When the directors of the Company made this discovery, they at once, in the most honourable manner, disclosed the facts to the plaintiffs. The log had been kept by the mate, a lad of seventeen, and the erasures were subsequently made by the master of the flat, after receiving a letter from the secretary to the Company, enjoining him to be very cautious as to what he said about leakage, as a great stir was being made in Calcutta. And the writer concluded with a very suspicious postscript, desiring him to consider this letter as private, and to destroy it. The master of the Doorgah was afterwards instructed to send any communications for his employers, not to their secretary, but to their attorney, as they would thus be privileged. The directors, however, in this respect also behaved very properly, and gave the plaintiffs free access to the whole correspondence that had passed. Not to be tedious—it clearly transpired that the flat did leak; that it drew more water than was at all safe; and that after the leaks were discovered, and the vessel already too deeply laden, more cargo was taken on board. Thus, when it struck against the sand-bank it had no buoyancy to withstand the shock, the rivets gave way, and the water rushed in through the started plates. There was no evidence whatever of the existence of a snag in the channel, and every obstruction was thrown in the way of those who wished to raise the vessel, when the fallacy of that statement would at once have been manifested. The Chief Justice seems to have had no doubt as to the law of the case, and without hesitation gave judgment for the plaintiffs—£4,900 damages and costs. This will make a heavy deduction from the next half-yearly dividend, and the Company are blamed for not making a reserve fund to meet this claim. But the most melancholy feature of the whole affair is the conduct of the skipper and the mate, whose depositions are strongly tinged with perjury. The secretary himself does not come out with very clean hands, for his suggestions can bear only one construction, and the one actually put upon them by the unscrupulous fellow for whose guidance they were made. After this we must be chary in our abuse of the natives, and in charging them with the absence of honourable feeling. It is altogether an "ugly business," and we trust that it may be long before we meet with its pendant, even though natives alone should figure in the next.

THE AFFGHAN BLUE-BOOK.

THE two great bugbears of English statesmen are the invasion of this island by the French, and the progress of Russia in the East. Whether the former apprehension be chimerical or otherwise, the steady increase of Muscovite influence in Central Asia is a fact that cannot be questioned, though it may not be equally certain that in promoting her own interests Russia in any way imperils our possession of India. However this may be, the British Cabinet in the year 1838 was seized with a violent attack of Russophobia, and all sorts of clumsy and costly devices were set at work to counteract the intrigues that disturbed the equanimity of both Downing-street and Cannon-row. There is no doubt that Russian agents were busily engaged in administering evil counsels to the Shah of Persia, and in fomenting disturbances throughout Central Asia, but there is not the slightest evidence to show that the Russian Government had any hostile designs against British India. At that time Lord Palmerston was Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Sir John Cam Hobhouse, now Lord Broughton, President of the Board of Control, and it is evident that these ministers were in perfect accord with regard to Russia. The one directed the diplomatic action of Mr., now Sir John, McNeil in Persia, while the other impelled the Indian Government into the most iniquitous and disastrous war that has ever disgraced the annals of this country. Lord Auckland was merely a tool in the hands of the English ministers at home, and his two ambitious secretaries, Mr. Torrens and Sir William McNaghten, were only too eager to embroil the empire in a contest which promised to cover themselves with distinction. But the representative of the Indian Government at Cabul was not only an able, but an honest man. Captain Alexander Burnes was one of the best specimens of what may be called the old Indian school. Fearless of danger, fertile in resources, full of energy, devoted to the service of his country, intimately acquainted with the Oriental character, well versed in Eastern languages, ingenuous, clear-headed, truthful, and straightforward, he was peculiarly well fitted to impress the ruler of Afghanistan with a favourable opinion of the British nation. And in this he fully succeeded, whatever it may now please Lord Palmerston to say to the contrary. It must be admitted, however, that Captain Burnes was not well selected as the instrument for carrying out the tortuous and wrongheaded policy of the British Cabinet. He was far too independent to represent things otherwise than in their true light. He saw that Dost Mahomed was a ruler of no ordinary abilities, and that a cordial alliance with him would be productive of great advantages to both parties. The Dost himself was anxious to be on friendly terms with the British, and to the very last was slow to meet the advances of the Russian Envoy. All this was fairly and clearly stated by Captain Burnes, but neither Lord Auckland nor Sir John Hobhouse paid any attention to the young officer's earnest assurances of the Dost's friendly disposition towards the English Government. It had been decided that the natives of Central Asia should be inspired with a salutary awe of British power and prowess, and that this object could be best attained by placing an exiled prince on the throne of Afghanistan. War was therefore declared by Lord Auckland under directions from Sir John Hobhouse, in concert with Lord Palmerston, but as this war was not likely to be popular at home, it was judged advisable to mislead public opinion by representing Dost Mahomed as influenced by Russia, and opposed to the interests of Great Britain. For this purpose it was necessary to produce the letters of the British Agent at his Court, but these in their integrity would have proved the very reverse of what was required of them, and, consequently, they were mutilated and garbled to such a degree that they might just as well have been fabricated for the occasion. Long passages were struck out, explanations were omitted, many words erased and others substituted for them, and, in short, their meaning completely misstated. Captain Burnes himself pronounced the Blue-Book of 1839 "a fraud," and after his lamented death his family published his letters, in vindication of his fair name. The publication of Mr. Kaye's standard "History of the Affghan War" further drew public attention to the fact that a vile imposture had been perpetrated in the name of her Majesty, and by order of her responsible Ministers. More than one attempt was subsequently made to procure the publication of the Affghan papers in their genuine form, but it was not until the year 1859 that the House of Commons was at last prevailed upon to order them to be printed. When they did appear public interest had died away, but a more disgraceful example of the suppression of truth and distortion of facts was probably never known. The despatches and bulletins of the Emperor Napoleon have generally been quoted as models of untruthfulness, but they have been surpassed if possible by the disingenuousness—to use a wholly inadequate term—of a Whig Ministry. And what is the defence made by Lord Palmerston? Is it not almost as disgraceful as the original offence? The "simplicity" of Sir Alexander Burnes is pleaded. Why, then, was he not recalled from Cabul, and a less "simple-minded" agent sent in his stead? "Simple" as he was, the Government continued to confide to him delicate and responsible duties to the very hour of his premature death. The noble lord pretends, moreover, that it was right and proper to vindicate the policy of Government by means of garbled extracts; but his loss of temper showed how painfully conscious he felt of the untenability of the position he had taken up. The question is simply this:—When Parliament calls for the production of papers, is the object merely to make out a good case for the Government of the day, or to obtain the whole truth? There cannot be a doubt as to which it is; but the Affghan papers, printed in 1839, were most carefully prepared so as to mislead the Legislature and the country. The truth was studiously suppressed, and a gross imposture was palmed off upon the nation as the vindication of a war that ultimately cost the lives of twenty thousand British subjects and twenty millions of money, and the untoward effects of which are likely to be felt for ever. It is easy to understand why the House should hesitate to pass Mr. Dunlop's motion, because its logical result must have been not only the resignation of Lord Palmerston, but his forced and final retirement from public affairs. The Conservatives were not prepared for a change of Ministry, which, moreover, would certainly be prejudicial to the national interests at this moment; and there was a natural disinclination in all parties to brand the fair name of a statesman whose patriotism is unquestionable, and whose honour has never in any other instance suffered the slightest tarnish. The lesson, we may hope, will not be lost upon future Governments. It is useless to attempt to disguise the truth. Sooner or later it is certain to be discovered, and then the bitter cup of shame must be drained to the very dregs. Even in the present case forty-nine members of the British Parliament have expressed their disgust and indignation at the manner in which public confidence was abused, and a feeling of uneasiness will long be entertained whenever a statement appears in a Blue-Book contrary to the convictions of the reader. His mind will naturally revert to the infamous Blue-Book of 1839, and his faith in Ministerial honesty will again, and perhaps unjustly, be rudely shaken. The character of British statesmen will long suffer from this scandalous exposure.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE £50 BONUS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the letter signed "A Doubter," in your issue of the 8th of March last, every one connected with the Indian Service must agree that, to offer to men of thirty or forty years' service—men who have even within the last twenty years passed through the Gwalior, Sutlej, and Punjab campaigns, the mutinies of Delhi and Lucknow—the paltry addition of 50*l.* a-year to their miserable income in this country as compared to their Indian allowances, is not likely most assuredly to reduce the higher grades of the Indian army.

It is very evident that the powers that be are very anxious to get rid of the Company's officers, as they are a check to a general service, and to the introduction of the purchase system throughout both armies; and if a more liberal policy than the one now offered were adopted, I feel confident that many who are thoroughly tired out, not to say disgusted, at treatment received and proposed, would be anxious to escape. What with famine, murders, suppression, and Horse-guards' patronage, the good old days of John Company's service are quite passed away.

Fancy no promotion, regimentally, in the place of those kicking their heels on the staff; but Sir C. Wood said, in answer to Sir G. Farquhar, "Regimental officers will, if of good character, and recommended by the Commander-in-Chief, when a vacancy occurs in a line regiment by the removal of some men to the staff corps, be permitted to enter the corps supplying the vacancy." How grateful old brevet captains ought to be for such a boon!—permitted, if of good character, to go into H.M.'s — regiment as junior captain, with those above them babies when they entered the Indian service, and hereafter to be purchased over by others unborn at that time!

Another pleasing boon, too, for grey-headed veterans is a Board composed of Horse-guards' nominees, to sit and examine the field officers of the Indian army as to their efficiency in commanding regiments, &c.!

Let, then, the Government pursue a more liberal policy, by which, too, they will certainly be the gainers, as fully proved by "A Doubter's" scale in the reduction of Indian allowances, as so many more would then be willing to retire.

Let them offer, as anticipated, 600*l.* a-year to lieutenant-colonels of a certain standing, and the pension of the grade immediately above that they now hold to other officers, commencing with a captain's pension, for the unfortunate brevet-captain, but still hardworked subaltern.

Advocate this, my dear sir, and gladden the hearts of many, as well as of that of

A REGIMENTAL OFFICER AND BREVET-CAPTAIN OF SEVENTEEN AND A-HALF YEARS' STANDING.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

DOUBLE INCOME-TAX.

Mr. CRAWFORD called attention to the levy of income-tax upon incomes and profits arising in India, which are already subject to an income-tax in that country. He referred to the petitions from merchants and others of London and other parts of the United Kingdom against the levy of a double income-tax, presented to the House upon the 7th instant, as setting forth the grounds upon which they complained of the injustice, inequality, and impolicy of subjecting them to this double charge. Mr. Crawford explained the manner in which the two imposts were made to act upon the same Indian security; the anomalies caused by the application of the principle adopted by the Board of Inland Revenue, under which the holders of some securities escaped the tax; the very great difficulties and complications to which it gave rise, and the peculiar bearing of the question upon the industry of India and the interests connected therewith. This country might be reasonably expected, he observed, not to lay an undue burden upon India, but rather to limit and lessen the pressure of its taxation. He suggested courses that might be taken to remedy the grievances complained of, and moved to refer the petitions to the Select Committee on Income and Property-tax.

The motion was seconded by Mr. FARQUHAR.

Mr. HANKEY could not agree with Mr. Crawford in the view taken by him, and in his conclusion to refer the subject of the alleged grievances to the Income-tax Committee. All income enjoyed in this country, derived from property here, or in India, Canada, or Australia, was, he contended, liable to income-tax. We had nothing to do with the taxation of India, any more than with that of a foreign country.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the Government had no objection to the motion. The question involved points of considerable importance, but, in assenting to the motion, he was bound to say that he thought the terms of the reference to the Income and Property tax Committee were not broad enough to cover the ground taken by Mr. Crawford. He had argued that India should be treated as an isolated case, and enjoy a peculiar exemption. He (Mr. Gladstone) differed from him upon this point, and he showed the confusion that must result from placing India in a category different from the Crown colonies. The proposition of Mr. Crawford would go to alter the whole basis of the English income-tax upon which it had been levied since 1842, and say that English subjects should be exempted from the tax on profits derived from property located in foreign countries.

Sir S. NORTHGOTE hoped that the petition would not be referred to the Committee, which would be overburdened if it was to enter into so large a subject.

After a few words from Mr. KINNAIRD,

Mr. DISRAELI said he hoped the House would pause before it assented to the motion. The subject was one which he thought the Government would be able to decide upon, and it would increase and complicate the labours of the Committee. The claim for exemption, in his opinion, would not bear any argument whatever.

Mr. BRIGHT concurred with Mr. Disraeli. If the question were referred to the Committee, it would, he thought, do all possible mischief to the Committee, and not the least good to the clients of Mr. Crawford, whom he advised to withdraw his motion.

The motion was withdrawn.

THE AFFGHANISTAN PAPERS.

Mr. DUNLOP moved for a Select Committee to consider the correspondence relating to Affghanistan, as presented to this House in 1839, and the same correspondence as presented in 1858, and printed by special order of the House in 1859, and to report on the discrepancies between the two; and also to inquire into the circumstances of the preparation of that correspondence for being presented on the former of these occasions; and to report their opinion whether any, and, if any, what precautions should be taken to secure that documents presented to this House by the Government as copies or extracts of correspondence or other papers shall give a true representation of the contents of such correspondence or papers. He dwelt with great severity upon the mutilation of the despatches of Sir Alexander Burnes in relation to the Affghan war, and showed from the restored passages, that Sir Alexander had been made to appear favourable to the war—the policy of which had begun to be questioned upon military as well as political grounds,—and substantially made out the case of the Government of the day, whereas his opinion, as expressed in the perfect letters, had been precisely the reverse. And these omissions and suppressions had been made, Mr. Dunlop observed, systematically, and for the very purpose of deceiving the House. In the case of one of the papers the mutilations effected the perversion of meaning with so much skill that the artist must, he remarked, be a man of genius. Mr. Dunlop urged the injury done by the falsification of his despatches to Sir Alexander Burnes, who was convinced not only of the injustice but of the impolicy of the course pursued by the Indian Government towards Dost Mahomed Khan. The reputation of a faithful public servant had been more unmercifully mangled by this treatment than his body by the Affghans, and this for the dastardly purpose of screening those who were responsible for the consequences of an unjust policy. This transaction, he said, had shaken the confidence of the people in public documents, and he thought that, having the means of discovering and exposing the guilty parties, the House ought not to shrink from doing so.

Lord PALMERSTON said he could not compliment Mr. Dunlop upon the temper he had displayed in his speech, and thought he would have shown more judgment had he abstained from the violent vituperations in which he had indulged, and which he (Lord Palmerston) repudiated in as strong terms as Mr. Dunlop had used. His speech, he observed, divided itself into two parts, one of a public nature, relating to the policy of the Indian and British Governments in regard to the operations in Affghanistan and Central Asia; the other was of a personal character, regarding the reputation of Lieutenant Sir Alexander Burnes. Mr. Dunlop acted upon the false assumption that it was for Lieut. Burnes to direct the policy of the Government of India, and not the Governor-general. Lieut. Burnes believed implicitly in the friendliness of Dost Mahomed Khan, and that the Indian Government ought to be guided by that consideration. But this was a short-sighted view of the matter, and the House must not judge the conduct of Lord Auckland and the Indian Government by that view, but by the grounds they laid before Parliament. It was true that Sir A. Burnes's despatches had been curtailed; but Parliament had not been misled thereby, or the reputation of Sir A. Burnes injured. The object of laying the despatches before Parliament was to show the policy upon which the Government thought fit to act, and the papers did show all the reasons which had induced them to adopt that policy. He was at a loss, he said, to see the particular object of the motion. Did Mr. Dunlop propose to refer it to a Committee in 1861 to consider whether the Indian and British Governments did right in 1838 in entering upon the operations in Affghanistan? [Mr. Dunlop said "No."] Then the object would be to see in what degree the omitted passages bore upon the policy of the Government, and he contended that those passages did not alter the grounds upon which the Government based the justification of its policy, which was not guided by the views and opinions of Sir Alexander Burnes.

Mr. BRIGHT observed that Lord Palmerston, who felt himself on his trial, had pretended that these despatches were of no importance; why, then, he asked, was such minute, ingenious, and unmatched care taken in mutilating them? Lord Palmerston, had, he said, heaped insult on the memory of Sir Alexander Burnes, who had faithfully fulfilled the duty reposed in him by the mad and obstinate policy of the noble lord, and he had, in his reply to Mr. Dunlop, evaded the whole question. He had admitted that there had been garbling, mutilation, and, practically, falsehood and forgery, in despatches laid before the House; an odious offence had therefore been committed, and the object was to find out who did it. Was it one of two noble lords or a subordinate who did the work, which slandered a public servant when that servant was dead?

After some remarks by Colonel SYKES,

Mr. DISRAELI said he considered the person responsible for the Affghan war was the English minister, and he must, therefore, look at the question as affecting the English Government, and the English Government alone. The motion was not merely a vote of censure or of want of confidence, but was both united, and a vote not only of want of confidence, but a vote of conduct that ought to be held up to reprobation. There were two points to be considered; first as to the policy of the Affghan war, and, secondly, as to the information in vindication of it laid before Parliament. He thought the policy of that war erroneous and dangerous. But this was twenty years ago, and an inquiry into that policy was a line which the House, in his opinion, ought not to pursue. Then, what were the reasons for the omissions in the information? Mr. Bright's accusation imputed a crime. But these omissions were no recent discovery, and if they deserved censure, how came Mr. Bright and his friends, less than two years ago, to express confidence in Lord Palmerston? The House should lay down some principle as to what amount of information should be given. Was all to be given, or was the minister to have the privilege of omission and suppression? No man would say he ought not; the question, then, was one of discretion and management. The discretion might be wrong, the management bad; but was the House to say that a crime had been committed? The adoption of the motion would lead to inconvenient consequences, and the House must push the matter much further. Although he considered the policy of the invasion of Affghanistan wrong, and that the information laid before Parliament had been somewhat shorn of its fair proportions, he believed that, though the minister might have acted erroneously, he had acted conscientiously, and he could not vote for the motion.

Mr. WATPOLE observed that the question was whether the discrepancies between the papers laid before the House twenty years ago and two years ago being brought to its notice, Parliament was to shut its eyes to the fact without inquiry. On this ground he should vote for the motion, except the latter part.

Lord J. RUSSELL totally denied the charges of any criminal intention on the part of the Government, or that these omissions had been made with a view to deceive Parliament.

After some remarks by Colonel DICKSON,

Mr. HORSMAN observed that the question was what was the rule and principle as to the information which the Ministers of the Crown had to present to Parliament on subjects respecting which it ought to be informed. Mr. Disraeli said it was a matter of discretion and management; but he contended that it was a matter of confidence and responsibility,—the confidence which the House placed in ministers and their sense of responsibility. He complained of the system of secrecy which prevailed, and which was inconsistent, he said, with the responsibility of the Government. Two sets of despatches had been laid before the House, and they differed. The subject had been brought before the House; and, being so, they were invited to make inquiry, and he should vote for the inquiry on principle.

Some observations were made by Mr. BAILLIE, and Mr. BAXTER moved as an amendment to omit the words in the motion after "opinion."

This amendment gave rise to further debate, and, upon a division, it was negatived by 158 to 61.

A division was then taken upon the original motion, which was likewise negatived by 159 to 49.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MARCH 22.

INDIAN FINANCE.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH asked the Under Secretary of State for India when he would lay on the table the last financial despatch from India.

Earl DE GREY and RUPON did not think it would be desirable to lay that despatch on the table by itself. It formed part of a series of financial correspondence, which he would produce for the information of their lordships as soon as he was in a position to do so.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH hoped that the information referred to by his noble friend would be full, and would include that relating to the railways.

Earl DE GREY and RUPON said that full information as to the state of the railways, financially and otherwise, would be found in the annual report which he hoped to be able to lay on the table in the course of about a fortnight.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIRECT CADETS.—The following gentlemen passed their examination on the 19th inst.:—Messrs. C. M. Browne, J. A. D. Gordon, H. A. Laye, B. H. Russell, G. Waterhouse, and W. B. Warren.

KNIGHTHOOD.—(St. James's Palace, March 13.)—The Queen was this day pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon Colonel George Everest, C.B. and F.R.S., on the retired list of the Bengal artillery, formerly Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, and Surveyor-general of India. The Queen was also this day pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon Colley Harman Scotland, Esq., Chief Justice of Madras.

CEYLON RAILWAY.—The directors in their report state that immediately after the extraordinary general meeting, held on the 14th of February, they communicated to the Secretary of State for the Colonies the resolution of the proprietors adopted at that meeting, "That the proposition of the colony be unconditionally accepted," expressing, at the same time, their readiness to concert measures with the Government for carrying that resolution into effect. The necessary legal arrangements are in progress for dissolving the company's contract with the Ceylon Government. As soon as they are completed—and no time will be lost on the part of the directors—the shareholders will receive back their subscriptions in full, with interest at 6 per cent. per annum to the date of payment.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—On Thursday morning an extraordinary meeting of this company was held at the office in Gresham-street, to obtain the sanction of the proprietors to borrow on bond, under the Eastern Bengal Railway Act, 1857, sums of money not exceeding in the whole 400,000*l.*, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, such principal sums and interest being guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council. Mr. F. Leslie presided, and in moving the necessary resolution authorising the issue of the debentures, explained that the whole 400,000*l.*, in addition to 120,000*l.* remaining uncalled-up of the share capital, would be required to complete the line, which would be ready for opening in April, 1862. The resolution was carried unanimously.

RED SEA TELEGRAPH.—A circular has been issued by the Red Sea and India Telegraph Company, announcing that, as the Bill to remove the impediment to the payment of the dividend has been read a third time in the House of Lords, and only awaits the Royal assent, the directors hope in a few days to be in a position to issue the requisite warrants. The Bill is confined simply to a declaration that the guarantee is not contingent on the line being in working order, and the Board observe "that they have throughout been advised that there was no doubt of the effect of the contract on this point, but it was obviously not the policy of the company to interfere with a proceeding which the Government considered necessary to enable them to pay the dividend."

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz.:

3 ft. wide by 6 ft. 4 in. long.....£2 5 0

3 ft. 6 in. " " ..... 2 10 0

4 ft. " " " ..... 2 15 0

4 ft. 6 in. " " ..... 3 0 0

5 ft. " " " ..... 3 5 0

5 ft. 6 in. " " ..... 3 10 0

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—DOMESTIC REMEDIES.—There are two periods, especially in woman's life, which require for safe passage judgment and attention. Irregularity is apt at those critical times to take place and to lay the foundation of future disease. Holloway's Ointment, well rubbed upon the defective organs, will soon restore them to the full performance of their natural functions, and completely relieve the system of these first seeds of disease. The Pills, safe in action and effective in result, should be likewise taken, as they contribute materially to the Ointment's efficiency. The proper use of these domestic remedies prevents nervousness, hysteria, erysipelas, dropsy, and a host of similar and often serious disorders. By expelling all impurities they maintain a clear silky complexion.

MUMFORD'S CONCENTRATED

CARDIAC ESSENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER.

The Cardiac Essence, which is now taken in preference to all other preparations of Ginger, not only from its agreeable flavour, but from the value and certainty of its effects, will be found most useful in all cases of indigestion, spasms, heartburn, diarrhoea, irritability of the bowels, and in most nervous affections. To invalids suffering with impaired digestion from long residence in warm climates, and to those who are proceeding to India, this preparation cannot be too strongly recommended.

Prepared only by GEORGE MUMFORD, Chemist, 5, Bathurst-street, Hyde-park-gardens, and sold by all Chemists, in bottles at 2s. 9d., 1s. 6d., and 11s. each; also in large stoppered bottles for foreign use, at 21s.

DINNEFORD'S PURE FLUID MAGNE-

SIA has been, during twenty-five years, emphatically sanctioned by the Medical Profession, and universally accepted by the Public, as the Best Remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a Mild Aperient for delicate constitutions, more especially for Ladies and Children. Combined with the Acidulated Lemon Syrup, it forms an agreeable Effervefcent Draught, in which its Aperient qualities are much increased. During Hot Seasons, and, above all, in Hot Climates, the regular use of this simple and elegant remedy has been found highly beneficial.

Manufactured (with the utmost attention to strength and purity) by DINNEFORD & Co., 172, New Bond-street, London, and sold by all respectable Chemists throughout the Empire.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, SET in the new

CHEMICALLY PREPARED INDIA-RUBBER, forming a beautifully fitting plate to the gums, or over stamps, without producing the slightest pain, and on this plan it is impossible to detect them as artificial when the workmanship is of superior order. Mr. BRADSHAW can, with the greatest confidence, undertake any case, no matter how difficult, with certain success, being a thoroughly practical workman, supplying for many years the first dentists of the day with their most particular work in Artificial Teeth. Doing all his own work himself, he is enabled to supply his patients at an exceedingly moderate price. Single Teeth, from 5s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.; a Complete Upper or Lower Set, from £2 to £5. Mr. Bradshaw, Dentist, 20, Great Portland-street, Oxford-circus.

COMMANS'S CELEBRATED ARECA-

NUT TOOTH-PASTE is used by her Majesty and the Royal Family.—Has been examined, approved, is used and recommended, by many of our first physicians and dentists as the best preparation known for cleaning and preserving the teeth. Testimonials have been received, unsolicited, from many of the nobility and gentry. The following is amongst the many testimonials of its high value.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

We are in receipt of letters and papers from Calcutta to the 22nd of February, from Bombay to the 23rd, and from Hong Kong to the 15th of that month. The accounts from the famine-stricken districts increase in horror by each succeeding mail, notwithstanding the most strenuous efforts of the Government officials to mitigate the wretchedness of the starving peasantry. Elsewhere we give a letter addressed by Colonel Baird Smith, in the name of the Calcutta Committee, to the Lord Mayor of London, imploring the aid of British wealth and charity. Acting on timid and selfish advice his lordship, we regret to say, at first refused to lend the moral influence of his temporary position to the relief of his fellow-subjects in a distant land. Better counsels and the kindly feelings of his own heart, however, finally prevailed, and a second letter, forwarded by the same mail as the first, inclosed the promise of co-operation, and by way of confirmation, a draft for £1,000. Yesterday an influential meeting,—the proceedings of which will be found in another part of this paper,—was held in the Egyptian Hall at the Mansion House, and a subscription list was opened, headed by a donation of £500 from the Bank of England. In all, upwards of £4,000 have already been collected, which may be accepted as a fair indication that the great tide of benevolence has at length set in in favour of our suffering fellow-creatures in India.

Mr. Laing's Currency Bill is roughly criticised by the Calcutta journals, who complain, with some reason, of its limp and irresolute character. In point of fact, the issue of only four millions of notes is of no earthly advantage to the mercantile and trading communities, as the notes of the Presidency banks will be called in and cancelled. An issue of £10,000,000, including a large proportion of one pound notes, might safely have been ventured upon, and the area of their convertibility extended over the whole of Lower Bengal, or rather to all the large civil stations throughout the peninsula.

Mr. Laing's selection of his son, a lad of seventeen, to fill the important post of private secretary, has occasioned much dissatisfaction in Calcutta. It is true that Mr. Laing draws only £300 a-year for his services, whereas the salary sanctioned by Government was £1,000. But that is not the question. There are certain duties to be discharged which require the experience and ability represented by a salary of £1,000 per annum, and therefore when Mr. Laing contents himself with £300 he practically admits that his secretary is not one-third as good as he ought to be.

The news from Sikkim is favourable, though somewhat meagre in its details. The pith of it seems to be that there is no enemy to contend with, except the natural difficulties of the country.

The disputes between the planters and the ryots have again revived, and in even greater intensity than before. Like Peachum and Lockitt, they are "both in the wrong," and therefore neither will consent to a compromise or listen to conciliatory suggestions. The consequences, however, will be very disastrous to both parties, and the ultimate result will probably be the discontinuance of indigo cultivation in Lower Bengal, except on a comparatively limited scale.

Lord Canning returned to Calcutta late in the evening of the 17th February, and on the following day resumed his seat as President of the Council. With characteristic munificence the noble earl has intimated his intention of contributing a marble statue to the massacre memorials at Cawnpore.

The latest intelligence from Japan is of a very disquieting nature, and foreshadows the usual consequences that ensue when civilised and half-civilised nations come in contact. Mr. Heusken, secretary to the American Minister, has been murdered, and the French and English Ministers have hauled down their flags and retired from Jeddo to Kanagawa—Mr. Harris, however, nobly remaining at his post.

General Collineau, commander-in-chief of the French forces at Tien-tsin, died January 15th, from paralysis superinduced by small-pox. He was followed to the grave by Mr. Bruce and the officers of the English army. His successor is Colonel, now General, O'Malley.

The expedition to open up the Yang-tse was to leave Shanghai on the 12th of last month, and much interest is felt as to its results.

THE MONEY MARKET.

During the past week we note no important change in the state of the money market. The Bank rates remain unaltered, and since the latest advices were received from Bombay announcing a less stringent market, the bazaar rates in Calcutta for short dated loans have ruled lower even than those of the Bank of Bengal.

Compared with the corresponding period of last year the Bank's returns show:—

An increase in cash of ...	Rs. 1,08,96,894
An increase in deposits of ...	65,89,392
A decrease in circulation of ...	69,43,661
A decrease in advances of ...	1,07,77,905

It will be in the recollection of our readers that the 5½ per Cent. Loan was closed towards the middle of February, 1860. The demand for accommodation in consequence was excessive,

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

The Mails for China are despatched at the same rate of postage as those to India; but must be pre-paid.

and the Bank's rates of interest steadily rose until they stood at 10 per cent. on Bills and 9 per cent. on loans covered by Government securities. Making every allowance for this disturbing element in the comparison, there is no doubt that the amount of capital still lying idle in the coffers of the Bank remains unprecedentedly high.

Government securities have changed hands to a limited extent only. The tone of the market had a decidedly upward tendency until receipt of the Bombay Express containing particulars of the causes which led to the stringency of the money market in London. Still we note the 5½ per Cents. at 1-0 to 1-2 premium; 5 per Cents. at 4-8 to 5 discount, and 4 per Cents. at 19-12 to 20 discount. Bank of Bengal shares have been done at Rs. 6,100.—Friend of India, Feb. 21.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA.—A meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, was held yesterday, Mr. Mitchell, M.P., in the chair, when the report was adopted unanimously, and a dividend declared for the past half year of 3 per cent., making a total distribution for 1860 of 6½ per cent., free of Income-tax. It was stated that the directors had hoped to continue the dividend at the previous rate, but the profits have been smaller, owing to the low value of money in India at a time when it was advancing in England. The equilibrium, however, has now been restored, and money in India is at its usual proportionably higher value than in this country. Some effect was likewise probably caused by the interruption of the trade with China through the war. The directors consider it essential for the bank, with its business and liabilities, to appropriate a sum to the reserve, notwithstanding the slight diminution in the profits, and therefore recommend £5,000 to be thus applied. The bank, however, is steadily advancing in prosperity, the sum realised in 1859 having been £37,311, and in 1860, £45,352, the dividends in each year being respectively 6 and 6½ per cent. In answer to questions, it was mentioned that, like other Indian banks, the bulk of the deposits bear interest. The rate allowed is generally 5 per cent. for one year, and four months' notice of withdrawal. Resolutions were passed approving the application to the Treasury for a supplementary charter empowering the issue of notes at Singapore—a privilege which has already been obtained by the Oriental Bank, and to postpone the annual meetings from March to April.

BENGAL.

FIRST HINDOO M.A.

There is every prospect that in a few days an Indian University will for the first time confer on a Hindoo the honourable degree of Master of Arts. That degree is very difficult of attainment, to a young Hindoo almost hopelessly so. It is in all respects so very honourable that no mercy is shown to the candidate who aspires to it. It is conferred only on those who, having taken a first class Bachelor's degree, "go up" for honours in some one of the great subjects of study—languages, history, mathematics and natural philosophy, natural history and the physical sciences, the mental and moral sciences. Every candidate, moreover, must possess "a complete knowledge of every subject included in the branch in which he is examined." The few Bachelors of Arts who have hitherto gone up have failed. The only one who went up this year to the Calcutta University has, we believe, succeeded. His name is Taraprosono Mookerjee, of the same family as that to which Joykissen, the well-known zemindar of Ootrapara, belongs. It is characteristic that the first Master of Arts in India should be a Bengalee, a Brahmin, and of the highest order of Brahmins. It is equally characteristic of the Hindoo intellect that the subject he has chosen for examination is the higher mathematics, embracing algebra, plane, analytical and solid geometry, the calculus, spherical trigonometry, statics and dynamics, hydrostatics, hydraulics and pneumatic, optics and astronomy. The other branches, being non-mechanical, are eschewed. The examiners were the Venerable Archdeacon Pratt, the Rev. Dr. Mackay and Mr. Thwaites, all, and especially the first, eminent in their own departments, and what is as important, all men of honour and common sense. The Calcutta University during the five years of its existence will thus have one Master of Arts, thirty-eight Bachelors of Arts, (one having become Master) twelve Bachelors of Law, and eight Licentiates in Law. The following table gives details of the Bachelor's degree.—

Year.	Number of Candidates.	Number passed.		Average proportion of passed to total number of candidates.
		1st Division.	2nd Division.
1859	20	3	7	50.0
1860	65	6	7	20.0
	137	14	25

The University certainly cannot be accused of dispensing its honours cheaply, only 39 having passed out of 137 candidates, and of these 39 only 14 in the first class.

The Madras University examinations have been going on during the past week. For the matriculation examination there were only 84 candidates against 809 in Calcutta, and for the Bachelor's degree 10 candidates, who are this week being examined. Madras has passed one Doctor of Medicine, one Bachelor of Arts in the first class, and nine in the second.—Friend of India, Feb. 14.

SCHOOLS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Than the present no time could be more unsuited for the settlement by Government of any educational question involving expenditure. And yet the course of events has forced the consideration of such a question upon the authorities, and calls loudly for an attempt, at least, to educate the masses, who, when untaught, are indeed the dangerous classes. The disputes connected with the cultivation of indigo have roused the greater part of lower Bengal down to the lowest stratum of the population. Whole castes and races throughout India, who previously lived in densest ignorance of their rulers and were unaffected alike by the tramp of the conqueror and the decrees of the legislator, have for the first time been brought face to face with the State by the indirect result of the taxation of the wealthier class. And even the poor and the oppressed have had their desires excited and their sluggish powers quickened by a series of good years, prosperous crops and high prices which since the Russian war have doubled the rates paid for produce and increased the value of labour. Apart from all other reasons Government must now consider the question of the education of the masses. The exchequer may be empty, but the young hydra-headed monster is meanwhile growing in ferocity. The balance sheet may show a deficit, but taxation has been and will be imposed in a shape which will ultimately affect the lowest labourer. The cry for reduction of expenditure may be great, but it will be more economical to sacrifice a useless canal to Calcutta or barracks for Berar which will be abandoned by the next Commander-in-Chief, than to leave the millions to grow strong without growing intelligent. Moreover, part of the one per cent. of the Income-tax is promised for education, and, if it cannot be given this year or the next, it is well that a plan of action should be determined on.

Nearly two years ago Lord Stanley sent out an unfortunate despatch to India on the subject of vernacular education. The Government was roused to a show of zeal, so long as he was in power. Returns were called for, and Lord Canning invited the suggestions of outsiders as well as officials interested in the subject. Cheapness was insisted on as the great recommendation of any plan, an essential where the question is the education of the inhabitants of a country which is larger than Europe, and whose peoples speak twenty-six different dialects. The replies sent in are now before us, from judges, magistrates, landholders, missionaries, schoolmasters, school inspectors. All are singularly unanimous on two points, which are contradictory and destructive of each other. No cheap system of vernacular education is possible unless by means of the indigenous village schools. The village schoolmasters are as a rule ignorant, obstinate, immoral, and hopelessly unteachable. The problem that none of the writers attempt to solve is—how to make use of the system or machinery which is confessed to be good as adapted to the people, while getting rid of the men who, if an attempt is made to use them, will make the little light there is in Bengal darkness. Based on these papers the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has sent in a scheme to the Supreme Government which he believes to have "the merits of simplicity, cheapness and indefinite extension." It unfortunately lacks the other merit of efficiency for the end in view, a want which is fatal to the most perfect scheme in itself. Confining the grant-in-aid system to English education he would pay the cost of his scheme out of the general revenues of the State, a necessity which has been demonstrated even in England. Recognising the existing 30,000 village schools in Bengal, he would direct the inspector to select those which he deems most capable of improvement. With the selected schools he would in no way interfere, except by supplying good books at a low price, and nursing the existing education into something a little better. Beginning with what is now taught by dictation, he would proceed to land measurement, a little grammar, geography, and Indian history, and, if possible, the reading of books of instruction and amusement and writing neatly on leaves or paper. He would have the inspector "by conference, by judicious advice, and by holding out hopes of reward, to stimulate the best men of the class to greater exertion, and to lead them to adopt an improved course of study. This, it must be conceded, is the one difficulty of the scheme. But it does not seem an insurmountable difficulty. When a certain number of Goorooes shall have been induced to adopt the improved system, the feeling of the people will be so much in favour of it as to force it upon the remainder, or to drive them out of employment.

The reward he would pay in cash to the Gooroo to the extent of Rs. 30 or Rs. 36 a year. He would establish model schools in a few thickly-populated rural villages, which the State would build and for which it would supply a teacher on Rs. 20 a month, the same branches being taught as in the indigenous school, but in a better style. Allowing 100 indigenous and 6 model schools in each zillah, with four sub-inspectors on Rs. 100 a month each, he would launch the scheme at an annual cost of only Rs. 12,000 for each of the 42 districts in Bengal proper. As the plan succeeded it might be indefinitely expended. He would have no normal schools, because one would be required for each district, but would feed the indigenous from the model schools. Where the model teachers are to come from does not appear, unless miraculously, or on the principle that, with teachers as with textile fabrics, the demand will produce the supply, though even the former require improved machinery. "If the support extended to the native village schools should result in success, that success will immediately raise the character of the schools and of the indigenous teachers, and will call forth fresh teachers as a natural consequence, and thus we shall attain our object."

Nothing could be more shadowy than this plan. We have said that while the existing village machinery is admirable, the Gooroo who work it are hopeless. Nine-tenths of them cannot read a printed book. One zemindar thus describes his own countrymen:—

"An ordinary village teacher is, generally speaking, an almost worthless being. His acquirements go no further than a miserable kind of reading, writing a good hand, in utter defiance of correct orthography, and a mechanical knowledge of the fundamental rules of arithmetic and the rule of three. To the art of teaching he is an utter stranger. I have scarcely seen him teach morality, either by precept or example; but it is common that his pupils derive many lessons of immorality from him."

For the British Government to support the present system of village schools would be to propagate actively all that is contemptible in education, vile in morality, and abominable in idolatry. While the great essential of any plan is cheapness, it would be better to leave the difficulty unsolved than increase it by this official plan. But why not try an experiment on a small scale? If we cannot educate a province why not a zillah? A people will be what their teachers are, hence the first requisite of any vernacular system of education is a normal school, conducted as Lancaster, Bell, or Stowe would have done, taught on the training system with its masses, its pupil teachers, its normal masters. The training system began in Madras, and till it is restored to the country which gave it birth schools for the people will be only the abodes of ignorance and vice. That system gave the first impulse to national education in England, when the peasantry were almost as ignorant as the ryots of Bengal. And what has it not accomplished?

Normal schools on the training system; a rule strictly enforced that after three years no man will be employed by the State who cannot read and write, in even the meanest capacity; and the inspection of schools by the civil officers on the same plan as now pursued in the Punjab, will lay the basis of a cheap and an efficient school system for the masses. Because Mr. Grant cannot spend half a million sterling on a good scheme, must he spend a quarter of a million on a bad one? Let him confine the area and spend liberally within it on a good system, and there will be hope for the ignorant millions of India.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—To the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London.—"My Lord,—About three years ago it was the painful duty of a Relief Committee, appointed by the inhabitants of Calcutta in public meeting assembled, to appeal to the sympathies and entreat the help of the people of England for the sufferers by a disastrous national calamity. That appeal was made through a benevolent and most energetic predecessor of your lordship in the high office you now hold; and under the hands of the late Lord Mayor Finnis and his generous associates there rose in all its magnificent proportions the Relief Fund for the sufferers by the Indian mutiny, to be to all time a noble proof that in their charities as in their dominion the British people are truly imperial. It has again, my lord, become the duty of a Relief Committee, similarly appointed, to seek anew the speedy help of their fellow-countrymen, to enable them to mitigate the pressure of another terrible calamity, strangely associated with that to which reference has just been made. We have not now to appeal on behalf of men, women, and children of our own blood and faith, ruined in property or injured in person by an outburst of the worst passions of humanity; but we have to appeal on behalf of aliens in race, in creed, and in social customs, the inhabitants of those very districts which formed the central region of the great revolt of 1857, and are now the seat of a devastating famine. The names of the chief places for which aid is sought by us are full, we know well, of sad memories to many English hearts. Meerut, Delhi, Agra, Allypore, Hansi, Hissar, and more might seem as present scenes of awful suffering rather to satisfy justice than to demand sympathy and succour. It is, however, because we are deeply conscious that the great national heart is thoroughly noble in its instincts, and harbours no mean revenge, that we confidently submit the claims of these wretched sufferers, certain of a response worthy of a Christian people who have accepted them as fellow-subjects of the same gracious Sovereign and fellow-members of the same imperial dominion. For the details of these sufferings the Executive Committee of the Famine Relief Fund respectfully refer your lordship to the accompanying statements, which are believed by them to present a faithful and unexaggerated picture of the prevailing distress. As the season advances the misery will become more and more intense; and it is not until about October or November next that permanent relief can be looked for from a good harvest. Thus far there is no deficiency of food, though of course it is imported at famine prices. Private enterprise is as yet amply sufficient to meet the demand, and all interference with it is wisely avoided. But the total failure of rain has made the ordinary agricultural work of the afflicted district physically impossible, and not a plough can be made to turn the iron soil unless where water is artificially supplied. Hence the labour of a vast multitude of men has become suddenly valueless. Lancashire or Yorkshire would not be more helpless were cotton and wool suddenly to disappear from the earth, than are the agricultural population of Upper India when tillage has become impracticable from the failure of the usual rains. All means at the command of the Government or the general community are being earnestly and largely employed in mitigation of the misery; the local communities in the North-West and the Punjab are taxing themselves to the uttermost; the other Presidencies have lately lent their assistance; and in Calcutta alone upwards of £8,000 have been subscribed within the fortnight that has passed since the necessity for external help was publicly recognised. But the magnitude of the calamity outgrows even the largest local means most liberally provided, and we are now constrained to seek national help. Encouraged, my lord, by the noble results which crowned your predecessor's efforts on behalf of this remote land, we venture to hope that, should you be pleased to recognise the force of our appeal, and lend us the powerful support of your dignity and influence, results scarcely less noble will crown yours, and show to the world, in a form above cavil, that if the British nation can exact a stern retribution for insults or injury, it can also pardon and succour with a magnificent generosity." On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Calcutta Famine Relief Fund, R. BAIRD SMITH, Colonel, Aide-de-Camp to the Queen, Chairman.

THE CANNING MONUMENTS.—At last there is action in the matter of the massacre monuments at Cawnpore. Colonel Yule, directed by Lord Canning, has sent to the North-West Government designs for an Iona Cross on an appropriate basement, to be erected over Wheeler's Well, and for an octagonal Gothic screen and platform to encircle the Massacre Well. They will bear the following inscriptions:—On the face of the Cross. "In a Well under this Cross were laid, by the hands of their fellows in suffering, the bodies of men, women, and children, who died hard by during the heroic defence of Wheeler's entrenchment when beleaguered by the rebel Nana, June 6th to 27th. A.D. MDCCCLVII." On the face of the pedestal of the Cross. "Our bones are scattered at the grave's mouth as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth. But our eyes are unto thee O God the Lord." Psalm CXLI. On the Well within the screen. "Sacred to the perpetual memory of a great company of Christian people, chiefly women and children, who near this spot were cruelly massacred by the followers of the rebel Nana Dhoondopunt, of Bithoor, and cast, the dying with the dead, into the Well below, on the 15th day of July, MDCCCLVII." With the exception of the phrase "died hard by" the inscriptions are most becoming. Lord Canning himself will contribute a marble statue, to be executed in England, and to be erected over or by the side of the massacre well. It should be within the screen. Will it represent Rachel weeping for her children, or the Angel of the Resurrection? The crosses erected by the soldiers of the 32nd and of the Artillery will be re-erected as near their original site as possible. The architectural parts of the screen are entrusted by Lord Canning to Mr. C. B. Thornhill, c.s., "knowing his strong interest in the matter, and his acquaintance with the details of Gothic architecture." The whole platform of the foundations will be about sixty feet in diameter.

OPPIUM.—The impression in the Bazaar is, that Malwa will be short this season, and as considerable excitement prevails, owing to gambling transactions, the price of the drug has advanced, and may be quoted at for delivery:—

THE TEA DISTRICTS.—The Hills notices the prosperity of the tea districts of Upper India. Five companies have been formed in the Kangra district, besides several private concerns, both native and European, to the number of nearly 400. In Dehra Doon the value of land has risen 300 per cent. Though the drought last season was unfavourable to the plant, the output in Government plantations was about 70,000 lbs., and 117 tons of seed. Of these, 76 tons and 2½ millions of seedlings were distributed gratis to planters.

PUBLIC SPIRIT AT DARJEELING.—The tea-planters and landowners of Darjeeling have energetically offered to contribute a sum of Rs. 10,000 from their municipal funds for the construction of a cart road from the foot of the hills to the station. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has added Rs. 2,000, and promised to include the expenditure for the road in the next budget. A beginning has been made, so that the road from the spur at Hope Town to Kursiong will be open before the rains set in.

UMBALLA, Feb. 19.—The Commander-in-Chief arrived here yesterday about seven A.M.; the usual salute was fired. A levee was held at ten o'clock, and brigade parade at four, the troops being Colonel Blunt's troop of horse artillery, her Majesty's 7th hussars, the 1st company 3rd battalion foot artillery, the 92nd highlanders, 2nd battalion rifle brigade and Kelat-i-Ghizies. Sir Hugh was punctual, and inspected the troops; after this the infantry formed close masses in rear of cavalry, and the whole marched past. There was then a little brigade exercise, which lasted till sundown. I see the infantry are out again this morning, and the artillery will finish their practice under the eye of the chief.

SIMLA, Feb. 17.—Very large quantities of grain of every description continue to be transported from these hills to the plains. Almost daily do we see carts, mules, ponies, laden with this precious food, going down the hill, and thus daily as our stores diminish does the price of grain rise in the Simla market. There has not been a scarcity at all of anything but grain in the hills, yet we also are experiencing the rigours of famine, though not of course to the same extent as in the cities and districts of Agra, Meerut, Delhi, and others; this is owing to the large supplies which have been drawn from the rich valleys of these favoured hills. Though the supply has hitherto been liberal, it were well if the authorities now took measures in time to prevent the land being entirely denuded, for if food should fail in the hills the distress would be worse than in the plains. There you can look for two distinct harvests in the year, when rain does fall, and no doubt there are large granaries filled with food; here we can only expect one harvest, there being none in the winter, owing to the cold, nor have we any store-houses for amassing the produce of other years. Under Providence there will be a harvest in the Punjab Dhoon, and all along the course of the Sutlej, nearly equal to other years, in the month of April, but there will be no harvest in the hills till the end of August or beginning of September. Besides this, the Simla season is before us; we shall have to provide for a large concourse of natives of every description, who come in the train of the English visitors. This increase to the population will cause the scarcity to be more than ever apparent, and add much to our distress. Attah is now ten seers for the rupee, gram being the same price. Our hill servants do not yet feel the dearthness of food, for as yet they can draw supplies from their homes, but even this is failing, and soon they also will join in the lamentations of the servants from the plains.—Delhi Gazette.

EXAMINATIONS OF PLEADERS AND MOONSIFFS.—The Hurkaru mentions that the Lieutenant-governor has approved of the report of the committee appointed to frame rules for the examination of pleaders and moonsiffs. Henceforth no candidate must be under twenty years of age, and fees of 20 and 10 rupees for the senior and junior grades of pleaders respectively must be paid by each candidate previous to his being admitted to the examination. A degree in law of the Calcutta University will enable the holder to practice in the Mofussil Courts. One who passes in the senior grade will be allowed to practice in the Sudder as well as in the subordinate courts, and will be eligible as moonsiff; the junior grade candidates will be confined to the subordinate courts. The examination will be in English or Bengali. It is not said if the examination is to be independent of the University degree.

DARJEELING, Feb. 11.—The forces are now in the heart of Sikkim, and find to their surprise that the country has been abandoned by the inhabitants. The villages are quite deserted, and our people have travelled for miles without seeing a living being, so great is the influence which that rascally Dewan has over his subjects, who are, in heart, disposed to favour our advances. Glad, indeed, would they be if they were taken under British rule. The scenery in some portions of Sikkim is very beautiful, and the soil rich, producing a luxuriant abundance of corn. The right of way through Sikkim, which, I suppose, the Rajah will now be compelled to afford, will open up in course of time a considerable traffic in grain, and I shall not be surprised if, by this time next year, rice, barley, and Indian corn are regularly brought over into the Darjeeling market. The regular troops are accompanied by the Sebundee sappers, who are made to cut out a pathway or road the whole way. Marching among these steep and rugged mountains is dreadfully laborious and tiresome, and the whole force have endured much exposure and privation, but, fortunately, it has enjoyed an immunity from sickness. Progress is sadly impeded through want of baggage coolies, and the few gangs that Mr. Eden and Colonel Gawler did manage to secure by a prompt enhancement of wages are being thinned by daily desertions. The dearth of coolies at this crisis is mainly attributable to Dr. Campbell's neglect to offer sufficient inducement to the chief coolie sirdars while they were still in the place, and before the alarm created by our movements had grown stronger than their cupidity. These hill people invariably wish to run off to their homes when there is any panic, but a stiff nip of Bengal rum, the promise of "baksheesh," and a little "soft sawder" will generally retain them. Dr. Campbell would probably have tried this simple recipe had not his wrath at Mr. Eden's appointment blinded him to everything, except the galling fact of his supercession, which, no doubt, he looks upon as a piece of monstrous injustice. It is a mistake, I think, to have both Mr. Eden and Dr. Campbell up here with divided powers, as it is not in the nature of things to expect cordial co-operation between them. On the contrary, they would naturally be likely to oppose and thwart each other's plans. It is also a pity that a Queen's officer and a company's officer, both able and gallant men, should be retained together in a position where there is a chance of their coming to loggerheads about the command. I allude, of course, to the rumours about Colonel Gawler and Major Renny having had a misunderstanding, but I am not sure of this being true. It was Major Impey, of the Bengal Engineers, and not Captain Murray, who constructed that famous bamboo bridge or raft (about 120 feet long) over the Runjeet. It is as wonderfully simple in its construction as it is effective, and I shall send you a sketch of it.—P. S.—Since writing the above I have been told that Dr. Campbell has heard of the enemy collecting in force opposite Goke, with the intention of attacking Darjeeling. The force left behind in Darjeeling is sufficient for its protection, so there is no occasion for alarm about the station. . . .—Feb. 12.—We are three marches in the enemy's country; slow work—but we only go three or four miles at a time, and very cautiously; five more marches and we shall be at Tumloong, the capital. We made a night surprise on the 6th. After our march at eight p.m. Colonel Gawler came round the camp and called for volunteers, and got most of the officers and some fifty men, and at 9-45 p.m. we started off, going a long round, and by daylight (going along the most awful paths in the pitch dark) reached Sundookchee, and there we had scarcely laid down five minutes (in ambush) when the enemy approached. We waited till they were within twenty yards, then with a volley and yell rushed on them. They did not wait for us, but bolted down the khud, the wounded rolling, and the whole running like wild deer. We then went on to Sundookchee, looted it, and returned to camp, reaching it at eleven a.m. We had thirteen hours as hard work as I ever experienced; but it was well managed and complete. We march on the 11th, waiting for stores. We are very healthy and jolly; a lovely climate; but we have nothing but rations and rum. Colonel Gawler is certainly a good officer.—Englishman.

THE SANTHALS.—The Abkarree Department, says the Friend of India, "has worked its usual course in demoralising the Santals. A correspondent of the Hurkaru declares:—'In one village I came through the people were all drunk: there was not a sober person in the village, man, woman, or child, to direct my men to the right road, and I understand this is frequently the case. Formerly when they drank their own spirits called pechue, they required to swallow nearly ten gallons before they became intoxicated. This was slow and heavy work. Now they can get intoxicated in the licensed shops very quickly, and with little draughts, chiefly from the meeawa tree.' This is the people, adds our contemporary, whom the Court of Directors refused to allow Lord Canning to educate. Can Mr. Yule, the Commissioner, not turn every Abkarree farmer out of the district as he did every policeman? On this question of "excise" the British is really, though not intentionally, worse than the Russian Government, which forces its vile brandy on the serfs.

ALLAHABAD, Feb. 16.—The Governor-general did not stay long here on his return from Lucknow. He arrived by train on Monday night, and on Tuesday morning went over the works of the Jumna Bridge, and expressed himself much satisfied with the progress made since he visited it last year. The same evening his lordship left for Benares. The 48th regiment, under Colonel Campbell, left this on Tuesday for Cawnpore by rail, en route to Seetapore, and on Wednesday arrived by rail the carabineers, who marched down to the Chatham barracks, lately vacated by the 48th; they gave up their horses at Cawnpore, and seem to be glad to be turning their backs on the burning plains of Hindostan. They, however, will not leave this for some time yet, owing to a want of carriage. There is a grand cricket match going on to-day between them and the 38th, which is expected to be a hard tussle between the best elevens. Colonel Haly, of the latter corps, is now commanding the station, as brigadier. Colonel Clute left on Thursday to join his corps, the 70th, prior to embarking to New Zealand. The 90th light infantry are expected to arrive here next week. The ice crops seem to have failed almost everywhere in India this cold season. Here we have made none, and shall have to content ourselves with cooling our wines with saltpetre. We have had most strange weather; for a few days and nights the temperature was lower than we have had it before, but the high wind which accompanied the cold was not favourable to ice-making. A sudden change has come over the weather within the last week, and I am afraid we may say good-bye to the cold season for this year. Mr. Schalch is here on his return from Lucknow, after ending his inquiries into the note business.—Englishman.

THE MOORSHEDABAD DISTRICT.—We (Englishman) have received from Government an interesting statistical and geographical report of the Moorshedabad district by Captain J. Gastrell, 13th N.I. There are 7,866 villages in the district, the area in square miles is 2,492, the number of houses 2,40,000, and the number of inhabitants 11,00,000; the land revenue is Rs. 12,90,600, or about 1 rupee per head. To govern this immense district there is one judge, one magistrate and collector, one joint magistrate, and one assistant. Captain Gastrell says nothing of the disturbances; but that the indigo and silk manufacturers are very hospitable. Near Moorshedabad are the ruins of the residency and silk filatures of Cossimbazar, established by the East India Company in their trading days. Near these ruins there exists a grave-yard, in which the remains of many who laboured in the service of the old company lie. Amongst them is the tomb of Mrs. Warren Hastings, who died on the 12th July, 1759. There are some older Dutch monuments. The zemindars, Captain Gastrell says, all disliked the survey very much, believing that it was the intention of Government to increase rent, as they were found in possession of more acres than they paid for. They were agreeably surprised to find that this was not the case, and the Captain somewhat naively writes that they would not understand why they were not charged more, when it was proved that they had more land than was named in their settlement papers. We have no doubt but the Umlah of the survey explained it very clearly to their comprehension, and a small amount of bullion changed hands at the same time.

MILITARY RETRENCHMENTS.—The Oudh Gazette states that it has been entertained to disband the following corps:—Nusseeree battalion, 13th Punjab infantry, 1st Gwalior infantry, Benares horse, and 2nd Mahratta horse. The fate of the following magazine depots has also been sealed:—Phillour, Chunar, Benares, Futtyghur, Fyzabad, Govindghur, Lahore, Umballa, and Cawnpore, where the harness depot only would remain. Seetapore is to be abolished as a military station along with Gonda. The amount of saving expected to be effected in military expenditure is estimated at three crores per annum. We trust this is correct, but the estimate of saving is extravagant.

THE VICEROY returned to Calcutta on the 17th February, arriving by express train. His Excellency intended, as it was Sunday, to have taken the mail train from Raneegunge, but anticipating his arrival there, the East India Railway Company had already made their arrangements for a special train. He left Raneegunge at 6.34 P.M., and arrived at Howrah at 9.45 P.M., making the run of 121½ miles in three hours and nine minutes only, including stoppages of twenty minutes, namely, a quarter of an hour at Burdwan, and five minutes at Pundooah. Such a splendid run reflects great credit on the railway officials who worked it, and his Excellency was still further fortunate in being landed by the railway steamer at the Armenian Ghaut in about six minutes from his arrival at Howrah, for we remember on the last occasion of his arrival per rail he was nearly an hour getting across.

DELHI, Feb. 19.—A number of volunteers from her Majesty's 24th regiment arrived a day or two ago. They are proceeding to join other regiments. A squadron of the 8th hussars were also here yesterday. Her Majesty's 89th regiment is expected to pass through here about the 23rd or 25th. Sir Robert Montgomery is looked for about the 22nd. His honour travels without his camp, and performs the journey in a camel carriage. Mr. Oswald Wood, assistant commissioner, has taken charge of the Civil Relief establishment, at the new Edgah, where between 8,000 and 10,000 famishing men, women, and children are to be fed daily. There is a meeting called for to-morrow, for the purpose of establishing a public dispensary at this station.

LAHORE, Feb. 19.—I forgot to tell you in my last that the Rajah of Kupoortullah had paid this station a flying visit, to have an interview, it is believed, with Sir Robert Montgomery before he leaves this station for Delhi, which he does to-day, accompanied by the Rev. C. Sloggett as secretary of the Famine Relief Fund. The Rajah has attended church twice since his arrival, and on each occasion brought his vakeel along with him, thus showing that he still cherishes that strong love for the Christian religion which he has always publicly evinced. His highness intends to go back to his own territories some time this week. A grand annual native festival, called "Chiraghoo-kha-Mela," was held at the Shalimar Gardens last Friday, at which a number of prizes were awarded to the natives who exhibited the best country-bred horses. This measure is conducive of great good, for it encourages the natives to improve the breed of their horses, which is indeed much needed, for of all provinces the Punjab presents the most shaggy ill-looking specimens of that class of animals. I will refrain, however, from giving you a detail of the prizes awarded, as I do not consider it would be of sufficient interest to your readers. Mr. Roberts, or Colonel Roberts, as I should call him, returned from Delhi last Saturday, and attended the parade of the volunteers this morning. I told you in a late communication that it was likely Mr. Roberts would succeed Mr. Wingfield as Commissioner of Oude, but I have it now on good authority that this gentleman purposes visiting England next April, which will of course preclude him from being nominated, and open out another chance for some aspiring ancient. Major Innes, the Controller of Accounts for the Punjab, is expected to arrive here about the 5th proximo, and great preparations are being made in the public work's office to usher in his reign with "sound of trumpet and beat of drum." Major Innes on his arrival is to report to Government the state of the central office, and "if all be true I hear," it cannot be anything but favourable.—Delhi Gazette.

COMPLIMENT TO SIR BARNES PEACOCK.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Saturday, Feb. 16, the clerk read the following copy of a despatch addressed to the Governor general by the Secretary of State:—"Indian office, London, 22nd December, 1860, No. 19. Legislative. My Lord, I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter dated the 10th October (No. 81), 1860, transmitting a copy of the Indian Penal Code, and in reply to express the great gratification of her Majesty's Government that this important measure has been passed into law. 2. Her Majesty's Government have observed from the proceedings of the Legislative Council, the important part taken by Sir Barnes Peacock in carrying the code through the Legislative Council, and they request that you will convey to him their sense of the high value of the service he has thus rendered to the Government of India. I await your further report on the subject of the code of Procedure for the courts established by Royal Charter.—I have, &c. (Signed), C. Wood."

THE PUNJAB POLICE.—The Gazette contains a resolution of the Punjab Government on the amalgamation of the civil and military police of that province. The experiment has been tried in the Lahore and Umritsur divisions, and is now to be extended to all the others, with the exception of Derajat. The arrangements are founded on the principles laid down in the Police Bill now in progress. The organization of the new force will be completed by the end of March. The following grades of officers are sanctioned:—1 inspector-general of police; 4 deputy inspectors-general; 1 district superintendent, and 1 assistant district superintendent for each district. Major G. Hutchinson, the military secretary, is appointed inspector general, but will officiate in his present post till relieved by Major Lawrence, C.B.; Captain J. W. Young-husband, of the 8th B. N. I., is deputy inspector-general of the Umballa circle; Captain G. MacAndrew, of the Lahore circle; Captain H. N. Miller, of the 1st Bombay fusiliers, of the Rawul Pindee circle; and Captain R. N. Tronson, of the 2nd Bombay fusiliers, of the Mooltan circle.

"CELTS."—At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society a letter was read from Mr. Le Messurier, chief engineer on the Jubbulpore line, on the subject of "Celts." The discovery of these curious relics of the past in various quarters of the world is a subject that has of late excited great interest among antiquarians. Celts are stone-headed hatchets, of which the stone part is about six inches in length and three in breadth, and are supposed to have been used by tribes of northern origin who must at one time have inhabited India. The natives worship them, as they cannot account for their appearance on the ground by other than supernatural means. They are consequently met with at the foot of trees. Mr. Le Messurier says his experience leads him to suppose that the celt-using races were partial to dwelling near the seashore in the vicinity of bluff cliffs and headlands. They lived partly on shell-fish, probably. Numbers of shells have been found close to the celts. These facts strengthen the belief that the Gangetic plain was submerged in those days. He thinks that many apparent mysteries would be solved by sending to England a collection of Indian tradesmen's tools. These have scarcely changed for fifteen hundred years, and some of them may be identical with what are supposed to be ancient relics.

THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS were inspected on Tuesday morning, Feb. 12, on parade, by their new Colonel, Sir Bartle Frere, the President in Council, and by General Sir Robert Napier, the new Military Member of Council. Both expressed their satisfaction with the progress made by the two companies. Sir Bartle Frere thanked the corps for the honour they had shown him in electing him Colonel, and, on behalf of Government, for their readiness in turning out. He said he should always be proud to wear the uniform of the Calcutta Volunteers, and hoped he should soon become better acquainted with them. Before leaving the ground the officers were introduced to their Colonel, while he, Sir Robert Napier, and Captain Malleson were saluted with three cheers. It is now time that Government conferred on Captain Malleson the honorary rank of Major.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. NELSON.—The Madras Times states that the Madras Chamber of Commerce intend presenting Mr. Nelson with a service of plate of the value of 100 guineas, in token of their high appreciation of his valuable services in the office which Mr. Bayard now fills.

PROFESSORSHIP OF MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.—It will be seen from the following Order of Government, dated the 11th February, that this professorship has been abolished:—"In connection with the curriculum prescribed for the Senior Department, Medical College, it is noticed that medical jurisprudence is taught only in this department, and only in the fifth year. It is also understood that the number of students in this department is not by any means large. Under these circumstances, and adverting to the principle now enforced upon all departments, to retrench every item of expenditure not absolutely necessary, his Honor in Council directs that the Professorship of Medical Jurisprudence be discontinued from the 1st March, 1861. The Governor in Council is satisfied that the knowledge which the pupils now acquire from the Professor of Medical Jurisprudence can be equally well, if not better, imparted by the different professors in their several departments. They will accordingly bear in mind that henceforward it will be imperative on them to teach those portions of medical jurisprudence specially belonging to their particular classes. The examination of students in this branch of study, however, will not take place until after the fifth year, so that in effect they will have five years to acquire that competent knowledge of the subject which is now compressed into one."

THE DIRECTOR GENERAL OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION proceeds shortly with his whole establishment to locate it permanently on the Hills. A pleasant arrangement for himself at any rate.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON was to leave for Calcutta in the Arracan on the 23rd of February. It is a significant fact that Colonel McGoun, who holds the purse strings of the army, accompanies his Excellency.

SIR PATRICK GRANT goes home by the next steamer. He has so fully stated to Sir William Denison his views and wishes in reference to amalgamation, that he thinks it unnecessary to remain in India until the particulars of the scheme are published, as he was requested to do. His successor, as we announced some time ago, will be Sir Hope Grant, if something do not occur to necessitate another arrangement; but we have not heard who is to take his place until Sir Hope arrives. The Senior Division General, we suppose, will reign in his stead in the interval.

THE MOTURPHA.—Government on the 9th February desired that the order abolishing, and without compensation, the Moturpha collected without legal right in certain zemindars in Ganjam, and Vizagapatam, "be now made general and everywhere strictly put in force." The order proceeds to say:—"The collection of Moturpha must also cease in those zemindars where it was left to the zemindars, either by including it in the assets where the Peshkash was fixed on asset, or by not specially reserving it where the Peshkash was not so based (as in the zemindaris of Calahastri and Kavetnagar), but in this case compensation must be given. This compensation will be based on the present collections, ascertained as carefully as possible, i.e. accounts (with original vouchers) to be furnished by the Zemindars for the last three years, and these to be verified by inquiry and by comparison with the actual collections during periods when the estates were under the management of Government. Illegal items of collection, if any, to be excluded from the calculation. In the application of these general rules to particular cases difficulty may sometimes be met with, but such exceptional cases should be brought forward when necessary for special orders. It is desirable that no time should be lost in finally settling the whole question."

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—A correspondent of the Madras Times in alluding to a recent case of hydrophobia published in that journal, observes that he has found from experience that strong nitric acid is the best remedy to be applied to the wounds inflicted by rabid dogs and venomous reptiles.

THE WAGHERS.

The last sporadic sparks of the petty rebellion in Kattyawar are said to have been stamped out once more; so the armed heels having done their work, let the head now inquire what reason there may have been for these out-houses of the State having again blazed up within six or eight months after we had, as we fondly thought, quenched for ever the long smouldering embers of a former conflagration, and raised a fire-proof edifice on the old site. Early in 1860 we were told that the Waghers had been thoroughly and finally subjugated; and we saw that their "nook of the world," Okhamundel, was under the direct administration of a British officer, bearing the title and office of Assistant to the Resident at Baroda. How, then, did it come to pass that the Waghers should have again crossed the Runa into the mainland of Kattyawar, and after having captured and pillaged the wealthy fortified town of Korinar, should once more have dispersed themselves, like so many globules of quicksilver, into a dozen different marauding parties, each with its own particular fastness for retreat in the wooded precipices of the Burda hills, or the still more inaccessible fortresses of the Geer? What reason had these brave vauriens for flying in the face of the Empire, the bitterness of whose wrathful power they had so lately tasted? And now that they are yet once again penitent and subdued, is there any assignable basis for the hope that they may henceforward be found more tractable subjects than they were a year ago? These are questions which, considering that the Gakwar, even if he be compelled to make good the expenses of the recent campaigns and present military occupation of Okha, is powerless to restore us the prestige tarnished, and the good lives lost before the walls of Beyt and Dwarka, appear to us deserving of very serious inquiry.

When the Waghers, originally rebels against the Gakwar, persisted in maintaining the same attitude of defiance against ourselves, and took to plundering vessels with the Union-Jack at their mast heads, the first thing to be done was of course to chastise their impertinence. Punishment, proverbially a lame-footed jade, was in this instance even more dilatory about her work than usual; but with Colonel Honner as her instrument she at last did the work. The rebels had been taught that we both could and would coerce them; they now had to learn that our rule was one of clemency and justice. They had discovered the fact that to endure us was their fate; they now had to comprehend that we deserved to be liked. Whether the Government themselves recognised the necessity of conciliating, as well as disarming the rabble of miserable banditti, who had been brought back captive into Okha, is doubtful. At any rate the officer they appointed to the charge of the district, though brave, accomplished, and perhaps having claims upon the office, was about the worst selection that could possibly have been made. Lieutenant Barton had been for some time employed in Kattyawar on business connected with the Gakwar's estates there, when the first Wagher insurrection of 1858 broke out. He was the political officer in charge of the gallant little force that was beaten back from the walls of Beyt with slaughter on April 2, and the memory of this disaster was still rankling in his breast when the second rebellion of 1859 brought him back at the head of an avenging army. From first to last the Waghers have been presented to him in the light of foes that demanded crushing, not of a clan that required civilising. On the other hand the Waghers in their ignorance saw installed in apparently boundless power over their destinies an officer, whom, as having formerly been among them in company with the Gakwar's deputies, they identified with the policy of that detested regime, and who now had laid waste their villages with fire and sword, and dishonoured their manhood by depriving them of their arms. So their new king was to them personally hateful; and his warmest advances towards a better understanding seemed snares to be mistrusted. Settled down in a peace that was only skin deep, they kept up a close communication with their half-dozen brethren still at large across the Runn. As the movements of the latter were carefully concealed by the tribes among whom they were connected by inter marriage, and winked at by the native chiefs, who, as long as their own territories were unmolested, had no idea of troubling themselves about another state's outlaws, the third and last desperate rising of men who fancied that they had already lost all which made life worth living for, was concerned and finally executed without the Political Agent in Kattyawar being aware of what was brewing, or the Assistant Resident in Okhamundel having sufficient authority to check it. The Waghers now more than ever have a claim upon us—let us beware how we reject it to be conciliated and civilised. And Lieut. Barton, for his part, deserves better than to be assigned one of the few tasks in public life for which circumstances have rendered him unfitted. The emergency calls for that particular talent, which, seen in its highest development in such men as Nicholson and John Jacob, has never been wanting anywhere in India when demanded—viz., a personal influence capable of so seizing and carrying along with it the sympathies and confidence of wild undeveloped natures, as to create decent citizens out of irritated barbarians. Debellare superbos does very well for a beginning; but it is only half the art of Empire, the other and more important half being—“Pacere subjectis, pacisque imponere morem.”—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

H.E. SIR W. MANSFIELD, Commander-in-Chief of Bombay, and suite, arrived at the Presidency on the 27th February, from Kurrachee, in H.M.'s steamer Victoria.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH FRAUDS.—The Bombay Gazette, in alluding to the recent frauds in the Telegraph department, observes that the Government have offered a reward of Rs. 1,000 to any person who will supply information that would lead to the conviction of the instigators of the late falsification of opium messages. The same journal learns from Sattara that the Banians recently apprehended there on a charge of attempting to bribe some of the subordinates of the Telegraph department have been sentenced each to six months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 200. . . . The Telegraph and Courier also states that the deputy superintendent of the Electric Telegraph of the Bombay presidency has succeeded in discovering a few of the tamperers with the telegraphic wires. . . . The Bombay Times, in alluding to the dishonesty prevailing in the electric telegraph department, states, that a mail or two ago a man formerly of the Indore Telegraph-office went home with 90,000 rupees acquired in the department. It likewise mentions as rumour that the falsification of the opium advices received in Bombay on December 30 last has inflicted a loss of ten lacs of rupees upon the parties who had acted thereon. . . . A meeting of the merchants of Bombay was held at the Chamber of Commerce on February 8, on the subject of the telegraph frauds. It was resolved that “owing partly to the inefficiency, but still more to the apparent corruption of the department, the use of the wires has become highly dangerous to commercial operations.” One merchant stated that of 1,200 messages sent to him last year, hardly one was correct, and yet Sir W. O'Shaghnessy's report declares there were only 400 mistakes that year. The Bombay Times says that the signallers who happen to be off duty can, in the next room, read messages off by ear from the click click of the instrument, and are well paid by Marwarrees to do so. The signallers on duty sometimes convey messages out to men who are waiting for them, wrapped up in “pan socporee.” As in the Public Works so in the Telegraph department, the subordinate agency is entirely corrupt. Men on Rs. 50 a month are exposed to frightful temptation, and, of course, yield. It will always be so till they are better paid. . . . The following evidence was taken at the trial of George Pecktail and Wm. Allen, who were charged before the magistrate of Bombay with severing the electric telegraph wire near Sattara and falsifying opium messages. A tent was pitched on the spot, and a battery prepared for the purpose. After the wire was pulled down by means of a string, and partly cut, the witness states, “I was then ordered to cut it through. At the time I was cutting the wire, the first prisoner was fixing a machine. The first prisoner saw what I was doing. I assisted the second prisoner in pulling down the wire. The second prisoner held the wire while I was cutting it. After the wire was cut, both prisoners fixed another wire to the broken ends of the wire. They took the new wire from the box. The other end of the wire was attached to the machine in the tent. It was like a machine I saw at Poona railway-station used by the telegraphic people. The second prisoner wrote something on a piece of paper, and the first was shaking the machine. There was a thing in the instrument which pointed to numbers. The prisoners were working at the machine, and writing all day and night. The next day they did the same business.”

THE INAM COMMISSION is now on the eve of dissolution. Captain T. A. Cowper, Revenue Commissioner for Alienations, who had so well and ably performed his duty as the head of the department, has been appointed Commissioner at Berar, and the work now remaining has been divided between the two revenue commissioners of the northern and southern divisions. A draft of an Act for summarily settling all claims relating to alienated state revenue, has been prepared, and will shortly be sent up to the Legislative Council for its being passed into law. The result of the alienation inquiry from first to last has been not only favourable to Government, but a great boon to Inamdars, Jaghirwars, and other holders of rent-free lands and cash allowances, inasmuch as the latter have been permanently settled, and the holders' minds have thus been relieved of all anxiety for the future. The state has secured by the commission, after deducting all expenses incurred thereon, an annual revenue of nine lacs of rupees (£90,000).

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Feb. 15.—The London Mail of 26th December arrived on the 12th. Important rumours have been received from Japan by the steamer Curthage, which left Shanghai on the 13th—first, that Mr. Heusken, the Secretary of the United States Legation has been murdered at Yedo. Second, that all the foreign ministers at Yedo (except one) had fled to Yokohama, the British and French ministers having previously hauled down the flags of their respective countries. Third, that the United States Minister, Mr. Harris, with a sturdy determination, as it appears, to perform his duty, declined to escape with the others, and remained at his post, contenting himself with barricading the houses belonging to the Embassy. The only men-of-war at Yedo were the two Prussian ships Thetis and Arcona. The temple used by the Prussian Embassy had been fortified. No foreigner dared leave his house. It is also stated that the Prussian treaty had been signed at Yedo. These details are very meagre, but the conduct of the United States Minister in remaining by his flag seems to contrast honourably with that of those representatives who had hauled down theirs.

From Tientsin we have news by courier, via Cheefoo, up to the 21st of January. At that time the Allied armies of occupation continued completely shut in, and cut off from communication with the sea. Owing to the quantity of ice extending between the Taku Forts and the anchorage in the Gulf of Pechili for several miles, it has been found impossible to land the mails which have arrived from England since that of the 10th of October, and they are now lying down at Maitau, the winter anchorage, about thirty miles from Cheefoo, where it is expected they will be landed and sent overland to Tien-tsin, a distance of about 350 miles. Unless such communication is established by the local military authorities, there is no prospect of the troops receiving their mails until the ice breaks up in March.

We regret to announce the death of the commander of the French troops at Tien-tsin, the gallant General Collineau, well known as having led the regiment of Zouaves that was the first to storm the Malakoff. This melancholy event occurred on the 15th of January. It appears that the general had made a very favourable recovery from an attack of small-pox, which had been and still is prevalent at Tien-tsin, and that on the 12th January he issued his brigade order with his usual clearness, and in apparent health. The same afternoon symptoms threatening palsy of the limbs suddenly set in, and became more confirmed the following day. On the 14th, complete paralysis of the lower half of the body had taken place. The next day, as there was no improvement from the treatment pursued, and the symptoms were rapidly increasing in severity, Dr. Gordon, C.B., principal medical officer, and Dr. Rennie, staff surgeon of the English army, were called in consultation, and they concurred with Doctors Gerrier and La Riviere, the Medecin-en-Chef of French troops, in viewing the case as one beyond the scope of human art. The same evening the General breathed his last, universally regretted by both armies. The sudden attack, as well as rapidity and malignity of the disease, is attributed, we hear, to the extreme cold on the 12th, the thermometer having fallen that day to four degrees; and the dangerous effects of which were further illustrated the same afternoon by the sudden deaths of two English soldiers from congestion, who were the previous day to all appearance quite well.

We have another melancholy occurrence to notice as having taken place at Tien-tsin on the 11th of January. A subscription had been got up by the Rev. Mr. McGhee, chaplain to the forces, amongst the English troops, to relieve indigent Chinese, and about 800 dollars was collected from the officers and men. Our informant states, that it was then very injudiciously determined to make a wholesale distribution of it. That no real good would result from such a distribution of the moneys, was strongly urged on the originator of the scheme, and several undoubtedly better modes of employing it pointed out, especially by the Rev. Mr. Mahé, Roman Catholic chaplain to the forces. It was however determined otherwise, and announced by advertisement, that on January 11, at the yamun of the Literary Chancellor, (at present used as the English church) a distribution of money would be made to those in want. The day was bitter cold, with a steady fall of snow; notwithstanding which long before the appointed hour a crowd of over 500 people assembled in the open space and narrow streets between the Yamun and the City Wall. As the distribution commenced, the excitement became such as to defy all attempts at order, and ended by nine women and an infant being trodden to death, and a large number severely injured. Against this catastrophe, all the good that was done consisted of some two thousand people receiving from a quarter to half a-dollar each, according to their apparent necessities.

General Collineau was buried with military honours on the 18th, and a funeral oration pronounced over his grave by Colonel O'Malley, of the 102nd regiment, who now succeeds to the command. All the officers of the English army attended the funeral, as also did her Majesty's Minister, the Hon. F. Bruce, C.B., and the members of the Legation.

Mr. Bruce will not start for Peking before the beginning of March. Mr. Wade is now at Peking making arrangements for his reception. The troops are not over-healthy, nearly 300 being in hospital; the sickness is believed to be in a great measure owing to the careless way in which the men are housed.

From Shanghai, there is not much news during the past fortnight. The general interest appears to be centred in the expedition for opening the river Yang-tze to trade. The vessels composing the exploring fleet include the Snake, Coromandel, Couper, and Atalanta. The Centaur and Roebuck will probably be taken up near Nankin, where they have lain for some time back. At Chin-kiang and Kin-kiang, gunboats will be stationed. The Admiral is said to have expressed an opinion that a point about eleven hundred miles above Hankow may be reached by vessels of a light draught.

The expedition will return about the end of March. By invitation of the admiral, several Shanghai merchants accompany him on behalf of the public. The French admiral with six men-of-war had sailed for Saigon. There have been rumours that the rebels mean to pay Shanghai another visit. News of rebel successes in distant provinces continue to circulate, but full information is wanting. There has been a good deal done lately in the way of squeezing the native merchants, on the part of the Mandarins at Shanghai, and more has been threatened. The excuse is the very low state of the Imperial treasury. Two wealthy natives of Shanghai have, under pressure, pledged themselves for something like ten thousand pound sterling each. No hope is entertained for the safety of the three foreigners who disappeared some weeks ago, as notified in the newspapers. There are strong suspicions that they have been murdered by their own boat's crew.

Mr. Harry Parkes left Hong Kong two days ago, to join the expedition up the Yang-tze, which was in full readiness to start, and only awaited his arrival.

Our correspondent at Swatow states that on the 15th ult. the master of the Kent was on his way from Swatow to Double Island in the ship's boat with four men, when a gust caught the sail, and before sheets could be let go the boat, with about twenty fathoms of chain which served for ballast, sunk from under them. After nearly an hour's interval, the master and two of the men were picked up by a Chinese passage-boat; of the other two (H. Milligan and W. Bugg) nothing has since been heard. On the 6th inst., the master of the Earl of Chester, when going on shore at Swatow, was knocked down with a large stone, thrown into the water, and otherwise ill-treated. He was rescued by some respectable Chinese. He is a quiet man, of about fifty years of age, and gave his aggressors no annoyance whatever. Though known, they have not yet been apprehended.

The chief local event of the fortnight has perhaps been the meeting that was held in the Club House for the purpose of establishing a "sailors' home" in the colony. The sum already contributed is forty-two thousand dollars, and the chief difficulty, that of obtaining a site, is likely to be overcome, two sites having been found eligible, one of which at least is obtainable. We are glad to hear that his Excellency the Governor, having conversed with Sir Hope Grant on the matter, has been assured that there is nothing in the way of obtaining the site at the back of the Murray Barracks. We learn also that the committee intend calling a meeting of all the medical gentlemen in the colony to ask their advice in regard to the fitness of this site.

We learn that an officer belonging to the 99th regiment was attacked by robbers on Tuesday night last, while on his way to Stanley, and stripped of all he had, even to a portion of his clothing. He was, it is said, so seriously ill-treated as to be unable to move, and when brought home grave apprehensions were, and for aught we can learn still are, entertained for his recovery.

On Saturday, the 2nd February, Lieut.-General Sir Hope Grant reviewed the troops over on Kowloon. The day was rather wet, but the appearance made by the various regiments was most satisfactory.—About a week ago the British ship Fearnought, Captain Smith, bound for Singapore, left Hong Kong, and the same night struck upon a sunken rock outside the harbour, near Lantung. All attempts to free her have failed, and she is fast becoming a wreck.

Whilst business stagnates our diplomatists are by no means idle in their preparations for giving effect to the commercial portion of the treaty of Tien-tsin. In Hong Kong we hear little and see less; at Shanghai, however, from whence the Superintendent strings are pulled, the greatest activity prevails. The expedition would leave for the Yang-tze in a few days, and Consular representatives, with their accompanying interpreters, were about to start for the scene of their future labours. There is no doubt that the stations about to be occupied up the Yang-tze will have a very marked effect on the trade of the country, as reference to a map of the empire will show. The town of Kicon-Kiang-Foo, from its position at the foot of the Pho-yang Lake, must become the entrepot of trade in the Kiang-si province, which is traversed by the Kan-Kiang from north to south to within a very few miles of the Canton province, and it is this town rather than Hankow which will become formidable to the Cantonese. The new ports to the north of the Yang-tze must remain unoccupied until the re-opening of the navigation, although active preparations are being made to take possession of the consular ports. Hainan and Taiwan have not been overlooked, and altogether we have reason for congratulation at the activity displayed by Admiral Hope and Mr. Bruce in carrying out the most important treaty, as regards commerce, ever concluded by the representatives of our country.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, March 1.—Within the last week the hot dry weather has been succeeded by copious rains, which have completely changed the aspect of nature, however much they may have temporarily interfered with curing operations at Colombo, and forced out rather premature blossoms on the coffee estates. During the fortnight two ships to London have taken away 11,122 cwt. of plantation coffee and 1,592 native; together, 12,714. One vessel has sailed for Havre with 8,411 cwt., all native. We have thus added to our exports 21,155 cwt. of coffee, in the proportions of 11,122 plantation and 10,033 native. The deficiency in our coffee crop is, now that a lull has taken place in curing and shipping operations, becoming apparent. Plantation, which hitherto kept ahead, is now 10,000 cwt. under last season's figure for the same period; while the deficiency in native is 20,000 cwt., 30,000 cwt. in all. As the season advances the figure will advance in magnitude, we suspect.

The great local events of the fortnight have been the anniversary meeting and dinner of the Planters' Association. At the meeting, in consequence of Captain Galwey's intended departure for England, the choice of a new chairman became necessary, and the well-deserved honor was conferred on Mr. A. Brown, who as secretary laboured so long, so earnestly and so usefully to preserve the unity and influence of the institution. Captain Bird was, with equal unanimity, chosen to succeed Mr. Brown as Secretary. At the dinner Sir Edward Creasy was present and made an excellent speech. The other speakers were also generally happy, and the re-union seems to have been distinguished by geniality of feeling. The association, we are glad to observe, continues to flourish. A deputation of its members is to meet the governor at Kandy on the 9th, when, we trust, some definite course in regard to the immigration question will be resolved on.

Next, perhaps, in interest to the Planters' Association Anniversaries is a great cricket match, which took place last week between the military and the civilians of Colombo. The players exerted themselves to the utmost under the inspiring influence of ladies' eyes and music from the bands of the 50th and the Ceylon Rifles. The playing was good, and the military, though defeated, retired with all the honours of war. The head-quarters of the 50th having moved to Kandy, a return match is at present impossible.

This is the dull season in Colombo, a large portion of our community having sought the bracing influences of Newera Ellia. Recently heavy rains have succeeded the hard frost which gave the sanatorium so English an aspect.

We are glad to hear that some seed of Cinchona plants, sent from Kew to Peradenia, have germinated at the latter place. Some plants or cuttings, too, reached Galle by the last steamer in charge of Dr. Anderson; so that we will hope for the success of the attempt to naturalise the great South American febrifuge in Ceylon and India.

Mr. Edremansinghem, the Tamil member of Council, has resigned his seat, and the universal feeling is that Mr. Comerasamy will succeed him. Pakier Tamby, the well known Moorman jeweller, has sunk under age and debility.

There have been some cases of cholera in the dirtier portions of Colombo, but the health of the country is on the whole good.

As we are writing, the Herefordshire troop ship, from England, with a detachment of the 50th, is coming in.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the mail steamer we have papers from Java to the 16th February. The news from Banjermassing is considered favourable, as there have been no new disasters and the great bulk of the mutineers appear to have laid aside their arms. The leaders are still at large; one of them, Hidayat, is said to be disposed to make submission, but the other, Antasari, is busy collecting a new force, and seems determined to fight to the last. Telegraphic news had been received at Batavia that the two steamers Reynier Claessen and Gedeh had succeeded in completely routing the pirates at the island of Sailus or Sayusu. On the arrival of the steamers the parties were found to be busy in constructing sampans and rafts. These were nearly finished, but none of the pirates had yet left the island. The pirates offered a very determined resistance, but none of them escaped. There were taken alive four chiefs, forty-four pirates, forty-six women, thirty-five children, and nine slaves. The Claessen and Gedeh had seven killed and thirteen wounded. The Sultan of Bima sent his prime minister with two hundred armed men and one hundred coolies as auxiliaries. Of these five were killed and eleven wounded. The Earl of Elgin arrived at Batavia on the 7th, on his way from China to Suez. He landed under the usual honours and took up his residence at the Government House at Ryswyk. He afterwards visited the Governor-general at Buitenzorg, made a tour in the Preanger regencies, and left Batavia on the 16th en route for Point de Galle.—Singapore Free Press.

LABUAN.—Accounts from Labuan represent the operations of the new coal company as proceeding in a satisfactory manner. On the arrival of the engineers at Labuan, the works of the Eastern Archipelago Company were found in a very dilapidated condition, the mine being full of water and the machinery rusty and out of order. The mine has now been cleared and coals got out, and the machinery repaired. The wharf and the railroad to it from the mine, which were in ruins, are being restored, and in a very short time it is expected that the whole will be in complete working order. There has been very little sickness amongst the Europeans, only two cases of fever having occurred. The Chinese, who are employed in all the heavy labour, were giving satisfaction.

A new shaft will be sunk after the restoration of the present mine is completed.

SARAWAK.—Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., with Captain Brooke and other gentlemen belonging to the Sarawak Government, left Singapore for Sarawak on the 15th of February. Their presence is very necessary, as, owing to the residence of Sheriff Masahore at Muka, the trade between that place and Sarawak is still suspended. The Sarawak nakodas are afraid to venture to a port where the chief power is in the hands of a person who has avowed the most hostile feelings against them and the Government of which they are subjects. It will be recollected that on the occasion of the last visit of the steamer Victoria to Muka, the chief of that place, although professing his desire that the trade with Sarawak should go on as before, acknowledged that there was a person in Muka whose actions he could not control, and the Sarawak nakodas would seem to believe that the chief spoke the truth. It will be Sir James Brooke's first object to endeavour to prevail on the Sultan of Bruné to vindicate his authority by expelling Sheriff Masahore from Muka and putting the trade of that place on a more secure footing than has lately prevailed. That the Government of the Sultan will make an effort to accomplish these objects is probable, as the explicit manner in which the British Government has disavowed Mr. Edwards' proceedings in regard to the Muka business will probably convince the Sultan and his ministers that it is a mistaken policy on their part to seek the injury of Sarawak. But should it be found that the Bruné Government either cannot or will not take the necessary measures for putting things right at Muka, it will be requisite for the Sarawak Government to redress its own wrongs, and this it will be able to do with effect, as there is no longer any danger of a British functionary stepping in and by threats and empty promises securing immunity to assassins and conspirators. We may here notice that Haji Abdul Gaffour, the Ex-Datu Patingi of Sarawak, who, last year in concert with Sheriff Masahore and others, endeavoured to get up an insurrection at Sarawak, and who was taken into custody by the Dutch authorities at Pontianak, lately returned to this from Batavia. During his prolonged detention he was kept in close custody, in irons, and it is probable that his patriotic ardour has now been considerably cooled, and that he will be content to remain quietly with his wife and family at Malacca, where he has now proceeded.—Singapore Free Press.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Jan. 19.—The following intelligence from Bokhara was this day received through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, from Toorkistan. The Persian ambassador had arrived at Bokhara, and has put up with the Russian vakeel, residing at that place. The ambassador, accompanied by the Russian vakeel, attended the durbar of the King of Bokhara, who received him very honourably, and asked him the object of his embassy. The ambassador stated that as a number of Persian soldiers had fallen into the hands of Toorkomans in the late Jumshadee battle in Murve Shahjehan, and were sold as slaves in Bokhara and other places, it would be highly gratifying if the King would have them traced out, and have them liberated; on this the King replied that he had no objection to have search made for those who were in Bokhara, but he could not procure those who were sold at Oorgunge and other places; accordingly the King of Bokhara passed an order to set free all the Persians who had lately been purchased. Since then daily some fifteen or twenty Persians have been brought and made over to the ambassador. It is given out that the King of Bokhara would never have complied with the ambassador's request had it not been for the Russian vakeel.—Jan. 20.—In to-day's durbar, Sirdars Sooltan Mohamed Khan, Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, and Mohamed Oosman Khan, introduced some Wuzerees chiefs to the Ameer, and spoke in their favour. The Ameer having enquired from them their object, replied as follows:—"The British are my friends and allies, and so it is quite out of the question that I should ever send any troops with the Wuzerees to fight with the English. Had it been for any other Power I would have never refused the Wuzerees any aid in either troops or money. The best thing for the Wuzerees (continued the Ameer) was to go and make it up with the British authorities." Khilluts were then granted to the Wuzerees chiefs, and they were dismissed with the promise that the Ameer would also write to the British in their behalf.—Jan. 21.—Ubdoolrazak Khan Moostafuee was ordered by the Ameer to write a letter to Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, to Kandahar, directing him to send the whole amount of the revenue of Kandahar, together with as much gold as had been collected there. He was further desired to tell the Sirdar not to make any excuse, such as the fall of snow, &c., in sending the treasure, as he could easily hire a number of people and throw small bridges over the passes which had been closed by the snow.—Jan. 22.—A letter was this day sent to the son of Uzeez Khan, Ghilzai, informing him that Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan, with his troops, had been sent to Durrah Noor, and requesting him to join the Sirdar, with all his Ghilzai people. Sirdar Wullee Mohamed Khan's urzee was received from Cabool. He informed the Ameer that for three days and nights the snow had fallen in such a quantity in Cabool that many houses had been destroyed, and that the roads from Cabool to Ghuznee had been impassable. Having received no supply from Ghuznee, he (Wully Mohamed Khan) had been obliged to force the agent of Sirdar Sooltan Mohamed Khan, who had about 5,000 mannds of corn, to sell all that he had in the bazaar. The wheat was selling in Cabool at three seers one charuk less, or eight Hindostanee seers per rupee.—Jan. 23.—It is ascertained from the paishkhidmut of the Ameer that a kossid with a letter from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, from Toorkistan, arrived this morning. No sooner did the Ameer receive the letter than he held a khilwut (a private council), and called there Sirdars Sooltan Mohamed Shere Allee Khan and Mohamed Oosman Khan. The letter was then perused before them. Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan had written to the Ameer that he had received a letter from the Hakim of Mamana, in which he wrote as follows:—"The Persian troops are now in Mamana, and are ready to march onwards, but as we are all Mahomedans, it would have been better if we could have become friends with one another, and thus saved bloodshed; so if you agree to this, you (Mohamed Ufzul Khan) had better evacuate all the places you have taken in the Mamana country and march back with your troops to Shakurghan, otherwise he (the Hakim of Mamana) would be obliged to take other measures." Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan wrote in reply, "that he could not decide about the matter till Nauroze (the new year), by which time he was to get the answer from the Ameer." Mohamed Ufzul Khan has also stated in his urzee to the Ameer, that if he (the Ameer) wishes to keep the conquered places in Mamana, he had better send some more troops to Toorkistan, if not, to order him to give up those places. The Ameer having consulted with the Sirdars, ordered a letter to be written to Mohamed Ufzul Khan, in which he told him not to be in such a hurry about so serious a matter, and to wait until his (the Ameer's) return from Jellalabad to Cabool, when he would send all his available troops to Toorkistan, with a decided order about Mamana. At present a number of troops had been sent to Bajore and Durrah Noor, and, besides this, the roads from Cabool to Toorkistan were almost closed by the snow, and so it was impossible to send any troops just now. The kossid said it had taken him seventeen days to travel from Toorkistan to Jellalabad.—Jan. 25.—The late rebellion in the Lughman district by the Neemcha Kaffree people, is ascribed to the following causes:—Differences having arisen between Utta Mohamed Khan, the former Hakim of Bakheel in Lughman, and Russool Khan, his nephew, the latter had given his daughter in marriage to the Ameer, and had thus got the hukoomut of Bakheel. The Ameer had not only dismissed Utta Mohamed, but also had taken his son in hostage, as advised by Russool Khan. The Neemcha Kaffree people, having been ill-treated by the new ruler, Russool Khan, joined with Utta Mohamed Khan, and at once rebelled. When the Ameer heard of this disturbance he wrote to Utta Mohamed not to join with the rebels, and to try his best to keep them quiet, otherwise he, the Ameer, would see Utta Mohamed's son, who was a hostage, put to death. "He did not care at all if his son was put to the sword, but he would side with and assist the Neemcha Kaffree people," was Utta Mohamed's reply. It is ascertained, that if the whole tribe of Neemcha Kaffree will come together, then it will be a great difficulty for the Ameer to suppress the rebellion, as they are said to be about 30,000 in number.—Jan. 26.—The durbar was held as usual. All the khans and chiefs attended the durbar to pay their respects to the Ameer. The Ambassador of the Bokhara Court having expressed his great desire to see the Ameer's horses, the Ameer broke the durbar, and taking Ghoolam Mohamed Khan and the Ambassador with him, first went to the new stable and showed him his good horses. Thence the Ameer rode to his camp, and there he inspected all his Artillery, Infantry, and the Cavalry, before the Ambassador, who was very well pleased with the different manoeuvres the troops went through.—Jan. 27.—The two battalions of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, which had been sent to punish the Sungoo Khylee people, who had shown their disaffection in paying the revenue, returned this day to Jellalabad, with the revenue realised from that place, and with three chiefs. The Ameer granted khilluts to the chiefs, and assured them not to be afraid of anything, as they would be treated kindly. This has put off the intention of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan going to Sungoo Khylee and the Khyber, for the present.—Jan. 28.—An urzee was to-day received from Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan, son of Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, from Lughman, in which he informed the Ameer that on his arrival at Lughman he was told that Utta Mohamed and the other Neemcha Kaffree people of Bakheel had deserted the village, and had taken away all their property to Kohibund, after setting all the grass and other things which they could not remove, on fire. He, Mohamed Allee, left his camp at Lughman, and with a body of Sowars proceeded towards the village. There he was surprised to see the fort surrounded with water, and for about one mile the road was found quite impassable for the troops; measures were taken to let the water of the bund out, and a hundred Sowars were left there to watch the bund; as soon as the ground had become a little dry, the attack was to be made on the fort.—Jan. 29.—Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan's urzee was to-day received from Kandahar containing the following news from Heerat. When the King of Persia heard the welcome news of the conquest of Mamana he was so highly pleased that he ordered a grand khillut with a fine sword and a pair of valuable armlets to be sent to Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, at Heerat. The King was further pleased to confer upon Sooltan Ahmed Jan the hukumut (rulership) of all the places from Mushed to Heerat and Mamana, placing the whole army now in Heerat, and those on their way, under the Sirdar's command. The Ameer having looked over the urzee, turned towards Ghoolam Mohamed Khan Mookhtear, and said that Sooltan Ahmed Jan was the bravest and the most lucky man he ever met with in the world.—Jan. 30.—Ubdoolrazak Khan Moostoufee was sent for in the durbar, and desired by the Ameer to go to Sirdar Shere Allee and to ask for Seeyaha (a statement) of the revenue of Jungoo Khyle. The Ameer then looked up at the Moostoufee, and addressed him as follows:—"Nazir Naeem Khan is an old servant of the late Sirdar Ghoolam Heider Khan, and has always served with honesty and integrity; how is it, that Shere Allee Khan has confiscated all his Jageer, although repeatedly recommended not to do so? Very good, something else shall be done for the Nazir," continued the Ameer, as he would not wish to see the poor fellow to go about. Shah Murd Khan, the ruler of Jellalabad, Napier, K.C.B., Bengal engrs., to be an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Gov. gen. of India, in the room of Lieut. gen. Sir J. Outram, Bart., G.C.B., resigned, the said Maj. gen. Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., has accordingly this day taken the oath and his seat as an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Gov. gen. of India, under the usual salute from the ramparts of Fort William.

was directed to make out the accounts of the pay of the whole troops now in Jellalabad and to pay them from the treasure just received from Sungoo Khyle, and of the revenue of Jellalabad.—Jan. 31.—The following accounts from Lughman were this day received through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan. On Tuesday night about twelve, some Neemcha Ka-free people under Utta Mohamed had made an attack on the Sowars, who were placed on the Bund. No sooner had Mohamed Allee heard the firing, than he with some troops had made haste to the place. The Kafrees were well paid off; about twenty-five of them were taken prisoners, amongst whom was Utta Mohamed's brother-in-law, Ameer Jan. It was also stated in the urzee of Mohamed Allee that, before he could reach the bund, ten of his sowars had been killed and six wounded. The number of the killed and wounded on the enemy's side is said to be about thirty. On the perusal of the urzee, the Ameer desired Shere Allee Khan to order the Ghoolam Khana Kazalbash Sowars to march to Lughman to join the camp of Mohamed Allee Khan. Accordingly the Kazalbash sowars were warned to get themselves ready to leave for Bakheel. The following are the rates of the grain and other articles now sold in the capitals of Afghanistan:—In Kandahar: wheat flour, three maunds Shahee, equal to twelve Hindoostance seers; barley, seven maunds, or twenty-seven seers; ghee, half-maund—that is, two seers per rupee. In Cabool: wheat flour, three seers, one charuk less by Cabool weight, or about seventeen seers; barley, three and a-half seers, or twenty-one seers; ghee, two and a-half seers per rupee. In Jellalabad: wheat flour, seventeen seers; barley, twenty-one seers; ghee, one seer and ten chataunks.

Feb. 1.—The following news from Bookhara was received by the Ameer through an urzee from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzal Khan from Toorkistan. When the young King of Bookhara with his troops arrived at Summur Kund, with the view of punishing the Ooratpa people, who had murdered their Hakim and rebelled against the King, the Chiefs of Ooratpa, knowing well that their city would be pillaged and destroyed if they hesitated in obeying the King, held a council and deputed one of their Khans to the King. The Ooratpa Khan, who was honourably received by the King at Summur Kund, stated on the part of the citizens that the late Hakim of Ooratpa had not been murdered by them, but by the rebels of the adjacent places, and that they were ready to do as ordered by the King. On this the King granted a khillut to the Khan, and told him if such was the case he (the Khan) was to bring some Ooratpa Chiefs as hostages, and then he would order his troops to march back to Bookhara. The Khan had left Summur Kund to convey the King's order to the Ooratpans, and the King with his troops was still at Summur Kund. On the perusal of the urzee the Ameer said that the Ooratpa people were not so brave and warlike as to stand the swords of the Bookhara soldiery; it would be better if they would send hostages to the King and accept the terms.—Feb. 2.—Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan's letter, containing the account of the victory of Bakheel, was this day received from Lughman. He informed the Ameer that when the ground had become a little dry, he with his troops marched on Bakheel, and having received information to the effect that the Kafree people had been assembled there in great numbers, he ordered an attack to be made on the fort; a fight took place between the Kafrees and his troops, in which the former, being unable to stand, took to their heels. They were pursued by the cavalry as far as Kohibund, but when they disappeared in the passes he ordered his cavalry to retreat. About twelve sowars and twenty-three sepoy were killed and wounded on this side, and about fifty are said to have fallen on the enemy's side. Mohamed Allee also stated that, while he was leading his troops in person, he had been slightly wounded in the hand by a bullet fired from the enemy's matchlocks. The fort of Bakheel, as well as three or four other mud forts, had been destroyed and set on fire.—Delhi Gazette.

SUPREME COURT OF BOMBAY PENSIONS.

Read copy of a despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 1 of 1861, dated Jan. 8, to address of the Govt. of Bombay.

The Hon. the President in Council is pleased to direct that paras. 3 and 4 of the above-mentioned despatch, being a reply to the inquiry of the Govt. of Bombay, with reference to the applications from Messrs. Compton and Ketterer, officers attached to the Supreme Court at that presidency, as to whether the fees received by them, and which constitute the principal emoluments of their offices, should be regarded as salary in calculating their pensions, be published in the Calcutta Gazette for general information :—

Judicial Letter, dated Aug. 6, 1860, No. 32.

Para. 3.—The intention of the rule was to extend to those salaried officers of the supreme courts the same benefits of pension as are received by similar officers in the uncovenanted service; but it was not intended to include these highly-remunerated officers of these courts, whose emoluments are derived chiefly from fees. As cases will occur, however, in which the emoluments of officers are derived partly from fees and partly from salary, upon which a question may arise as to the due application of the rule, I desire that a pension may in no case be granted when the amount of fees exceeds the salary.

4. The cases of Messrs. Compton and Ketterer must be decided upon this principle.

Art. 3.—Non-commissioned officers of H.M.'s Indian army who may be recommended by their commanding officers for admission into the Bengal Military Normal School, will, if found eligible, be received into that institution for the purpose of being trained as schoolmasters for the army, under the following conditions:—

1. No non-commissioned officer beyond twenty-five years of age, or of more than seven years' military service, will be accepted as a candidate for admission.

2. During their residence in the school, they will continue to be borne on the strength of their corps, and will be allowed to retain their pay, subject to the following deductions for their maintenance in the school:—

Sergeants .....4 rupees per mensem.

Corporals .....2-8 " "

3. They will retain and wear their regimental clothing and necessaries, and will keep up their kit complete out of their pay; they will also take with them to the normal school their greatcoat, coat, shako, arms, and accoutrements.

4. If at any time after admission into the normal school they are found not to be qualified for the duties of schoolmaster, they will be sent back to do duty with their regiments.

5. Should the candidate ultimately attain the rank of schoolmaster, the time spent at the normal school will not count as either military or schoolmaster service; but, as heretofore, it will continue to be reckoned as military service should he fail and be returned to his regiment.

Art. 4.—When they have completed their education, and are certified fit for appointment as schoolmasters, they will be transferred to the unattached list, in view to their being appointed to such garrison or regimental school of the Indian army as H.E. the C. in C. may direct.

Art. 5.—They will be required on their appointment as schoolmaster to sign a declaration relinquishing half their military service previous to their being admitted into the training institution; understanding also that the remaining half will only reckon towards pension, and not towards any increase of pay which may be allowed for service as army schoolmaster.

Art. 6.—In recommending non-commissioned officers for admission to the normal school, H.E. the C. in C. expects commanding officers will bear in mind the great importance of the moral influence and example of the schoolmaster, and forward the names of those only who in this respect are unexceptionable.

Art. 7.—The number of students at the normal school will be fixed from time to time, according to circumstances.

Commissariat Expenditure.

EXTRACT FROM THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE HON. THE PRESIDENT IN COUNCIL, UNDER DATE OF JAN. 28, 1861:—

Read Military Letter from the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 389, dated Oct. 24, 1860, paras. 7 and 8, regarding the expenditure of the Commissariat Department for 1858-59.

Read Report of the Military Finance Commission, No. 3,309, dated Dec. 28, 1860.

Resolution 1. The Bengal commissariat expenditure of 1858-59 amounted to little short of four millions sterling, and a hope was expressed by the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State, in reviewing the report, that the result of the investigations of the Military Finance Commission would enable the Government of India to bring this expenditure, which he justly characterises as "enormous," within reasonable limits.

2. It appears from the report of the Military Finance Commission, now before Government, that the total commissariat expenditure of 1858-59 was for all India upwards of £6,730,000. This has been closely approached by the expenditure of 1859-60, which was £6,470,000, and the expenditure of the current year will also appear excessively high, not owing entirely to the actual charges of the year, but partly to the settlement of arrear charges of former years.

3. The Military Finance Commission bear testimony to the exertions of the commissaries general, and of many of their subordinates, to reduce these enormous charges, and they bring to notice that the power to do so rests only in part with the officers of the commissariat department.

4. This is greatly owing to the system whereby a variety of miscellaneous charges have been imposed on the commissariat department, over which the commissary general and the executive officers of the department could exercise little or no direct control; the commissariat department in such cases being simply bound to comply with the requisitions of other departments whereby the commissariat disbursement have been greatly enlarged, and the enormous expenditure classed under the head "commissariat" has been viewed as if incurred to the full extent for its own departmental purposes, and under its own departmental direction and control.

5. It is resolved, therefore, to relieve the commissariat department from bearing the entire responsibility of this large miscellaneous expenditure, and to place on those who originate the demands the responsibility for the extent of their requisitions, thereby confining the responsibility of the commissariat department to disbursements proper to those specific services for which the commissary general directly incurs expenditure on account of his own department, and to the rates at which the demands of other departments are met. The expenditure incurred on account of supplies to other departments, as well as the payments made by the commissariat for supplies directly procured by other departments, will hereafter be exhibited separately in the accounts.

6. With a view to check the supplies of barrack furniture and barrack conveniences to be provided by the commissariat department, their Excellencies the Commanders-in-Chief in India and of the armies of Madras and Bombay will be requested to cause an estimate of barrack requirements for the troops to be at once prepared by the quartermaster-general of the army for the remaining portion of this year, and for the year next ensuing, the same being transmitted to the respective commissaries general for incorporation in their estimates. Further, to control expenditure, an estimate of barrack expenditure will in future be prepared by the executive commissariat officer, and laid monthly before the commanding officer of the station, with such remarks thereon as the commissariat officer may think necessary to offer. This estimate is to be thoroughly examined and reviewed by the commanding officer before being ordered to be complied with, and at the end of each month the actual expense incurred on account of these supplies is to be submitted to the same officer for his examination and approval, which he will record on the documents themselves, making a written report in cases of disapproval.

7. The documents thus authenticated are to be forwarded as vouchers with the accounts of the supplying officer, and it is to be understood that the responsibility for the supplies, as well as for the attended expenditure, will rest with the commanding officer until finally recognised and passed by the audit department, the responsibility for the rates at which the supplies have been made resting on the commissariat officer.

8. A similar course is to be pursued in regard to hospital supplies.

9. Each medical officer is to submit a monthly estimate of his probable demands as respects quantities, the rates at which the articles are procurable being affixed thereto by the local commissariat officer, the respective responsibilities of these officers being as above indicated in the cases of barrack supplies.

10. At the end of each month a statement of the actual expenditure incurred on the estimate is to be submitted to the medical officers, who, after comparing it with the estimate, will signify his approval or otherwise.

11. These documents will then be submitted to the deputy inspector general, who, after careful scrutiny as to the property of the quantities and the charges, will record his opinion, thus enabling the auditor of commissariat accounts to verify the charges and fix responsibility wherever necessary.

12. In the same manner all expenditure incurred by any department on the requisition of any office will be submitted by the head of the department for the approval of that officer, who will signify such approval by attaching a certificate to that effect under his own signature, and the responsibility for the expenditure, with the exception of the rates as above stated, will rest with him until the charge is finally admitted by the audit department.

13. Thus the responsibility for charges for supplies incurred by the commissary general for other departments will be equitably distributed between the commissariat department and the officers who make the demand.

14. The commissary general and the examiner of commissariat accounts will, in communication with the military finance department, issue to the authorities under their control such subsidiary orders as may be necessary to give effect to the arrangements for insuring the strict economy herein enjoined.

15. H.E. the C. in C. in India will be requested to impress on all officers under his control the necessity for exercising the most careful supervision over the demands made by them on the commissariat, and to explain fully the system now ordered. A similar request will be conveyed through the Governments of Madras and Bombay to the C. in C. of those presidencies.

Duties of Magistrates in the Interior.

(COPY.)

CIRCULAR NO. 3.

TO THE CRIMINAL AUTHORITIES IN THE LOWER PROVINCES.

It appears from the returns submitted by the sessions judges, in accordance with the court's circular No. 8, dated the 3rd Sept., 1860, that many of the magisterial authorities in the interior are in the habit of preparing the narrative and abstract of the evidence of the witnesses in each case, prescribed by Circular Order No. 7, dated the 27th June, 1859, from the vernacular record of the case, instead of doing so from their own notes.

2. The object which the court had in view when they issued their circular No. 7, was that magisterial officers should discontinue the pernicious practice of recording the evidence of witnesses by means of mohurirs, while they themselves were otherwise engaged, and should instead examine each witness  viva voce, giving their whole attention to him and nothing else, and take down notes of his evidence in their own language while the mohurir recorded it at length in the vernacular, and that they should eventually prepare their abstract and narrative alluded to above without ever having occasion, or very rarely, to refer to the vernacular record at all.

3. The preparation of an abstract of the witnesses' evidence from the record, after the case has been closed, is mere waste of time, and the court therefore direct that all magisterial officers shall for the future take down notes of the evidence from the mouth of every witness they examine at the time he delivers it, the mohurir writing it at length in the vernacular at the same time; and that the practice of allowing mohurirs to write down the evidence of witnesses while the presiding officer is occupied with other business be henceforth strictly prohibited, and that the original notes of the witnesses' evidence (or copies of them if they are not tolerably legible) be filed with the record, instead of a fresh abstract being made to accompany the narrative, as required by the Circular Order alluded to above.

4. The carrying out of these rules will enable the magisterial authorities to curtail their proceedings considerably, by rejecting at once all worthless and irrelevant evidence, now so frequently recorded at length by the mohurirs, and by confining the examination of the witnesses to the point at issue, and by stripping their depositions of all verbiage, whilst the increased value of the evidence so taken, the complete insight they will by this course obtain of their cases, and the readiness and facility with which they will consequently be able to decide them, will more than compensate the magisterial authorities for any additional trouble that may be imposed upon them, by giving full effect to the court's orders.

Reorganisation of the Punjab Police.

Feb. 4.—Proceedings of the Govt. Punjab, in the Police Dep.—Read again the undermentioned papers:—

* Nizam-ud-Awalut.—Present;—H. T. Raikes, C. B. Trevor, G. Loch, and H. V. Bayley, Esqrs., judges; and C. Steer, Esq., officiating judge.

Letter No. 1,659, dated May 7, 1860, from the Sec. to the Govt. of India, Foreign Dept., with the Gov. gen. to the Sec. to Govt., Punjab, Military Dept.

Letter No. 305, dated May 28, 1860, from the Sec. to Govt., Punjab, to the Judicial Commissioner, Punjab.

A Bill for the regulation of police within any parts of the British territories in India to which it may please the Gov. gen. in Council to extend its provisions.—Read a second time in the Legislative Council, on Oct. 6, 1860.

Letter No. 764, dated Nov. 19, 1860, from the Sec. to Govt., Punjab, to the Sec. to the Govt. of India, Home Dept., with the Gov. gen., and its inclosures.

Letter No. 839, dated Dec. 14, 1860, from the same to the same.

Resolution.—The amalgamation of the civil with the military police having been completed in the Lahore division, and in two districts of the Umritsur division, the Hon. the Lieut. gov. desires to introduce a similar system into all other divisions, that of the Delhi:at only excepted.

2. The arrangements in the Lahore division have been governed by the principles laid down in the Bill for the Regulation of Police now before the Legislative Council, with such modifications in detail as the circumstances of the Punjab provinces render necessary. The reformed system has been in operation under most careful supervision for some months, and the experience obtained will much facilitate its introduction into other divisions.

3. Subject to the sanction of the Supreme Govt., the following grades of officers will be constituted for the superintendence of the organised constabulary:—

1 inspector gen. of police.

4 deputy inspectors gen.

1 district superintendent for each district.

1 asst. district superintendent for each district.

4. The Judicial Commissioner, under whose direction the dept. of civil police has hitherto remained, will make over charge to the officer appointed inspector gen.

5. The Inspector gen. will become the head of the police dept., and correspond with the civil Sec. to Govt., with the Commissioners of Divisions, and the deputy inspectors gen. He will be responsible for the speedy introduction of the new system and for the efficiency and good conduct of the whole force.

6. During the transition from the old to the new system, he will be guided by the advice and great experience of the late head of the dept., Mr. A. A. Roberts, C.B., on whose sound judgment and cordial co-operation his Honour can confidently depend.

7. The Commissioners of Divisions will give effect to the measures determined on by the Inspector gen., in consultation with the Judicial Commissioner, for the immediate introduction of the new system, and his Honour anticipates much advantage from the careful supervision which their experience will enable them to give to all its details.

8. The officers who will be appointed deputy inspectors gen. have personally examined the working of the constabulary in the Lahore division, and will be able to afford the Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners much information.

9. The Commissioners will impress upon the district officers the duty which devolves upon them of assisting the district superintendents of constabulary with their counsel and suggestions. Without the most friendly co-operation the superintendents will at first be able to effect but little. His Honour also expects that the superintendents will freely avail themselves of, and conform to, the suggestions made for their guidance by the Deputy Commissioners.

10. The Lieut. gov. trusts that the organisation of the new force will be completed in all the divisions concerned by the end of March next.

11. Officers of both depts. will bear in mind that the reorganisation of the police on the principles declared in the Draft Act of the Legislative Council, is a measure which has the full concurrence of the Supreme Govt. The Lieut. gov. relies on the intelligent and energetic co-operation of his subordinates of every grade in forming, by the fusion of the separate bodies of police which have hitherto existed in these provinces, an efficient, disciplined, and inexpensive constabulary.

12. A few detailed rules for guidance are under preparation, and will be circulated hereafter.

The Pegu Military Service.

Camp Steemannabad, Jan. 26.—No. 20a.—H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication for general information of the following resolution:—

Resolution.—Read Memorandum of the Military Finance Department, No. 2,735 of the 29th Oct., 1861, by Col. Balfour, C.B.

Read Memorandum on the Military Establishment of the Pegu and Tenasserim Provs. at pp. 9 to 17 of the printed report on British Burmah, by R. Temple, Esq., C.S., and Lieut. col. Bruce, C.B., dated Dec. 13, 1860.

The present strength of the military force in Pegu is given in these papers as follows, viz.:—

Three horse batteries and six companies of artillery, two companies of sappers and miners, twelve regiments of infantry, European and native, with the proportion of staff and establishments, ordnance, commissariat, and medical, and two steamers held in reserve for the transport of troops, the whole being maintained at an annual cost of about Rs. 64,65,000.

2. With an organised police force, such as is intended to be maintained in the province, it is considered desirable and practicable to withdraw the troops entirely from the minor stations, as well as the outposts occupied at present by the Pegu sapper battalion, and to concentrate the military forces at the four principal stations—viz., Rangoon, Moulmein, Tonghoo, and Theyet Myo.

3. This arrangement admits of a very considerable reduction of the forces now in Pegu, and the following establishment will, for the future, be maintained, viz.:—

One horse battery and two reserve companies of artillery, two regiments European infantry and four regiments of native infantry, with a due proportion of staff, establishment, and stores, the estimated cost of which is Rs. (29,95,000) twenty-nine lacs and ninety-five thousand, showing a saving of about (35) thirty-five lacs of rupees annually on the present establishment.

4. This force will be divided amongst the four stations named, in the following proportion:—

Rangoon.—One company artillery, one wing European, and one regiment native infantry.

Moulmein.—One regiment native infantry.

Tonghoo.—One company artillery, with four mountain guns attached for pony draught, one wing European, and one regiment native infantry.

Theyet Myo.—One horse battery, one regiment European, and two regiments native infantry.

The troops will accordingly be withdrawn from the following stations—viz.:—

Pegu, Promé, Tavoy, Heuzada, Shooeghyeen, Bassein, Meecoung, Mergui, and Meenday.

Under arrangements which will be concerted between the commissioner of Pegu and the maj. gen. commanding the Pegu division, all the force in excess of the establishment to be thus maintained will be withdrawn to its own presidency, under instructions which will be communicated to the authorities in Pegu by the Madras Government.

5. The horses of the two batteries which are to be withdrawn from Pegu will not, however, be sent to Madras. The battery to be retained at Theyet Myo is to be completed with the best horses of the other two batteries, and a surplus, calculated at the ordinary number of remounts for two years, will also be attached to this battery. A sufficient number of horses are to be sold off for the mountain guns at Tonghoo, and the remainder are to be sold as soon as practicable.

6. The mountain guns will hereafter be provided with pony draught by local purchase, as casualties occur amongst the horses.

7. The Government of Madras is requested to decide whether the head quarters of the battalion of artillery shall be retained in Pegu or sent to Madras, and they will also make such provision for the extra attendants and for maintaining the harness, &c., with the mountain train as may be deemed necessary.

8. All the native regiments in excess of four (including the Pegu sapper battalion), which are to be maintained for the present, will be withdrawn by the Madras Government in communication with the local authorities in Pegu. The men of the regiments thus withdrawn, if passed by a medical committee as healthy and efficient soldiers, are to be allowed to volunteer for the three line corps remaining in Burmah, to such extent as will give the latter a temporary additional establishment of two hundred privates, with a due proportion of non-commissioned officers, provided the total strength is not thereby increased beyond eight hundred privates per regiment. The families of men so volunteering will, if willing to go, be forwarded at once to Burmah at the Government expense; and on the eventual withdrawal of these regiments, the men will be permitted to rejoin their original corps should they desire to do so. But in event of Government adopting the suggestion of the report for raising local regiments for service in Burmah the men so volunteering will have a preference. Their places are not to be filled up in the meantime in the regiments from which they volunteer. The results of the volunteering will be separately reported by the maj. gen. commanding for the information of the Government of India.

9. The Madras Government is requested to communicate with the commissioner of Pegu and with the military finance commission on the subject of the proposal at page 13 of the printed reports, and to favour the Government of India with its opinion on the financial and other bearings of the proposition that the native troops to be retained in the provinces to the east of the Bay of Bengal should consist of local corps belonging to the Madras army, and under the orders of the C. in C. of that presidency.

10. The diminution of the force will admit of a considerable and proportionate reduction of the staff and of the ordnance, commissariat, medical, and pay departments, and also of camp equipage, cattle, bearers, &c., and the Government of Fort St. George is requested to take this matter into consideration and to give effect, without delay, to such measures of reduction as may be practicable.

11. The number of pieces of ordnance now maintained in the province will be reduced, at least to the extent proposed in the report, and those to be kept up for the future will be distributed in such proportion and in such localities as may be fixed upon by the maj. gen. commanding the division, in communication with the commissioner.

12. All the ordnance stores in the province being largely reduced, the provision of a suitable arsenal will be facilitated, and the commissioner, in communication with the military authorities and department public works, will be able to submit plans for a proper building for the ordnance departments, properly protected.

13. The ordnance depots at Moulmein, Shooegyeen, and Bassein will be abolished. That at Mecaday will be removed to Theyet Myo, and the establishment of this, as well as of the depot at Thonghoo, will be reduced by the withdrawal of all artificers, the depots being placed under the officers commanding the artillery at those stations, with a suitable allowance and a few lascars.

14. If necessary, the Madras Government will make some addition to the regimental artificers sufficient to keep up the extra pieces of ordnance, and will allow the officer commanding the artillery to appoint at Theyet Myo and Thonghoo any warrant officer or sergeant of the ordnance department whose services may be found desirable to render the establishment more efficient.

15. The reductions thus carried out in the military forces in Pegu will in a great measure obviate the necessity of executing some of the public works for the accommodation of the troops now in contemplation, and thus render it less difficult to carry out the proposed reductions in the public works department. That department will also be relieved, for the future, from the duty of providing accommodation for the native troops, the arrangements for which will be left in the hands of commanding officers of regiments, under rules which will be laid down for their guidance by the local authorities in communication with the Madras Government.

16. All the other suggestions contained in the report and in memo. above referred to are approved, and the necessary orders for carrying them out will be issued by the several authorities concerned.

In closing this resolution the Gov. gen. desires that the cordial thanks of the Government of India may be conveyed to the officers upon whose careful and well-judged suggestions the resolution is founded.

The mission entrusted by the Gov. gen. to Col. G. Balfour, C.B., president of the military finance commission; R. Temple, Esq., C.S., president of the civil finance commission, and Lieut. Col. H. Bruce, C.B., one of the police commission, was one which the recent services of these officers in the preparation of measures of economical reform and their thorough acquaintance with the objects and views of the Supreme Government well qualified them to perform; as the clear and practical reports which have been submitted, singly or jointly, fully prove. Lieut. Col. A. Phayre, the commissioner of Pegu and Gov. gen.'s agent, and Maj. gen. J. Bell, commanding the Pegu division, have given aid quite as valuable towards the attainment of the desired object, and the Government of India is indebted to these officers for the prompt and efficient manner in which, whilst duly regarding the claims of the provinces under their charge, they have furthered the interests of the State at large.

The experience and sound judgment of the C. in C. of Madras, Lieut. gen. Sir Patrick Grant, K.C.B., have been of material assistance in combining a scheme of reduced military expenditure with efficiency in the Eastern provinces, and to his Excellency, as also to the late commissioner of Tenasserim, Capt. Hopkinson, and to the officers at the head of the military and public works departments in the Eastern province, the Gov. gen. desires to offer his acknowledgment of their valuable services.

Court Martial.

ASSISTANT SURGEON J. ADAMSON, 23RD L.I. At an European General Court Martial held at Rangoon, on Thursday, the 27th day of December, 1860, James Adamson, asst. surgeon of the 23rd L.I., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.:

Charge.—For conduct highly unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Rangoon, on the evening of the 22nd of October, 1860, at an entertainment given on the occasion of the Dusserah festival in the lines of the 23rd L.I. by the Hindoos of the regt., been in a disgraceful state of intoxication, and thereby necessitated his being carried to his house by certain officers of his regt.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—To be dismissed H.M.'s Indian Army. Rangoon, Wednesday, Jan. 2.

Recommendation of the Court.—The Court having thus performed the painful duty of awarding punishment commensurate with the crime of which they have found the prisoner guilty, beg leave respectfully, but earnestly, to recommend the case of Asst. surg. Adamson to the merciful consideration of the confirming authority, on account of his services and the ill health under which he has been suffering for some time past, and which was afflicting him at the time the offence charged against him occurred.

The sentence of the Court was approved and confirmed by Sir P. Grant, but with regard to the recommendation of the Court H.E. remarked:—

"The C. in C. regrets that he cannot accede to the recommendation of the Court. This is not the first occasion on which the habits of Asst. surg. Adamson have been brought to notice; and serious results are very liable to arise from intemperance in a medical officer."

Accordingly "Asst. surg. James Adamson is to be struck off the strength of the army from the date of the promulgation of this order at Rangoon, which is to be reported to the Principal inspector general medical department and to Army head quarters."

SIR E. CREASY AT CEYLON.—Sir E. Creasy, returning thanks at an anniversary dinner of the Ceylon Planters' Association, on the 16th ult., spoke warmly of the good feeling which exists amongst the advocates in that colony. He added:—"I was told to prepare myself for something very different out here. I recollect a learned friend of mine, who was supposed to be well acquainted with colonial scenes, saying to me, 'Well, I suppose you will do like other colonial judges. In six months you will be in a paper war with the governor; you will have indicted your attorney-general for libel, and suspended half your advocates and proctors for contempt of court.' Gentlemen, this was a pleasant prospect for a quiet man. I replied, 'Well, I do not know what may happen, but I have now had four years' judgeship at the Middlesex Sessions, and I have never had a quarrel with anyone there, and I do not exactly see why I am to begin quarrelling when I get to the tropics.' Still I might feel a little uneasy on the subject. I could not tell how permanent the calorific effects of the Red Sea might be on my constitution and temper; and I shuddered at the thoughts of finding something like Hong Kong in this island. But I soon discovered on landing that it would be hard indeed for me to find or even to pick a quarrel here. The executive authorities of every rank with whom I have been in communication, my colleagues on the bench, the members of the bar, and every officer of the courts have shown the same urbanity, the same friendly desire to assist a new comer, and to make my duties as little irksome as possible, and the discharge of them is rather a pleasure than a toil. I recognise a similar good feeling here, and I once more sincerely thank you for the honour which that good feeling has led you to confer on me this evening."

THE MAHARAJAH OF KOTAH having applied for permission to increase his forces from 13,000 to 20,000 men, the Governor-general has informed him that he could not sanction more than 15,000 men.

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE BILL TO PROVIDE FOR A GOVERNMENT PAPER CURRENCY.

TO THE HON. THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF INDIA.

The select committee appointed to consider the Bills to provide for a Government paper currency have the honour to report that they have received the communications noted in the margin.*

They have gone carefully through the Bill and have made certain amendments therein, which are contained in the copy of the Bill annexed to this report.

In order to explain the nature and object of the more important amendments, it is necessary to refer briefly to the circumstances which have occurred since the Bill was read a first time and printed.

It then embodied, in the form originally proposed by Mr. Wilson, the scheme of that lamented statesman for the establishment of a great and novel system of paper currency throughout India.

The leading features of that scheme consisted in the issue, at various circles into which India was to be divided, and through the agency of an independent body of commissioners, of a paper circulation of notes, from 5 to 1,000 rupees, based on a reserve, partly of specie, and partly of securities, in a proportion which might fluctuate from time to time, but was in no case to fall below that of one-third of specie to two-thirds of securities.

This scheme, which was fully explained by Mr. Wilson in a most able minute and speech, gave rise to many comments, but his untimely death makes it impossible to know how far he might have been disposed to modify it; and the Bill was read a first and second time with a distinct understanding on the part of members of the Legislative Council, that they were not to be considered as committed to its detailed provisions. In the meantime a despatch was received from the Secretary of State for India, objecting to the principle on which the Bill was founded, of issuing notes against a fluctuating reserve of securities, and stating the opinion of the home Government, that the principle ought to be the same as that adopted in England, of permitting issues of paper only against actual coin or bullion, with the exception of a certain limited amount, to be defined by law, below which it might be reasonably supposed that the paper circulation could never fall.

Your committee concur with Sir Charles Wood in thinking this principle safer and more applicable to the circumstances of India.

It is the principle sanctioned by experience, and by a great preponderance of authority in England, and it presents the great advantage of securing a paper currency absolutely identical, beyond a certain safe limit, with the metallic currency which it displaces, and free from those risks which, under the most able management, must attend an extensive issue, by the Government, of promissory notes, based on a large proportion of securities, which, in times of difficulty, might be almost inconvertible.

It is an advantage also that, under this plan, the temptation will be diminished for the Government to force the circulation of notes further than the country is prepared for them; and that the necessity will be removed for frequent interference of the State with the money market by the purchase and sale of securities.

Your committee have accordingly amended the Bill by striking out the 10th and 11th sections, and introducing a clause, declaring that all issues of notes shall be made against actual coin or bullion, with the exception of an amount, in no case to exceed four crores of rupees, which may be issued against securities.

They have fixed on the sum of four crores as the maximum limit, because this is very nearly the amount which may be issued in excess of actual specie by the present banks, under their existing charters.

The Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay are authorised to issue, in the aggregate, notes to the amount of five crores of rupees, with a reserve of one-fourth of their total liabilities in specie to meet their notes and other demands; and your committee have thought it right that the mercantile community should have an assurance that the present amount of authorised issue should not be curtailed as might practically be the case if a lower limit than four crores were adopted.

Within this limit also we think that the Government, whose general credit and cash balances are, by the words which we have introduced, made distinctly responsible as well as the special reserve may be safely trusted so to regulate their issues as not to endanger the payment of their notes, for which purpose it will be essential that they should not at first exercise the full power of issuing up to the four crores against securities, but should proceed with great caution, feeling their way gradually, and always maintaining an ample reserve of specie. Beyond the issue of four crores no issue whatever will be permitted, except against actual coin or bullion in the vaults of the Mint or local treasuries, unless the Legislative Council should hereafter see fit, after experience of the working of the law now proposed, and full discussion and consideration to pass a further law on the subject.

This fundamental change in the principle of the issue of notes makes several changes necessary in the machinery of the Bill.

When the function of commissioners is reduced to the simple one of giving notes for specie or specie for notes, it is obviously unnecessary to provide for an expensive staff, or to make them independent of the Government.

The masters of the Mint may probably be the commissioners at the presidency towns, and the ordinary collectors may act as deputy commissioners at other places.

In certain cases it may be advantageous to use the agency of banks, especially at the Presidency towns, or at large places of commerce, where branches may be established.

Such an agency would in no respect alter the character of the issue, which would remain that of the Government, who would retain the exclusive possession of the reserves against which the notes were issued; but the banks would simply act as agents, for the purpose of greater economy and convenience in paying or issuing Government notes to the general public.

Accordingly, instead of the section obliging the Governor-general in Council by a certain day to divide all India into circles, and to appoint deputy commissioners in each, we have substituted sections giving a discretionary power, except as regards the Presidency towns, which are to be the centres of separate circles, of appointing from time to time such circles as may be found expedient, and of making such arrangements with Government offices, banks, or other persons, as may be necessary to facilitate the issue and payment of notes. As regards the circles, we are disposed to leave much discretion to the Government in exercising the power of creating them, as experience only can show to what extent it may be necessary to resort to it.

It is clearly impossible to make notes issued at one place payable everywhere, as this would entail the necessity of keeping a reserve adequate for the whole circulation at each point, and it is difficult to enact that notes shall be a legal tender at an extreme distance from any place where cash can be legally demanded for them.

Hence has arisen the necessity for circles; but it cannot be denied that the division of India into separate circles would be in many respects an evil, and that it would be very desirable that an uniform circulation should be established over as wide an area as possible.

We are not without hopes that, under the arrangements contemplated, this may be, to a considerable extent, attained, and that, as confidence is extended, Presidency notes, if received at the Government treasuries, may, with the aid possibly of an auxiliary gold currency, become practically such a general medium of exchange throughout India as to supersede, in a great measure, the necessity for local notes.

With reference to the question of gold we have introduced an important amendment.

Without attempting to discuss the questions which have been raised respecting a double standard, or to depart in any respect from the principle of a sole silver standard, we have thought that it would be a considerable advantage to provide for the possible application, in India, of the principle as regards gold which is applied in England in regard to silver.

In England, where gold is the sole standard, the Bank of England are authorised to issue not exceeding one-fourth of their gold coin and bullion against silver.

We have given a power of issuing up to one-fourth part of that portion of the circulation of India, which is represented by actual coin or bullion against gold coin or bullion, at a rate to be fixed by the Government, from time to time, and not altered without six months' notice.

With ordinary prudence the Government cannot lose, by taking a limited amount of gold at a price to be fixed by itself, while it may be a great convenience to commerce, in many cases, to know that gold can be made available as money at a certain fixed rate.

Nor is it impossible that, if a certain fixed minimum value be thus given to gold, and it can be freely taken at the Government treasuries at this rate, the superior convenience of gold and its adaptation to native wants, may give it a higher value, and thus, in course of time, a considerable auxiliary gold currency may be introduced. Should these expectations not be realised, no harm will have been done, and the clause will simply remain a dead letter, showing that, with a sound paper circulation superadded to silver, nothing more is wanted.

Your committee have anxiously considered another point, namely, what should be the lowest denomination of notes which should be issued as a legal tender?

The disadvantage of issuing two sorts of notes, one of which should be a legal tender and the other not, seemed to be such that it was desirable to make all the notes uniform in this respect.

This being so, your committee have thought that, on the whole, it would be more prudent not to authorise at present a lower denomination of notes than for Rs. 20.

With a circulation of Rs. 5 and Rs. 10 notes, it appeared to several members of your committee that there would be considerable risk of exciting suspicion and discontent among the mass of the community, who might be compelled to take payments in an unaccustomed medium, for which they could not very readily obtain change without loss.

If, under the proposed provisions as to gold, that metal should come into general circulation, the use of small notes would be, in a great measure, superseded by a medium which, from its intrinsic value and power of uniform circulation, must be admitted to possess some important advantages over any form of small note currency.

If, on the other hand, those apprehensions would be groundless, and after a short time, when the public are familiarised with the larger notes, a spontaneous demand should arise for notes of a smaller denomination, it will be easy to introduce a Bill, extending the limit below Rs. 20.

The other amendments are merely matters of detail which will be seen by reference to the Bill.

Your committee have been unanimous in adopting the amendments now submitted to the Legislative Council, and they trust that the Bill, as it now stands, will be found to embody a safe and practical scheme for extending to India the benefits of a circulating medium better adapted for her wants and for the rapid expansion of her trade and industry than that which she at present possesses, of a purely metallic silver currency.

The two last sections of the Bill have been omitted, because the penal code seems to contain similar enactments.

RAILWAYS IN INDIA.—At the close of the last official year on the 30th of April last £26,415,056 had been expended on railway works in India. It is estimated at the India-office that a further sum of £8,375,223 will have been expended in the course of the present official year when it ends on the 30th of next month, making in the whole £34,790,279—about a tenth of the paid up capital of all the railways of the United Kingdom. It was estimated at the beginning of the Indian official year that at its close on the 30th of April next there would be £1,978,390 standing to the credit of the railway companies, but it is now calculated that £454,478 will have been advanced to them beyond the amount paid by them, making a difference of £2,432,877 to the Indian Government. Of the large expenditure of the current year about £6,000,000 will be in India.

RED SEA TELEGRAPH.—The Government having at length provided the necessary funds, the warrants for the guaranteed dividend on the shares of the Red Sea Telegraph Company, which has been nearly two months in arrear, were issued on the 27th. Of course they were not accompanied either by apology or compensation for the loss of interest at the rate of 8 per cent. sustained by the claimants during the period of default, the Government being virtually out of the reach of the steps that would have been taken against a private individual in any similar case. Both the shareholders and the public will be glad to consign the incident to oblivion, satisfied to rely that a sufficient warning has been given to prevent any future English Minister from appealing to the law officers of the Crown as to the propriety of questioning on technical grounds a liability contracted openly in the face of the whole country, and actually resting on a document prepared by official hands.—Times.

THE BAILEY GUARD MEMORIAL.—The subscriptions for the erection of a memorial to the defenders of the Bailey Guard, Lucknow, amount to Rs. 6,548. A meeting has been held to quicken the payment of the money subscribed, before deciding on a plan.

MR. LAING'S CURRENCY BILL.

It has at last been discovered that the late Mr. James Wilson was not infallible. We have no wish to detract from his real merits, or in any way to tarnish the memory of the dead, but we cannot forbear to express our heartfelt satisfaction that his successor has not adopted his very empirical notions on finance. Unsited for any country, Mr. Wilson's projected scheme would certainly in India have proved a stupendous failure. But peace be with his ashes. He died in the faithful discharge of his duty as a servant of the State, and all differences of opinion may now well be buried in his premature grave.

Mr. Laing's measure is unquestionably safer and more practical, though defective in many of its details. The minimum value of the notes, for instance, seems scarcely low enough to meet the requirements of native traffic. It is assumed that twenty rupee notes in India are analogous to £5 notes in England, and in one sense the analogy may hold good, but considering the minute character of the dealings of native shopkeepers the experiment of ten rupee notes might very safely be tried, and would prove of immense convenience to the numerous class of small traders. However, a promise is held out that should the mercantile community hereafter appeal to the Legislative Council for the issue of other notes than those now proposed, a change will be introduced to meet the requirements occasioned by the extension of confidence.

Again, the total amount of the first issue seems absurdly small. It is confined, indeed, in the first instance, to the Presidency towns, but what are four millions in three such cities as Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay? It is scarcely sufficient to impart even a fillip to trade. If a larger amount cannot be hazarded it is hardly worth the trouble, or the risk of unsettling men's minds and inspiring them with unjust suspicions. After a time the issue will be increased and extended to the Mofussil, but the timidity and tentativeness now displayed are likely to create apprehensions which would have been mastered by a bolder and more comprehensive measure. Mr. Laing even apologises for so large a sum as four millions, and thinks it might perhaps be better to "gradually creep up to that sum." On this ground we would do battle with him, for no "creeping" policy will ever answer in India.

The existing Presidency Banks are to be the banks of issue, and this arrangement is certainly better than if the Government were to enter into business, as it were, on its own account. At the same time it must be confessed that the general management of those banks hitherto has not been such as to give a very exalted notion of either the financial or commercial knowledge of their managers. Possibly Mr. Laing may take some precautions to insure the better regulation of these institutions for the future, and to provide for their management being entrusted to men of business habits and training.

The proposed encouragement of a gold currency is in every way to be commended. There is abundance of that precious metal in the country, but at present it is foolishly wasted on ornaments, instead of being employed as a convenient medium of circulation, far less cumbersome than silver, less variable in value, and less subject to wear and tear. But it is needless to repeat the arguments for a gold currency with which the readers of this journal have long been familiar, and we cannot but think that on the day when the natives are made to appreciate the advantages of this standard of value, an immense impetus will be given, both to the internal trade and external commerce of the country—but that day, we fear, is not yet nigh at hand.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

THE Lord Mayor of London has narrowly escaped losing a splendid opportunity of connecting his name with a truly great and philanthropic movement, and as it is he has deprived himself of the credit of taking the initiative. Had he asked counsel of his own heart, instead of consulting with merchants and others, who know nothing of India but its products, he would never have returned such an unsympathetic, such an un-English answer to the appeal of the Calcutta Committee. It is very true that there have been many demands of late on the charity of individuals, but clarity is an expansive virtue, and the more it gives the more does it desire to give. Benevolence soon becomes a habit, and is never satisfied without a field for its active exercise. Besides, it was an insult to a wealthy and Christian nation to close the door upon a starving people without first taking some steps to ascertain what was indeed the state of public feeling on the subject. It is absurd in such extreme cases as this to stickle for precedents, and to turn a deaf ear to such an appeal as that from Calcutta because a few mercantile houses were reluctant to sign a requisition to the chief magistrate of the City to convene a public meeting. His lordship must be well aware that a meeting of the kind in question would be attended not only by City men, but by influential and wealthy persons from all parts of the metropolis. It is really intolerable that the national character should be jeopardised through the stinginess of half-a-dozen individuals, far more engaged in accumulating money upon earth than in laying up treasure in heaven. The three tailors of Tooley-street were not more ridiculous or presumptuous. Possibly, indeed, the Lord Mayor's counsellors may have been ignorant of the extent of the calamity that is weighing so heavily upon many millions of their fellow-subjects, and this ignorance may entitle them to an acquittal on the charge of hardness of heart, though it does not exonerate them from that of presumption. The less they know, the more guarded they should have been in the advice they tendered. But it was barely possible that they could have been ignorant of the dreadful sufferings of the starving natives, for this reason, that Colonel Baird Smith took care to back his application by explanatory papers, which his lordship must certainly have submitted to his unpitied friends. Assuredly, one would have thought that the terrible details they contained would have melted the stoniest heart. Are we to understand that not one of these evil advisers, while dissuading Lord Mayor Cubitt from calling a public meeting, presented him with a cheque for £100, or even for £50? There is no mention of any such contribution in his lordship's original letter, which merely expresses a readiness to receive and remit any sums of money that may be forwarded to the Mansion House; but neither is there any allusion to his lordship's own benefaction, which we assume, as a matter of course, was nevertheless sufficiently handsome to mitigate the harshness of the refusal which the magistrate was capable of penning, but which the man was incapable of ratifying.

The Press, however, has viewed the matter in a more liberal light, and has taken upon itself to redeem the laches of London's Lord Mayor. The leading journal trusts that at least £50,000 may yet be spared from the superfluities of the rich and the modest hoards of the industrious. That there will be much difficulty in raising this considerable sum of money we do not imagine for one moment; but four times that amount might be had, and at once, if the managers of the Mutiny Relief Fund rightly understood the nature of the trust reposed in them. The public subscribed nearly half-a-million sterling for a particular purpose, but it proved that a quarter of a million would have been sufficient, for at this moment there is a balance in hand of very nearly £230,000. Let £30,000 be set aside for the discharge of all existing claims—and it is far more than will be needed—and let the remainder be applied without delay to the relief of those starving millions in the North-West Provinces. Or, if the managers hesitate to apply to one purpose money that was subscribed for another, let them advertise in the papers that such is their intention, and that those who object can have their money returned to them; and we boldly affirm that not a single objection would be made from any quarter. A new fund, however, is now to be raised, and we shall be happy to publish in this journal the names of such contributors as may think proper to confide their benefactions to the care of its proprietors.

THE BEST PREVENTIVE OF FAMINE.

At a public meeting lately held in the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce on behalf of the starving population of the Upper Provinces, one of the speakers somewhat wandered from the legitimate question to inquire how far the Government were answerable for the present calamitous affliction. He admitted, indeed, that neither Lord Canning nor the late Court of Directors were guilty of withholding the rains, but he accused the Viceroy's predecessors of having sanctioned a policy which, in its fruits, has tended to increase the sufferings of the wretched peasantry. The total destruction of the talookdaree system, and the utter annihilation of the native gentry, have deprived the poor cultivators of their natural friends in times of necessity. The great landed proprietor, for his own sake, if from no higher motive, would have furnished employment to the extent of his means, and have otherwise assisted the most helpless and indigent. The Government, no doubt, is acting in this spirit, but all official machinery is stiff and cumbersome, and the people themselves would rather have recourse to one of their own race, under whose shadow they had lived from their infancy, than to any alien, however kindly his disposition, however courteous his manners. These talookdars would certainly have been of immense service to the Government at the present moment, but as, in Napoleonic phrase, they have "ceased to exist," it is useless to waste our own or our readers' time in deploring evils that are past a remedy. There is, however, a means of preventing, or at least of greatly mitigating, the recurrence of such a dread visitation as that which is now depopulating and laying waste the fairest provinces of India. Water is confessedly the one thing needful, and it is also the one thing that is most abundant. All that is needed is to disperse and direct this productive power over the vast area at present inadequately supplied. At one time the Indian Government were fairly open to the reproach of neglecting to supply its subjects with even such channels of irrigation as had been constructed in the times of the Mohammedan rulers. Most of these old aqueducts had become encumbered with rubbish, and had fallen to decay, but a few of them were still in a condition that required only a moderate outlay to be restored to their former usefulness. But even this moderate outlay could ill be spared while campaigns rapidly succeeded one another, and one war was scarcely terminated before a second broke out on another frontier. And some of these wars, certainly those that have been most onerous, were waged for imperial purposes, and at the instigation of the home Government, so that in reality the Directors were not nearly so remiss as their enemies love to represent them. In spite of all difficulties and drawbacks, numerous and magnificent works of public utility were successfully completed, and others brought to a very advanced state when the mutiny abruptly closed all peaceful labours. Now, at length, these labours may be resumed, and with redoubled energy, for the power of the whole British empire shields and protects India. The mere profits on the supply of water are enormous. Exclusive of the increased land-tax, the Eastern Jumna Canal pays 13 per cent. on the original outlay, and the Western 27 per cent.; while the Coleroon dam in Tanjore yields 23½ per cent., in addition to £60,000 a-year in increased revenue. Everywhere the effect of artificial irrigation is magical. A line may oftentimes be drawn with mathematical precision between watered and unwatered lands by merely following the shades of verdure.

"Go along the Eastern Jumna Canal," says a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, "and mark the bands of fertility that run along its banks on either side. See the land densely populated, and covered with the highest species of cultivation. Go into the villages to whose lands the water reaches, and mark how the brick house takes the place of the mud cottage. And see in Murwar how the influence of water has produced physical, social, and moral results that seem indeed magical. Dixon gave water to the fields, and order took the place of disorder, wealth took the place of poverty, industry took the place of crime. Villages rose up amidst the barren waste, and cities stood up in the wilderness. Civilisation took the place of barbarism. And if the mere money return speak with the most potent voice, look at Southern India, Tanjore, and Tinnevely, and see how the tide of wealth rolls in after the spreading waters. Truly water seems the very light of the picture. Take it away, and the picture darkens; the fields become waste, and villages depopulated; men fade off from the face of the land. Restore it, and the picture lightens; the fields again laugh with greenness; on it comes once again a happy and contented people, secure in their industry."

The great Ganges Canal, 810 miles in length, still demands the expenditure of nearly £300,000, but this sum will be the saving of the Doab in future years. Upwards of five millions of acres will be irrigated by means of this gigantic undertaking, which cannot be too speedily completed. Other works of equal comparative utility, if of inferior dimensions, are in progress in other parts of India, but retarded by lack of means, because it is from the revenue that the capital is furnished for these purposes. This system, however, cannot be a sound one. There is no reason why the people should be taxed for the mere benefit of the Government, even though they may ultimately derive some advantage from the appropriation of their money. It has been proved beyond a doubt that all works of irrigation pay an enormous interest on the capital invested. Why, then, does not Government raise money by loans for this specific object? There would be no difficulty in obtaining two or three millions at 5 or 5½ per cent., which, properly laid out, would, in a few years, give in direct returns at least 20 per cent. per annum, besides employing many thousands of labourers, reclaiming and rendering taxable tens of thousands of acres of uncultivated land, and dispensing far and wide the elements of peace, prosperity, and happiness. We maintain, as we have all along asserted, that canals are far more necessary to India than railways—the latter may be an advantage, but the former are a necessity. It is therefore most desirable that all works of this kind now in hand should be pushed forward with the utmost rapidity, and that new works should be fearlessly commenced wherever they can be shown to be practically beneficial.

INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

Yesterday afternoon a public meeting was held at the Mansion-house, to devise immediate measures for the alleviation of the distress consequent upon the famine prevailing in India. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor presided, and among those present were:—The Marquis of Clanricarde, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Baron Rothschild, M.P., Sir A. Rothschild, Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., Mr. Vansittart, M.P., Mr. Gregson, M.P., Colonel Sykes, M.P., Mr. W. Dent, Mr. Alderman Finnis, Mr. Alderman Rose, Mr. Alderman Meech, Colonel Sir Herbert Edwards, Mr. Westmacott, R.A., Lieutenant-Colonel Wilkinson, Captain W. J. Eastwick, Mr. Alderman Allen, General Sir Robert Vivian, Mr. Samuel Gurney, M.P., Colonel H. M. Durand, Sir James W. Colvill; Lieutenant-General Fox, Sir Frederick Halliday, Lieutenant-Colonel Norman, Lieutenant-General Sim, Mr. Joseph Tritton, Mr. J. G. Frith, Major-General Alexander, Sir Ranald Martin, Major-General Tremeneere, Colonel Baker, Mr. William Gladstone, Mr. T. Hankey, and Major-General Mansell.

The meeting having been opened with prayer by the chaplain to the Lord Mayor,

The CHAIRMAN said that few words were required from him on the subject of the meeting. The fact was patent before them that a great part of our Eastern empire had been devastated by a visitation of Providence unparalleled in severity during the present generation. Occupying the position he did, he rejoiced when he saw that he had a fair opportunity of asking the assistance of his fellow-citizens and fellow-countrymen in devising measures for the relief of the sufferers from the famine.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said: My Lord Mayor and gentlemen, I shall submit to the meeting the resolution which has been placed in my hands, and the purport of which is as follows:—

"That this meeting, deeply sympathising with the distress arising from the devastating famine in the North-Western Provinces of India, and being desirous of aiding the noble exertions of the Relief Committees of Calcutta and Bombay in their endeavours to relieve their fellow-subjects in India, now reduced to a state of appalling destitution, feels called upon publicly to record its sense of this calamity, and sympathy with their suffering fellow-subjects."

I apprehend I am right in saying that this is a meeting which, large as it is, has been called at a moment's notice. The subject, however, on account of which we are met is one which does not require much deliberation, nor, I trust, do the citizens of London generally, and the leading persons in all classes and all pursuits whom I have the satisfaction of seeing in this room, require much time to consider whether they shall step forward to save from the horrors of famine their suffering fellow-creatures in India. I have not come here to-day because I felt it binding peculiarly on me, or because I had any peculiar qualification for assisting in the high purposes of the meeting. I was desirous that such a meeting, for such a purpose, should not pass without the appearance of at least one member of her Majesty's Government to testify on his own behalf, and I am certain, not less on behalf of every one of his colleagues, their hearty approval of and warm sympathy with the object for which you are assembled. Though the knowledge of the famine has come somewhat suddenly upon us, yet the features of it are so broad and so appalling that they must at once speak for themselves. No fewer than 1,500,000, as we are told on, I believe, the most authentic and undoubted authority, have nothing under Providence but the hand of charity to depend upon to save them from the horrors of premature death. Here I think we have at once such a basis of fact, such an ample justification for our assembling together, such a ground for an appeal to the whole people of this country, whom on these occasions the city of London appropriately leads, that nothing that can be said, even by those who are better informed than myself, can add much to the force of the ideas conveyed by those few simple words—a million and a half of men, women, and children depend upon charity, not for the means of subsistence in the enlarged sense in which we are accustomed to use the term, but for the bare means of escape from a horrible and otherwise inevitable death. The ties which connect us with India are of a nature that renders this appeal still more becoming and still more forcible than when it is considered upon general grounds. I am not one of those who hold that it is to our connection with India and other dependencies that England owes her material greatness, wealth, and prosperity. I am strongly and deeply convinced that the sources of our greatness lie within the shores of these little islands, and not beyond them. But, at the same time, no one who is capable of appreciating what belongs to the welfare of mankind can fail to see that, whatever may have been our original views, we have undertaken an immense responsibility with respect to our transmarine possessions, and have come under the conditions of a sacred trust towards them which we cannot but discharge. One of these terrible calamities now stares us in the face, and I ask, on every ground, whether as men or philanthropists, as citizens or Christians, we ought not to rush forward to avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded to us. For though, no doubt, we set a high value on our commerce with India, as on our commerce with the world; though it is, no doubt, a fertile source of wealth and power to this country, yet we have more to do with India than to unite it in the bonds of commercial intercourse with ourselves, valuable as those relations are. We have to carry to India more than the wealth which our shores produce. We are under an obligation to her which we never can acquit by the mere exercise of political right and sway over the multitudes who inhabit that country. The residents in India have it in their power, each of them, to become a living sermon, to be, as it were, an apostle, by his own life and conversation exhibiting before all the people what are the doctrines of Christianity by letting them know what are its practical effects. By following the example of the Saviour, who was content to spend his time and toil on earth in assuaging the miseries that beset human life, we may, I trust, do something to convince our suffering fellow-subjects that the religion we profess is indeed a religion of love, and by means that can excite no suspicion and no angry passion we may do something to win them towards it. My whole purpose has been to bear willing and hearty testimony to the importance and urgency of the object for which we have been called together, on behalf of myself and of those who, with myself, form, for the time, the Administration of the country. I earnestly commend it to your cordial support, and I venture further to express a hope that this meeting is to be, not the accomplishment, but only the beginning and starting point of a great work, that the words that sound within these walls may echo from one end of the country to the other, and that we shall be enabled to bear something like a national testimony of sympathy, and to make something like a national offering to alleviate the pressure of one of the severest visitations which have been sent on any portion of mankind within the memory of any now present.

Mr. KINNAIRD, M.P., in seconding the resolution, concurred with the right hon. gentleman in regarding the meeting as of an important missionary character, and in believing that the effects of the moment would not be limited to the material condition of the people of India. According to the latest intelligence from India the calamity was rapidly and fearfully increasing. The Friend of India said—

"It is certain at this moment that to the number of people previously stated as the population of the famine-stricken districts must now be added about 3,500,000 more, making the whole, in round numbers, about 7,500,000. And of these we believe we may take about 2,500,000 as representing the proportion at present wholly incapable of self-support, either from want of means to purchase food or from physical incapacity."

The Government were, he believed, doing all they could to meet the appalling distress, as they were in duty bound to do, as the chief owners of the soil. The visitation would at least have the effect of drawing attention to the importance of works of irrigation and general improvement in India. He was confident that the people of England would not fail to give liberally out of their abundance for the relief of their famishing fellow-subjects in India.

The resolution was carried with acclamation.

Sir E. RYAN, in proposing the next resolution, expressed his deep sympathy for the people of India, among whom he had spent many years, and he urged upon the meeting the necessity of promptitude in sending in contributions. The first mail left on the 3rd proximo, and many lives would be saved if a considerable sum could be despatched by it. He trusted therefore that the public would not delay in responding to the appeal now made, but would send in their subscriptions immediately. He moved the following resolution:—

"That, in consideration of the extreme urgency of the case, and the necessity for adopting immediate measures for alleviating the misery now so unhappily existing, this meeting most anxiously entreats the benevolent contributions of its fellow-citizens and the public at large, and recommends that subscription lists be opened, and that all the London and provincial bankers be requested to receive and remit such contributions to the Lord Mayor, and that the amounts as collected be despatched by each mail to India."

Alderman FINNIS, in seconding the resolution, remarked that there never was a stronger case for sympathy and assistance, and expressed his hope that the British public would deal as liberally with the ryots of India as with the sufferers from the mutiny.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. CRAWFORD agreed with the Chancellor of the Exchequer in believing that the movement would be only commenced by the present meeting, and that the appeal made from the metropolis would meet with a hearty response from every part of the kingdom. Upon the Government of India, as the universal landowners, the great burden of the calamity in the North-West Provinces necessarily fell; and he was glad to believe that they were doing all they could to alleviate the misery of the natives. He hoped the public of this country would second the efforts of the Government by their spontaneous liberality. He moved the following resolution:—

"That this meeting is of opinion that all the cities and towns of the United Kingdom should be invited to co-operate with the committee now appointed in their efforts to carry out the above object."

Mr. VANSITTART suggested that the subscriptions raised in this country should be sent direct to Mr. Edmonstone at Agra and Sir R. Montgomery at Lahore, instead of by the circuitous route to Colonel Baird Smith at Calcutta. He seconded the resolution.

Mr. W. DENT wished to state that the Government were doing all they could for the sufferers by the famine. They had made arrangements to provide work for those who applied for it, and had opened central stations for the distribution of food. They had also doubled all private contributions, and left them to private associations to distribute.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. GREGGON mentioned that every £5 which was now subscribed would provide food for five natives for three months. He hoped no time would be lost in sending out money, as he feared that if they were not very prompt it might arrive in India too late to do much good. He moved the appointment of thirty-six gentlemen as a committee, the chief of whom were:—The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, M.P. (President), the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, the Right Hon. the Marquis of Clanricarde; Mr. Bonomy Dobree, Governor of the Bank of England; Mr. Alfred Latham, Deputy Governor; Mr. W. U. Arbuthnot, Member of the Council of India; Sir Erskine Perry, ditto; Sir F. Currie, ditto; Captain W. J. Eastwick, ditto; Mr. J. E. Willoughby, ditto; Sir James C. Melville, K.C.B.; Sir Charles Trevelyan, Sir Edward Ryan, Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., Baron Rothschild, M.P., Mr. Samuel Gregson, M.P., Mr. J. Bates, Sir F. Halliday, Colonel Sykes, M.P., Sir J. R. Martin, Mr. William Dent, Mr. Alderman Copeland, M.P., Mr. Alderman Finnis.

Mr. J. A. ARBUTHNOT seconded the resolution.

The resolution was carried.

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE proposed, and Colonel Sir HERBERT EDWARDES seconded, a vote of thanks to the Chairmen, which was carried unanimously.

SCINDE RAILWAY.

The directors of this company state in their report that all the materials and appliances necessary for the construction and working of the line had now arrived at Kurrachee. The cuttings and embankments were in such a state of forwardness that they might probably be already completed throughout the entire length between Kurrachee and Kotree, leaving to be finished only the side trenches, water drains, and slope trimming, the progress of which would not interfere with the traffic of the line. On the 26th of January the permanent way was laid over the Bahrun Viaduct, and an engine with a train of materials passed over it. This viaduct consisted of thirty arches. It was built of hard white durable stone found on the spot, and which had a very handsome appearance when dressed. The Bahrun was 1,782 feet long, and, with the exception of the Muller, the longest viaduct on the line. In the month of October, 1859, several hundred persons were conveyed by the railway to witness the ceremony of laying, by the Commissioner in Scinde, the foundation stone of the Muller Viaduct, the most extensive engineering work on the line. This viaduct was composed of Warren's iron girders, of 80 feet span, resting on stone piers, and is 1,860 feet in length. The ballasting of the line was all but completed, and was of excellent quality, and the outlay for maintenance promised to be exceedingly moderate. Telegraphic communication had been established for several months between Kurrachee and Kotree and the intermediate stations on the railway. The locomotive repairing shops were completed, and the smiths' shops and foundry had been at work for nearly five months. Engines, carriages, and trucks were ready in sufficient number for the expected opening this month. Although the terminal and other stations would not be finished for the opening of the line, sufficient temporary accommodation would be afforded for both passengers and goods. The harbour improvement works, so important to the railway, were being energetically carried on by Government. The external and internal trade of Scinde continued to increase in the most satisfactory manner. Since the last report a further sum of £83,000, raised by debentures, had been paid to the credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council, making, with £250,000 previously raised, in all £333,000, being to the extent of the present borrowing powers of the company for the purposes of the Scinde Railway. The financial statement showed, that from the commencement the sum of £1,329,000 had been received, and that the sum of £1,164,000 had been expended, leaving a balance of £160,000.

PUNJAB RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that since September last 12,000 tons of permanent way material and a large quantity of rolling stock had been despatched to Kurrachee, and the ironwork of every description necessary for the construction and working of the railway was either contracted for or in course of delivery for shipment to India. The earthwork on the section between Lahore and Unrisur was of excellent quality, and the only two bridges on this section were in a forward state. By a prompt fulfilment of their engagements by the native contractors for the supply of ballast and sleepers this most important section would be speedily completed, and opened for the accommodation of the public. The whole of the ironwork had been for some time on the spot, and the platelayers despatched from this country to put it together had arrived. The Unrisur station designs had received the sanction of Government, and the Mean Meer and Atarree stations were all but completed. The works at the Great Central station at Lahore had been greatly advanced during the past half-year. The earthworks remaining to be completed between Lahore and Mooltan were inconsiderable, and beyond Mooltan to Shere Shah they were so far advanced as to be within a short distance of the Cheenab river, at which spot the interchange of traffic coming from Kurrachee for the north, and vice versa, would be effected. Last month a call of £5 per share was made payable on the capital of this railway, which was well responded to. No other call would be made on the proprietors during the current year. A considerable proportion of the shares were now fully paid up, and payments would continue for the present to be received in anticipation.

The capital account showed that £903,531 had been received, and £676,923 expended, leaving a balance of £226,608.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE GENERAL HAVELOCK.—Messrs. Mowlem and Co., contractors, of Grosvenor-wharf, Pimlico, have set to work a number of masons and labourers, at the south-east corner of Trafalgar-square, and immediately facing Northumberland-house, for the purpose of erecting a statue to the late lamented General Havelock. The statue is to be of full length (in bronze), similar to that of General Napier at the west end of the square, and is executed by the well-known artist, Mr. Behnes, of Osnaburgh-street, Regent's-park, who designed that of Sir Robert Peel, in Cheap-side. The pedestal will be of solid blocks of Dartmoor granite; that immediately supporting the statue will weigh about eight tons, and the whole weight of the structure, when completed, will be between forty and fifty tons. On the pedestal in front of the statue it is believed to be the intention to engrave the gallant General's name, the regiment to which he belonged at the time of his death, and a list of his glorious victories during his brilliant campaign in India. On the back will be recorded the names of the regiments that served under his command at the ever-memorable relief of Lucknow, and in other engagements. The workmen have had much trouble at getting at solid ground, for the purpose of laying the foundation for so heavy a mass. In digging down they came upon an old dung-pit and cess-pool, supposed to belong to the stables of old Carlton house, which is said to have stood upon this spot in times gone by. It was thought that three feet would have been quite far enough to go down, but in consequence of these discoveries they have had to go down a distance of about seventeen feet before anything like solidity was obtained.—Globe.

INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

At a PUBLIC MEETING held in the Egyptian Hall, Mansion-house, on Thursday, the 28th March, 1861, the Right Hon. WILLIAM CUBITT, M.P., the Lord Mayor, in the Chair.

The following Resolutions were unanimously carried:—
1. Moved by the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., Chancellor of the Exchequer, seconded by the Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P.:

"That this meeting, deeply sympathising with the distress arising from the devastating famine in the North-Western Provinces of India, and being desirous of aiding the noble exertions of the Relief Committees of Calcutta and Bombay in their endeavours to relieve their fellow-subjects in India, now reduced to a state of appalling destitution, feels called upon publicly to record its sense of this calamity, and to express its sympathy on the occasion."

2. Moved by the Right Hon. Sir Edward Ryan, seconded by Mr. Alderman Finnis:—

"That, in consideration of the extreme urgency of the case, and the necessity for adopting immediate measures for alleviating the misery now so unhappily existing, this meeting most anxiously entreats the benevolent contributions of its fellow-citizens and of the public at large, and recommends that subscription lists be opened, and that all the London and provincial bankers be requested to receive and remit such contributions to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, and that the sums so collected be remitted by each mail to India."

3. Moved by R. W. Crawford, Esq., M.P., seconded by W. Vansittart, Esq., M.P.:

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

THE BEARD, WHISKERS, AND MUSTACHIOS.

THIS ELEGANT AND FRAGRANT OIL

possesses wonderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving, and beautifying the human hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning gray, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the beard whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects; mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

3 ft. 6 in. " "	2	10	0
4 ft. " "	2	15	0
4 ft. 6 in. " "	3	0	0
5 ft. " "	3	5	0
5 ft. 6 in. " "	3	10	0

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

If the Bombay mail of the 12th March fail to bring us any news of much general interest, that deficiency is atoned for by the importance of the official documents that have thus come to hand. Foremost among these is the Resolution of the Governor-general in Council, relative to the supply of Indian cotton. The disruption of the American Union threatening to diminish for a time the supplies usually drawn from the Southern States, the Indian authorities have wisely turned their attention to the prevention of inconvenience and loss to the Lancashire millowners, and, indeed, to the entire population of these islands. Every facility is, therefore, to be afforded for the cheap and expeditious transport of cotton from the interior to the sea-coast, and much benefit is expected hereafter to arise from "the solution of questions connected with the tenure of land, and with the law regarding contracts for the delivery of agricultural produce, which are now under the consideration of Government." In the meantime, the agents of respectable firms at the Presidency towns are authorised to cash their bills at the Government treasuries in those parts of the country where no private banks at present exist, and every information and assistance are to be afforded by the local officers to agents of the mercantile community who may be sent into the cotton-growing districts. In addition to this, the cart and pack-bullock tracks are to be so far improved as to enable an ordinary load of cotton to be conveyed at the rate of two and a half or three miles an hour. Metalled roads and bridges will follow in due course, and thus the severance of the United States may prove one of the most potent instruments in the development of the vast natural resources of India, and the gradual regeneration of its inhabitants—we mean in a moral and social, and not in a religious sense.

A second official report gives some valuable information on the state of the opium crop, which is far from encouraging, except to holders of the drug. Owing to the protracted drought and strong westerly winds, the poppy flowers have sustained serious injury—the petals being blown away; and it is expected that the out-turn of the current season will be considerably below the average.

The warrants for the distribution of the Pegu and Delhi prize-moneys have at length appeared in the Calcutta Gazette—the former after nine years' delay—and rejoiced the heart of many almost despairing expectants. The amount of the one is about £35,000; that of the other about £360,000.

The final arrangements for the amalgamation of the two armies seem at last to be in a fair way of being brought to a conclusion. A special commission has been appointed to consider and report on that vital question, and it is understood that with them rests the completion of the long-canvassed scheme. Major-general Sir R. Birch, K.C.B., is the President, with Colonel G. Balfour, C.B., Madras Artillery, Colonel V. Eyre, C.B., Bengal Artillery, Major G. T. Chesney, Bengal Engineers, and Colonel D. M. Coghlan, Bombay Artillery, as coadjutors.

The court-martial on the Cairo rioters have terminated their lengthened proceedings, and incurred the severe displeasure of the Commander-in-Chief by consulting their own feelings rather than looking to the evidence. The charges and finding in each case will be found elsewhere, together with Sir Hugh Rose's severe but not unmerited reproof.

The campaign in Sikkim is already at an end. The Dewan has submitted unconditionally, the 3-pounder gun captured from Dr. Campbell's party has been sent in, and the Sik kimites are offering sucking pigs to their conquerors for two rupees each.

The famine is widening its area, and its ravages are becoming day by day more terrible to witness. Several letters containing frightful details of horrors are given in another part of this paper, and prove the urgent need for large and prompt assistance from this country. The Relief Fund now amounts to £25,180, including a munificent donation of £500 from her Majesty and an equally liberal contribution of £200 from the Prince Consort. The two cities of Calcutta and Bombay have between them subscribed and paid up as large an amount, and we may therefore regard the Home Fund as still in its infancy.

We regret to announce the death of Dr. Dealtry, Bishop of Madras, a prelate, "distinguished by apostolic zeal, charity, and singlemindedness." His successor, we presume, will be Archdeacon Pratt.

A serious accident is reported to have befallen Sir Robert Napier, the military member of the Calcutta Council. His horse appears to have rolled over on him, crushing him severely.

There is no longer any doubt as to the acceptance by the Duke of Newcastle of the Vice-royalty of India. His Grace was spoken of before Lord Canning went out, as the successor of Lord Dalhousie, and may consider himself as peculiarly fortunate in having escaped the responsibility attendant on the outbreak of the Sepoy mutiny. We trust our fellow-subjects in the East will duly appreciate the honour of being governed by a Duke.

What matter if he be utterly ignorant of the country and the people he undertakes to rule—is he not a Knight of the Garter? Lord Elgin might possibly have been a better choice, but then he is neither a Duke nor a K.G., and actually does know something of eastern questions and manners. As for Sir John Lawrence, he was not to be thought of for a moment, being not so much as a simple Baron, and having besides the insuperable disadvantage of being thoroughly acquainted with the duties of the post. His Grace of Newcastle is said to be an honourable, upright, well-meaning, industrious head clerk, a steady worker on routine principles, and generally amenable to reason, except when suffering from a sudden attack of petulance and obstinacy, which he is thought to mistake for dignity and indication of character. The Calcutta clique, as soon as they have learned to make allowance for these occasional outbursts of temper, will spare the Duke all unnecessary trouble, even to the dispensation of patronage; and are not likely to raise any obstacles to Simla becoming the ducal residence for the greater portion of the year.

CORN IN YOUNG EGYPT.—The Sindian gathers from the reports from the various collectorates in the province, that the rubbee crops are most luxuriant, and great hopes are entertained of the coming harvest. Dissatisfaction is, however, expressed in several districts in the rise in the price of grain; in Thurr and Parkur, badjree is sold at Rs. 08 per kurwar. Cutch is drawing off large quantities of grain, and the Roree people complain of the extent of the exportations to Jessulmeer. Copper coins are very scarce in Roree, half anna discount being charged on a rupee.

BENGAL.

INDIA THE FEEDER OF LANCASHIRE.

Four of the Cotton States of America have seceded from the Union. It is almost certain that the others have followed their example. Through what seems at first an unmixed evil good will be wrought for the world in the abolition of slavery, and for India in the transfer to her cultivators of the English cotton market. And accordingly important meetings have been held in the manufacturing districts of England, with a view to secure a permanent supply of cotton from India and Australia. Even should the secession of the Southern States not be completely effected, or should those who have already left return to the bosom of the Union, England must look to other markets than America. Not only has the confidence of Lancashire in the permanence of the supply been rudely shaken, not only is any system which raises cotton by slave labour liable to perish in an hour, but there is a worm at the root of Southern peace which will never be removed. The real ground of Mr. Lincoln's election as President, and of the disruption of the Union, is the determination of the North that no Slave States shall ever share the great unsettled territories of the Republic which lie to the west, and stretch along the Pacific. The South knows that already its system of cultivation is exhausting the soil, and that it must have room to grow. The North will hem it in till it abandons slavery. A time must come, Union or no Union, when the Slave States will cease to export even the present amount of cotton which they yield, while they will fail, as they have already failed, to keep pace with the growing wants of England. Lancashire turns to India. India must be ready to supply its immediate need, even as its cotton-producing capabilities are fitted to grow with the most gigantic demands.

What is the amount and the value of the trade whose very existence is now imperilled and which India can save? In Lancashire alone 400,000 men, women, boys and girls, are engaged in the cotton manufacture. A sum of £10,653,000 is annually paid to them in wages, at the average rate of 10s. 3½d. a week each. There are 28 millions of spindles and 300,000 looms employed, involving in that one county the sinking of 52 millions sterling of capital. There were 2,210 cotton factories in the United Kingdom in 1856, a number which has been since increased. The progress of this trade is still more wonderful than its present condition. The import of cotton in 1806 was 261,000 bags; in 1850 it was 2,200,000 bags. The declared real value of cotton manufactures exported has risen from £18,814,000 in 1844 to £33,421,000 in 1858. The extreme price of Sea Island raw cotton was, in 1818, 4s. per lb., and is now 9½d. per lb.; for Orleans it was 1s. 9d. and is now 4d. The weekly consumption by England of raw cotton is 48,136 bales, which in 1860 came from the following countries:—

East India	...	...	...	3,255
Brazil	...	...	...	2,065
Egypt and West Indies, &c.	...	...	...	1,862

In the century which has elapsed since the invention of the spinning jenny by James Hargreaves, the value of the manufacture has increased from the fifth of a million to thirty-five millions sterling. It is this gigantic trade which is at stake. It is to this and even a larger extent that India must supply the place of America. Australia and Africa will for the next half century be able to do little. In the next ten years India may do all.

For the export of cotton from India to Great Britain is but a part of what it sends to other countries. While in 1858 the export to England was 132,722,576 lbs., from Bombay also in 1859-60 it was 321,264,017 lbs., valued at about 5½ millions sterling. Bombay exports to China more largely than to Great Britain, because the Chinese give a higher price. And if this is the case from the chief cotton port of a country which has no good roads, and few irrigation canals, the self interest of whose natives has not been called into play, yet who grow enough of cotton for the wants of 200,000,000 of people besides what they export, can it be said that India will never take the place of the States to Lancashire? But more than this. It is a remarkable fact that new products have been developed, and a new and purely native trade has been created during the last ten years. Starting with 1835, the first year when the effects of the opening of the trade to India were felt, what do we find? Up to 1839 the average annual exports of cotton from India to England were 46 million lbs., in the next decade they rose to seventy-five millions, and in the last to 135 millions. Against 153,994 cwt. of Indian sugar imported into England in 1833, we have to set an average of 1,500,000 cwt. of recent years, the value in 1857 being nearly two millions sterling. Against 179,370 cwt. of rice sent to England so late as 1853, we sent 3,571,600 cwt. in 1858, of the value of above one and a half million sterling. For 2,000 bushels of linseed sent to England in 1838 we sent 3,333,000 in 1858, valued at £1,148,500. So with rape, hides, jute, and sheep's wool, a trade in all of which has sprung up recently. And not merely has there been a vast increase in quantity, but a remarkable improvement in quality. A few years ago rice could compete in the English market only under a "protecting" duty of 1½d. a pound. Now, without protection, it is fast supplanting the American. India, through England, supplies the Continent of Europe. Since the Crimean war India has been slowly pushing both Russia and America out of the European market.

In 1854 America exported	Rice.	Sugar.
to the value of ... Dols.	2,634,127 ...	690,744
In 1858 only ... ..	1,870,578 ...	575,786

while the export of molasses fell off in similar proportions. If since 1840 India has created a great trade in sugar, rice, linseed, hides, hemp, and wool; if by its better qualities and lower prices it is supplanting America; if high prices have led to an improvement both in cultivation and preparation in these six articles, what will not the same causes effect for cotton? And if the Slave States have nearly exhausted their present soils; if the Free North refuses to allow them to touch the unsettled virgin lands of the West, what may not India accomplish as her substitute, with wealth yet undeveloped by capital, with crops which cannot reach a market for want of roads, with soils whose only want is water to make them the most fertile in the world?

Facility of communication between the high table land of the interior and the coast is all that India wants to make it at once and for ever the feeder of Lancashire. With a strange pertinacity Manchester men have clung to plans for teaching the natives of India how to grow a staple which flourished and which they manufactured into exquisite fabrics in the days of Herodotus. Self-interest alone will teach them, as it has done in the case of rice and seeds. Manchester grows at the protective duty on cotton yarn, which has led to the establishment of so many mills in Bombay. But it will most effectually play into the hands of native manufacturers if it is to prate, as it has done for the last ten years, of teaching the native. What will that teaching, if it is received, amount to? Not merely to tilling the soil and cleaning the raw staple, but to manufacturing it into yarn. Do the Manchester men want that? In 1812 the cost per lb. of cotton yarn was 2s. 6d., in 1858 it was 11d. In India the cost was 3s. 7d., and it is so to this day. Improved manufacture alone has made the difference, and teaching will amount merely to a removal of the difference. All teaching attempts, whether by Government or private companies, have failed. Bombay has abandoned the former in disgust after squandering on them a million sterling. Societies and private firms, both in Calcutta and Bombay, still cling to the latter. It is a waste of power. Roads and railways, and in a lesser degree irrigation canals, are wanted; self-interest will accomplish the rest. Let all Manchester men, with capital, with tongue, with pen, by all means in their power, create these. A great system of roads connected with the G. I. P. Railway, which is opening up Berar, now wholly ceded to us, and with the Bombay and Baroda Railway, which will lay open Ahmedabad and Surat, is wanted. When that system is created, and these and minor railways are perfected, India will become the sole feeder of Lancashire, and Bombay the capital of Asia.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FAMINE RELIEF ASYLUMS AT DELHI.—Sir Robert Montgomery visited the Relief Asylums at Delhi on Friday, February 22nd, at mid-day, accompanied by the members of his staff, all the civil officers, and nearly all the members of the General Relief Committee. The Lieut.-governor proceeded to visit the asylums, to learn, with his own eyes, the confirmation of the reports he had received of the deep distress abroad. There are three great asylums at Delhi outside the city; one at the Khodseah Bagh, the original relief house, which admits only the most aged, infirm, and feeblest objects of compassion, as well as the latest arrivals, who are committed to the civil surgeon for treatment. In this there were some eight hundred. The second place is the great enclosure of the Eedgah, in which from six to eight thousand receive a meal a-day. The third refuge is outside the Delhi gate, where from three to four thousand assemble daily. This was visited first. Almost, if not entirely, middle-aged women with sickly young children formed the assemblage, of whom half were widows. The last pinches of want were not discernible here, as timely relief had been afforded, and had begun to tell. Brigadier Brown had formed the groups into regimental dispositions with great precision. No hurry, or noise, or confusion. All received their tickets, presented them at the door, obtained their meal, flour, and salt, and went on their way, poor things, into their lonely unfriendly homes to eke out their scanty day's meal, the next morning again to congregate at the same poor-house. If these people were not fed, in three days they would infallibly fall into the condition of the second class of sufferers, which we will hereafter describe. After minutely inquiring into all details connected with the first section, so excellently organised and superintended by the Brigadier, the Lieutenant-governor proceeded to the Eedgah. As he came to the gates a crowd of miserable objects yelled outside for admittance within the precincts. These had been excluded as being fit for work. The yell outside subsided as the gates were closed, and a melancholy scene presented itself. One-half the enormous area was completely covered by wasted files of human beings. In every direction, and in every posture of apathy, disease, despair, and prostration, were lying about the hollow-eyed wretched victims of the dreadful visitation, almost too far gone even to care to creep among the long rows of rags, squalor, and half nakedness. Sir Robert paced slowly down the lines in amid almost unbroken and painful silence, pausing now and then before some gaunt and wan figure to ask whence he came, to be answered only by mute gesture or exhausted effort at articulation. Out of more than six thousand not one could be pointed out as fit for a quarter of an hour's ordinary work. It was painful enough to reflect, after viewing the remnants of human beings whom charity had reached, upon the thousands who must have been and must be perishing in the highways and bye-ways daily. The distribution of chuppatties and dall to this gathering takes four hours a day. Lalla Mahesh Das aids largely out of his own purse in the support of these people, and Mr. O. Wood, assistant commissioner, aids zealously in the charitable but painful business of superintending the alleviation of so much human suffering. Each of the homeless beings, as they receive into their tattered shreds of garments their food, pass out through the wicket to lie about and nestle among the rocks and stones until the next morning—not a few perhaps to die in the interim. Each has a wooden ticket bound round his right wrist, which he is not to remove. The men's tickets are oblong, the women's square, and the children's hexagon. Thus no one can present a stolen ticket and get double food. Nor can he possess more than one, as it is tied to his wrist, and by no other way of presentation, and at no other than at the appointed time, will the bearer be entitled to food that day. They enter until 12 A.M., doors are then shut; they are mustered and inspected at 1 P.M., and food is distributed until all have received. Those fit for work are daily eliminated, and sent off to work with passes. His Honor expressed himself completely satisfied with the arrangements, and after desiring that the rule should be relaxed this once, on the occasion of his visit in favour of the vociferous crowd outside, passed on to the third and last central asylum. This is enlarged from the original poor house which has always been in existence at Delhi. The peculiarity of the last mentioned asylum at the Eedgah is, that hope is afforded that many will recover after a week or a fortnight, and pass out again fit to earn sustenance by daily labour. But at the Koodseah Bagh it is almost past hope. Here death steps in and relieves daily from eight to nine of their sufferings. The spectacle of human woe here exhibited surpassed all that can be written about it, and adequately justified the earnest appeals for aid, as well as the munificent responses to those appeals. With their skeleton shapes, just covered by skin, hanging in thick wrinkles, the famished are brought in, some to struggle into life, most to die from the mere effort at eating. The hideous and repulsive aspect of these cases is utterly lost in the unbounded sympathy felt, as well as the request that more cannot be done to arrest the scythe of the destroyer. All the arrangements are admirably conducted by the respected Assistant of the Treasury, Mr. De Gruythers. Many hundred imploring beings owe their lives to the humane and disinterested exertions of one who had to flee from the infuriated mob at the first mutiny, and for weeks suffered every privation and misery with his family in the jungles. Is there any sense of shame or gratitude among the Asiatics? Will the spectacle of returning good for evil in this and many other instances, on the part of the British community and Government, though only a few years after the city and district were doomed to retributive justice and confiscation for the greatest crimes, coming forward with sympathy and aid in the cause of common humanity, in order to rescue its inhabitants from misery and death, leave no lesson upon their minds?—Mofussilite.

THE FAMINE AT AGRA.—I have just come in from witnessing a feeding at Shahgunge. This is almost the first I have seen of the famine. I was agreeably disappointed in seeing the crops bordering the Grand Trunk Road on the way up on the whole appearing so well, the result of irrigation. Through the Mynpoorie and Agra districts, up to this place, the fields of grain appear more promising than I had expected to see them. But when we crossed the bridge, and came near the Fort, we were in the midst of thousands of half-starved looking creatures, carrying earth for two cowries a basket. About 18,000 are thus employed on Government works, the strong earning more than the weak and half-famished, who in the struggle for subsistence have little chance of life; and, to aggravate the matter, the depraved creatures who are appointed to oversee and pay them often keep back half the price, in a way that can seldom be detected, filling their pockets daily with the money given to feed the hungry. But this morning I shall not soon forget, although I was told the condition of the people was more favourable, fewer ill, and more dead. At Shahgunge, in a large enclosure, is a cooking-house to supply the aged, infirm, blind, &c., unable to work, many of whom have come from great distance to get food. For twenty years I have seen so much hypocrisy in professional beggars that I am ashamed to say my heart has been rather hard at the sight of rags, and the cry for pice. But there was no sham, it was real deep distress, men, women, and children crying for hunger, that had reduced them almost to shadows. They are fed about nine o'clock every morning, and at that feeding place alone upwards of 1,400 rupees are expended monthly. The greatest care is exercised in keeping out those who are able to work, who are fed in other places, or rather employed in public works and paid. A physician stands at the entrance examining each person that enters. Without this care the numbers would be doubled, even quadrupled. Nearly half who attempted to enter this morning were turned away, some of them, too, wretched, hungry creatures, who afterwards made a rush to get in, and in the attempt nearly killed two or three children. Professional beggars are not ashamed to come and seek in this way to be fed. The blind are allowed to pass in, but the doctor is obliged to look carefully at their eyes. I saw the doctor this morning turn away a woman who was feigning blindness. Others profess to be lame or cripples, and he had to examine their limbs. Women with children in their arms are usually admitted, and some women have been detected in borrowing children to bring in, as a ticket of relief. At first tickets made of small bits of tin, with a certain mark impressed on them, were issued to those who had been inspected and "passed" by the doctor. But these were soon abandoned. The strong took them from the weak, and others went and forged counterfeits. A daily inspection is therefore necessary before giving out food. After this morning's scrutiny 1,048 were fed. To each man four chuppatties, equal to half a seer, are given; to each woman three, to a boy two, and to a child one. Some reach the place, from long distances, in such a state that their stomachs are too weak to receive food. To such three tablespoonfuls of rum and water and dhal are first administered. Others are ill of dysentery and diarrhoea, and for these medicines are at hand, with a native doctor to administer them. The members of the committee take turns in superintending the distribution of food. Some poor creatures, coming in from great distances, reach the place just after the distribution, and have to wait twenty-four hours before they can be fed. Here, indeed, is suffering. —North West Gazette.

AN EYE-WITNESS ON THE FAMINE.—A correspondent who has lately travelled through the districts of Etawah, Agra, Allyghur, Boolundshuhur, Meerut, and Delhi, thus bears witness, from personal observation, that the general statements which have been published of the extent and severity of the suffering from famine are in no wise exaggerated. Absurd stories, such as that of the travellers who came upon some people roasting one of their children, have crept in as they will at such times when the morbid imagination of the weak people becomes duly excited, but I have seen no grave statement which paints in too sombre colours the suffering which exists. In Etawah, though the rain crops were short and prices in consequence rose rapidly, yet as there is fair prospect of a rubbee crop, especially in the eastern part of the Zillah, and as employment is plentifully afforded by the railway, there would be but little real distress but for the immigration from the other less favoured districts. In the Agra district the distress is increasingly felt as you proceed westward, but it is not till you reach the Allyghur district that the severity of the suffering becomes so painfully evident. In Allyghur they had during the whole season but two days' rain, and from thence to Delhi, through the Boolundshuhur and Meerut districts, you traverse miles of uncultivated plain, desert as far as the eye can reach, excepting an oasis some three or four fields deep round each village. Over the greater portion of this country the rubbee has not been sown. In some cases the sowing has been delayed, waiting for rain; in others, where water was obtainable, want of seed has prevented sowing, the seed grain having been consumed for food, and the bunnias refusing to advance with so slight a prospect of a remunerative crop. Most useful, because productive, relief has been afforded by the Meerut Committee in advancing grain for sowing. As over probably three-fourths of the area of those districts the rubbee crop may be regarded as an entire failure, the prospects for the future are dark indeed. Between Allyghur and Delhi the railway works give employment to about 15,000 people, and the works being commenced by Government will give employment to many more; but it is to be remembered that in these parts one of the effects of the suppression of the mutiny was to leave a very large number of widows and orphans, and further, that the able-bodied, the bread-winners, have emigrated from these districts in shoals for Gwalior and other native States. The result of these combined causes has been to leave a most undue proportion of the old and infirm, women and children. Public works bring no relief to such as these, and to keep them alive they must be fed by charity, exacting, of course, such labour as they are able to perform, which, prostrated as they now are by want of food, would be merely nominal. I would not write one word to check for a moment the flow of those liberal contributions by which the call for aid has been, and is being, met; but it is, I think, a matter for grave consideration whether the extent of present and probable distress is not beyond the means of private charity to do more than slightly alleviate. In one of your late numbers you calculate that the districts referred to, including Mozuffernuggur, Muttra and Saharunpore, a population of 1½ millions, will be dependent upon external aid for employment and food. I do not know how far your estimate of total population is reliable, but if it be so to any extent, the number at which you arrive as having been fed, is, I think, within the mark—and of that number there will be, not thousands, but hundreds of thousands, unable, from mere physical incapacity, to earn a living, even if employment be offered. What can our contributions, liberal though they may be, do where such numbers are concerned? Therefore it is that whilst I would advocate liberal and prompt donations to alleviate present misery, for the action of Government is necessarily slow, I would point out the inadequacy of private charity effectually to relieve such wide-spread misery, and would urge upon Government the necessity of taking further measures towards the fulfilment of that paramount duty of a State—the providing that none of its subjects may perish from absolute want.—Friend of India.

DARJEELING, Feb. 22.—The force under Lieut. Colonel Gawler was on the 17th on the Teesta river, eight miles below Bhemsong, in the Sikkim territory. He left Namchi on the 14th, and encamped below the summit of Mount Tendong with a company of the 6th, and the Sikhs, with some rockets. Next morning Captain Impey, with a company of the 6th, the artillery, forty Sikhs, the Sebundy Sappers and baggage were to move over from above Namchi to Temi, while the force with Colonel Gawler took the main ridge to the north before daylight, and came down this ridge to near Yangang or Neongang. All the Sikkim fighting men bolted across the Teesta and cut one of their bridges. Colonel Gawler went down to cut another at a point at which he did not intend to cross, with the view of depriving the enemy of the means of spying his movements or annoying him. He was met by a flag of truce, and a man named Lassa Khajee, who was known to be desirous of coming over, presented himself. He asked Colonel Gawler not to cut down the bridge, as there would be a fight if it were attempted, but on the colonel informing him that he was prepared for that, he said he would order his men to cut down the bridge, and on the request of Colonel Gawler gave orders to destroy some stockades there also. On this the guards of the Sikkim rajah walked out of the stockades—a large number of tall men with guns and pouches and some jinjalls. Lassa Khajee's unarmed men then pulled down the stockades and cut away the bridge. Diplomatising, bartering, and friendly overtures are now the order of the day. Large presents of oranges have been made to Mr. Eden, which proved most acceptable, as the sun is rather hot in the valley, with a cold wind, however, blowing from the north east. A dip in the Teesta creates unmis-takeable sensations, the water being melted snow. The enemy are most civil, offering to float over sucking pigs on bamboos for a consideration of two rupees. Neh is a stockaded position, I believe, in advance on the hither or right bank of the Teesta, but diplomacy will probably save us the toil and the trouble of taking it. The eyes, I might add the lungs and legs, of our troops have been pretty well opened to the nature of the country by their march over Tendong, Mount Ararat, as it is usually called. An officer here, who was in the Nepal war, says that Nepal is a bowling-green in comparison to Sikkim. The experience gained even in such a small raid as this will be of vast advantage to our locomotive and supply departments, on any future similar occasions that may arise. As for Darjeeling itself, it will never do to leave it in the defenceless state of bygone years. We require a wing, or at least three companies of Europeans, fifty Artillery and a few guns, a wing of Renny's Sikhs, and Murray's Sappers increased to 250 men. When the new cart road is finished, and easy communication established with the plains, there will be no difficulty in feeding such a force, say 1,000 men in all, and we of the station should feel comfortable and assured against aggression. Not only in a military point of view, but for the protection of our commercial interests, a respectable permanent force is called for up here. In the culture of tea alone no less than from 16 to 20 lakhs of rupees have been laid out, and thousands of acres of land have been rendered productive in themselves as well as in the payment of revenue to the Government. A great portion of this land has, I fancy, been bought out and out in fee simple, but that does not exonerate our rulers from affording us due protection against spoliation.—Feb. 25.—The war is over, and the gun that the sappers had to leave behind them on their retreat from Sikkim, I hear, came into camp on the 23rd, with about twenty of the missing sepoy of Captain Murray's corps; and further, I hear the Hon. Mr. Eden has made the rascals accept his terms. Talking about this to one of the oldest natives here, he says the Dewan is at the bottom of this peace, which will be broken before the rains are over. He further told me the people are aware we are not going to keep up any force here, and they, the bhootas, merely wanted time, and they would annoy the residents here more than ever.—Englishman.

FYZABAD, Feb. 19.—For the last ten or twelve days the grain market of Fyzabad has become a little cheaper than what it was a month before, i.e., the rate of Attah is now 20 seers a rupee, Dall 18 seers, and Gram 21 seers, whereas they were at 19, 17, and 20 seers per rupee, respectively. But this little cheapness in grain has been more than counterbalanced by an unexpected rise in the rate of exchange of copper pice. Two weeks before, Gorruckpore coppers sold here at 20 gundahs per rupee, but now they are selling at 18½ gundahs per ditto, being six pice less. The natives of this place do not use Company's coppers, except for the purpose of buying postage-stamps, &c.; and, as Gorruckpore pice are used by them for all other purposes, every man now suffers a loss of one rupee for every twelve rupees that he has to expend, which is really very hard, although the cunning shroffs may profit by it. The cause of this, I hear, is, that this being a propitious month for marriages and other ceremonies of the Hindoos, an unusual and heavy demand upon coppers has therefore made the market scarce; but, although such an excuse on the part of the avaricious Bunneahs may appear to be reasonable, yet six pice less per each rupee is too much, and this nefarious way of making money ought at once to be checked.

SIKKIM.—A correspondent of the Englishman gives the following intelligence respecting the Sikkim expedition, under date of the 23rd Feb. Since the 18th we have been encamped on the banks of the Teesta, where hostilities are for the present suspended, and where, I believe, some understanding will be made. Negotiations are at present going on, and I believe they were to have a week to consider, four days of which have elapsed. On Colonel Gawler's party first making their appearance here, some arrows were fired at them by Bootias, but the Lepchas were seen endeavouring to prevent them, in which they succeeded; thus showing that these people are at any rate friendly to us. Since then they allow our men to bathe in the river with impunity, coming down in large parties, and watching us from the opposite bank; they carry on conversation across, and have sent oranges, fowls, &c., into our camp. A great many of them carry rifles, and some are dressed in a species of uniform; one old fellow (who seems to take great interest in our movements, watching us for hours together), wears enormous red epaulets on a blue coat, I suppose the uniform of the body guard. The two cane bridges were still standing on our arrival here, guarded by a strong stockade, but on Colonel Gawler's telling them that he would fire, if the latter was not instantly destroyed, they complied with his order, and on his also hearing that Lasso, whose house was burnt down at Namchi, was there, he sent for him, and he also soon made his appearance, and is now in our camp. He, however, came alone, leaving his followers behind, and all attempts to obtain information from him were unavailing; so I am afraid the tale of his being carried away forcibly and his house being burnt by the Bootias is false, and that in reality he is our enemy, and most likely destroyed his house, thinking it would be useful to us. The 6th Regiment have had really some hard marching, both fatiguing and harassing, making dours on all sides, without the enemy making a stand, which is trying to the temper of the men. Everybody and everything seems to be on the other side of the river; the villages are all deserted, the cattle driven away, and nothing left but the standing crops. Two companies of the 6th are at Temi, about seven miles from this, situated on the spur of Tendong, the view from which is most magnificent, a splendid glimpse of the snowy range and River Teesta winding for miles through the lovely valleys, the hills on either side being dotted with picturesque villages. The climate also is delightful, though rather chilly before day-break and after sun-set. The thermometer to-day at twelve o'clock, noon, was 61 deg., and at seven o'clock p.m. 41 deg. There is not a single case of sickness in camp. As it is generally believed that we shall march to the capital, Tumlong, whether they comply with our wishes or not, we are all anxiety for a move. P.S.—5 p.m.—I have just time to tell you, before the dawn goes, that the Bootias have brought in the three-pounder gun lost by Dr. Campbell's party in November, and also the prisoners taken by them. We all expect that the affair will be settled to-morrow.

DELHI, Feb. 22.—The Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab arrived yesterday; a salute of fifteen guns was fired from the Vellinghur battery at noon to announce the event. His honour has much to do and much to see; the foundation stone of the Delhi Institute has to be laid, and there is a great deal requiring the attention of a man like Sir Robert Montgomery, whose keen eye may detect some faults that all the ingenuity of native officials and favourites, backed by their European superiors, will not be able to conceal. The weather is becoming warmer daily, and only the mornings and evenings are pleasantly cool. There are, I am sorry to say, no signs of rain. The meeting of the inhabitants on Wednesday morning for the purpose of organising a public dispensary resulted in the formation of a joint-stock company for the sale of drugs, chemicals, soda water and lemonade; of one hundred shares, at Rs. 50 per share, nearly all of which were taken up within a few hours. During the interim, and pending the arrival of the stock from England, the public will obtain their physic from the Government store as usual, by paying for the same. A temporary reading-room belonging to the Delhi Institute has been opened out in the public garden close to the spot on which the new building is to be erected.

KISHNAGHUR, Feb. 25.—Ever since Mr. Lushington passed through this district, the ryots have been much worse. The cause no one can divine. There is one observation which the authorities have used to the ryots, imprudent in itself, and unjust in its consequence, namely, "you must pay your rents, you can sow indigo or not, as you like." This, of course, the ryots take to mean, don't sow indigo at all; such throughout has been the construction put by them upon it. Now, the language either of a judge or a justice of the peace in England would have been, "you must pay your rents, and if you are indebted on indigo account, you ought either to pay up the balance, or work it off in indigo." The ryots, after receiving advances the past year did not grow indigo, and I feel satisfied that Mr. Grant himself must admit that to that extent at least the ryots are indebted to the planter. Mr. Larmour reflects severely upon Mr. Herschel. That Mr. Herschel joined this district with his mind deeply prejudiced against the planters, he, himself will, I think, admit, and the course he in consequence pursued, and the bias he displayed was immediately taken advantage of by the ryots, which resulted in almost ruin to many of the planters, but I am disposed to consider that his views are much changed, and his late conduct does not bear out Mr. Larmour's censure. In truth, in the capacity of collector, he has been working early and late to get the planters their rents. It is true it has not done much good, but really it is no fault of his, further than that he raised the storm and now cannot allay it. The district is in a much worse state than ever, and my servants told me this morning that the feelings of the ryots were as bad, if not worse, than they were at any time last year. One thing is certain; nothing but an old experienced and determined magistrate will ever quiet this district.—Englishman.

THANESUR, Feb. 22.—We were visited to-day by Mr. Macleod, Financial Commissioner of the Punjab, and the Rev. Mr. Sloggett, Secretary of the Famine Committee at Lahore. They inspected our poor-house and found it in a flourishing condition, and were highly pleased, and promised to pay Rs. 1,000 a-month from the relief fund for the maintenance of this kherat khana. After that they examined the boys of our school, and were very well satisfied with the head master, moulvees, and the pundit. They quitted us the same day after a few hours' rest. The atmosphere is cool enough to be pleasant, however sometimes the winter shows its fangs as if to bite. Clouds still tantalise us now and then. The market is still unfavourable, although we hear that the price of grain has fallen in the adjacent districts.

LAHORE, Feb. 22.—While I am writing, the guns of the citadel are thundering forth a salute, as Sir Robert Montgomery leaves the capital for the purpose of visiting the eastern districts of the province, and those portions of the Punjab which it has pleased the Almighty, in His inscrutable wisdom, to afflict with famine and drought. The contributions to the fund, which we Punjabees have formed for the relief of the unfortunate people dwelling in these parts, are coming in with gratifying promptitude, speaking eloquently, if our native neighbours would but deign to hearken to it, of the charity and lovingkindness that spring from a creed of whose purity and loveliness they have but a faint conception. But although the assistance up to this date rendered by the community has been liberal and speedy, it must be obvious to all who are acquainted with the dreadful circumstances of the case that in order to produce any appreciable impression on the famine-stricken masses, the relief extended to those whose lines have fallen in pleasant places must be ampler and more sovereign. Would it were possible to furnish you with a sketch, approaching the truth in even some small measure, of the really deplorable and appalling condition of these houseless and breadless unfortunates, but the severity of the affliction is so terrible and the extent of country desolated so vast, that language fails to convey aught but a very vague and indifferent idea of the horrible agonies to which hundreds of our fellow-creatures are daily falling victims. It is only by placing together, side by side, the private communications of friends who are on the spot or in the neighbourhoods that one can form any conception of the acuteness of suffering and extent of misery daily witnessed and experienced in those parts. From one of several now before me, I learn that children are being sold by their starving parents at the rate of two annas a-head; the purchasers, I am told, contemplate "employing them when grown up, as domestic servants, educating them in the Christian religion, or having them instructed in some useful branch of art, so that when sent out into the world again they may be able to earn their bread by honest labour." But why multiply extracts? Is it not sufficient to know that mothers have eaten their offspring, that wives have satisfied the raging demands of hunger with the flesh torn from the bodies of their dead husbands, and that all the ties of life are torn up by the roots and scattered to the winds. It is a question whether, in the ungovernable madness of their appetite, they have paused till life was really extinct in those whom they have devoured. Narratives of individual privations and sufferings are carefully excluded from the official reports; a piece of folly, for which the authorities and the secretary to the Relief Fund cannot be too severely condemned. Doubtless there are hundreds of Europeans in India whose benevolence and humanity are deeply stirred by the bare fact that masses of their fellow-mortals are without a morsel and a roof; but there are thousands also, who, without being deficient in tender-heartedness or commiseration, pour forth their contributions with greater alacrity and liberality when those feelings have been worked upon by individual instances, which reveal the cruel intensity of the distress now prevalent. General assertions and statements carry with them a vague indefiniteness, which in too many instances pass by without scarcely touching the heart, but a single well-authenticated instance (and unfortunately in the present case there are several such) of human beings satisfying the invincible cravings of hunger by eating their own offspring, stirs the Christian breast effectually. The advantages are obvious. It is not too late yet to adopt this course. The statements put forth by the correspondents of public journals in Upper India, are doubtless sufficiently thrilling to shake the soul of a stoic, but unfortunately they do not bear with them the weight of an official information; and as, moreover, the experience we had during the mutinies has already shown that these writers do not hesitate to give a colouring to their assertions, which a strict regard for veracity would reject and condemn, the public have come to regard with doubt and misgivings that which, for anything we know to the contrary, is the truth pur et simple. All this would be obviated by the issue of instructions to commissioners and district officers to furnish the authorities, with a view to publication in the newspapers, with details of such instances of individual distress, and the issues to which it had led, as come to their knowledge. Whilst thus shutting out the over-colored and exaggerated narratives of mendacious scribblers, the resources of the several funds would be materially augmented, and the numbers rescued from a terrible and lingering death proportionately increased. The native aristocracy of the Punjab are all busy in anxious preparation for the arrival of the Maha Rajah Duleep Sing, who is at present at Calcutta. That many associations of a varied character will be awakened by the presence of this young man in the political capital of this province, is of course beyond question. His supposed relationship to the late Runjeet the Magnificent, the change in his religious belief, his alliance by marriage with an English family, his long residence in England, and the marvellous experiences acquired thereby, will all have a share in rousing curiosity, and rolling back the gorgeous past to contrast it with the insignificant present. But that the pulse of the Sikh people will throb the faster, or their imaginations play with fantastic expectations of recovering their ancient supremacy in the land of the five rivers, is altogether absurd. The bare fact of the young Prince being a beef-eating Christian is sufficient to cut away from him all hopes, if there be any, which the stalwart sons of ancient Pentipotamia may entertain of resuscitated independence under his leadership and guidance. I do not mean to assert positively, that the numerous Sikh soldiers now in our service do not cast a "longing, lingering look" on times that are no more, or that they despair of the advent of that day, when the old familiar flag will once more flaunt the breeze to the equally familiar shout of "Wah Goorejee kee Futteh," but that they expect to accomplish these desirable and glorious ends under the auspices of M. R. Duleep Sing is so tangibly ridiculous, that it is a wonder how the most superficial thinkers can entertain the idea. All such brilliant aspirations are swallowed up in the horror caused by a recollection of the abominations to which this young sprig of royalty does most incline.—Bombay Times.

BAREILLY, Feb. 24.—The sub-committee of the Relief Fund have set to work; and labouring parties are to be seen both in the civil station and in cantonments, filling up gaps, removing rubbish, or clearing away dilapidated buildings, for some time an eyesore to the public. The commissioner has returned from his tour, and will doubtless submit his report of the state of his division, as personally witnessed by him. The rich plains of Rohilkund never presented such a barren aspect as at present, and though distress is felt more severely at Delhi and Meerut, the scorched fields in contrast in the mind's eye with their wonted luxuriance, gave Rohilkund as lamentable an appearance as that of the most distressed district.

BURRISAL, Feb. 22.—I trust you will agree with me that the facts I am about to mention deserve the utmost publicity, that those persons through whose culpable negligence they occurred, and whom, I fear, no present law can touch, may at any rate be exposed to the comments of the press. Yesterday three boats arrived here from Calcutta, laden with coolies, on their way to Cachar to be employed by the Silchar Tea Company. In these three boats, of less than three hundred maunds each, upwards of a hundred coolies were crowded together when they started. They had been ten days on the way from Calcutta. On the sixth day cholera broke out among them; the chuprassie in charge had no medicines of any kind; the result was, ten died before their arrival here, one died last night, and two more in the last stages are expected to die hourly. The magistrate had them all taken out of the boats, and sent immediately to the Charity Hospital, but for which timely measure the rate of mortality must have been fearfully increased. They naturally refuse to proceed further on board these boats, which they consider to be plague-stricken. I do not, of course, imagine that the European agents of the company for which these coolies were procured were aware of the miserable manner in which the poor wretches were crowded together, but they are morally responsible for the carelessness which could admit of its taking place, and for the deaths which were its inevitable consequence. It is not merely on grounds of humanity that this bad business is to be regretted, but also for the sake of the planters generally. The great want in Cachar is labour, to supply which, immigrants from Burdwan and other populous districts are being slowly imported. The system is quite in its infancy as yet, and to carry it on in this manner seems most suicidal; for what must the effect be on the minds of the relations of these poor wretches when they hear the story—bad enough in itself—told with native exaggerations? Anything rather than to induce them to help to plant tea in Cachar.—Englishman.

TROOPS FOR NEW ZEALAND.—The ship Daniel Rankin, bound for New Zealand with a detachment of H.M.'s 70th Regiment, left Calcutta on the 24th February in tow of a steamer.

A CHARGE OF FORGERY has been brought against Baboo Joykissen Mookerjee, in the Magistrate's Court of Serampore, and he was on the 23rd February fully committed for trial. The magistrate admitted him to bail for Rs. 50,000; and for one of his umlah, named Petumber Bose, who is included in the charge, bail has been accepted amounting to Rs. 20,000. The charge is for forging and uttering an Izara pottah, in order to defraud the real Izardar.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF left Umballah for the Presidency on the evening of the 28th of February, and was expected to reach Calcutta about the 8th of March. He will be accompanied or immediately followed by several of the Head Quarters officials, including the Adjutant-General of the army, the Military Secretary, aides-de-camp, &c. His Excellency intends remaining at the Presidency for two months, but his stay will much depend upon the working of the new Indian Amalgamation Commission, with reference to whose labours, as is already known, the Commander-in-Chief has been summoned to Calcutta. It is to be hoped that His Excellency's decision of character, impartiality, and strong sense of justice, will expedite and simplify the labours of the commission, and tend to rid the public and the army of this amalgamation bore.

BUNDELKUND, Feb. 20.—A change has come over the weather lately, for instead of the heat that set in some little time back, we have been enjoying, if I may so call it, a fine cold season. The mornings are almost unpleasantly cold: 40 deg. at seven A.M. was the most at which the thermometer stood yesterday. The detachments of the 48th (two companies at Humeerpore and four at Orai) are to move on to Roy Bareilly, the regiment to Setapore. These detachments have been away from head-quarters for two years, and are thus again to be separated from the corps to which they belong. The detachment of the Shahjehanpore levy at Mahoba is also called in to Orai, which station it is believed will be reinforced by a native cavalry regiment. The barracks at Humeerpore and Orai are now useless, and simply represent so much money thrown away, though after all that can hardly be said, as they have been occupied for two years, and the troops could not have done without them; still the very large sum that they cost is an item in military expenditure which adds no small sum to the already overburdened estimates; and though, as a temporary measure, native troops may be placed in these buildings, yet as no large force of the latter can ever be at either one place or the other, a greater portion must always remain unoccupied. Clouds are now covering the sun, so we may have some rain. The crops seem getting on well, and apparently there is no want of water.

SIR R. NAPIER.—The Englishman states that Major-general Sir Robert Napier met with a severe accident when out riding on the evening of the 1st of March, from his horse falling and rolling over with him. At the time Sir Robert appeared to be severely hurt, and was removed to the house of a friend, where he is under medical care. Government would feel the deprivation of his services at the present moment should he be disqualified for returning to his important duties for any length of time; and any serious mishap to an officer so universally respected as Sir Robert Napier would be regretted by every officer and soldier who has ever served with him.

MAHARAJA JUNG BAHADOOR has returned to the Nepal territory. The deep streams of the Raptée and Mahan have been fixed as the boundaries of the two territories. Sirdar Seede Singh has been appointed boundary Commissioner on the part of the Goorkha Government, for the demarcation of the new line bordering on the Shahjehanpore district. Maharaja Jung Bahadoor has written to the Governor-general that he does not intend crossing into the British territories. Some inquiries having been made also as to presents and nuzzers made by the Raja of Bhootan to the Maharaja, the latter replied that he had received some elephants from the former, and that it was his intention to return some articles which would be equally valued by the chief of Bhootan.

HER MAJESTY'S GUNBOAT For is to be permanently stationed at Mooltan, for the survey of the Punjab rivers.

DR. CHEVERS is appointed to officiate for Dr. Mouat during his absence on sick leave, an appointment which should be satisfactory both to the public and the profession.

THE RAJAH OF PUTIALA has determined to excavate a canal from the Sutlej to Putiala, and has obtained the sanction of Government necessary for the purpose.

MAJOR GENERAL C. A. WINDHAM, of Crimean celebrity, and at present commanding the Lahore division, is to succeed Major-general Sir J. Hearsey in command of the Presidency division, on the departure of the latter officer for Europe. General Windham's appointment to the command of the Presidency division has, we believe, been made especially with reference to his aptitude for the command of European soldiers, and his acquaintance with their organisation, habits, and discipline; and we believe that in future the Presidency command will be conferred solely upon general officers of her Majesty's army. This appears to us to be an arrangement of aptitude, not of prejudice or injustice, at least for the present; or indeed until this tedious amalgamation shall have for some time really fused the two armies, and rendered equal the opportunities of their officers for thoroughly understanding and commanding European troops.

AMALGAMATION COMMISSION.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council is pleased to appoint a special commission to consider and report on the arrangements necessary for carrying out the amalgamation of the Indian Army with her Majesty's British forces, in accordance with Royal Warrant and with the orders of her Majesty's Government. The commission will consist of a president, members, and secretary, and will be under the direction of the military member of council. The following officers are appointed to the commission:—President, Major-General Sir R. Birch, K.C.B., Bengal Infantry. Members, Colonel G. Balfour, C.B., Madras Artillery; Colonel V. Eyre, C.B., Bengal Artillery; Major G. T. Chensey, Bengal Engineers. A member from the Bombay Presidency will be nominated hereafter. Secretary (to be nominated hereafter.) Brigadier Coghlan, who proceeded to Calcutta on the 1st March by the P. and O. steamer Behar, is the member for Bombay.

DEATH OF MR. LACKERSTEEN.—We (Englishman) regret to announce the death of Mr. William Lackersteene, on Friday, the 22nd Feb., at Akyab, where he had gone for the benefit of his health. Although suffering for some time from great debility, it was hoped that change of air and relaxation from business would fully restore him. Few men were more deservedly popular. Kind in disposition, generous almost to a fault, courteous to all with whom he was brought in contact, Mr. Lackersteene's loss will be deeply felt, not alone by his family and friends, but by very many of a humbler class, who will now miss his very ready aid and sympathy. Mr. Lackersteene was a member of the well-known family of that name, to whose princely support the late Archbishop Carew was mainly indebted for the erection of many of the Catholic institutions of Calcutta, and which has been acknowledged by the Pope conferring honours upon them.

MADRAS.

THE LATE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—We regret to have to announce the death of Dr. Dealtry, the Bishop of Madras, which occurred in that city a few minutes after midnight of the 4th of March. This bereavement, not only of the Episcopal but of the Catholic Church of Christ in the proper sense of the term, will be deeply felt, not only in this country but in Europe, where the departed was well-known, cordially esteemed, and greatly beloved. As a chaplain on the Bengal establishment, which he joined about thirty-two years ago, he was a most efficient minister, and a worthy successor of the Buchanans, and Martyns, and Thomasons, and Browns, and Corries, who in their day and generation did so much for the revival and maintenance of Christianity among the British in India, and for the countenance of the missionary enterprise when it did not occupy that high place in the public regard to which of late years it has happily attained. In the bishopric of Calcutta he was long the friend, adviser, and companion of Dr. Daniel Wilson, who needed his sound judgment and experience to assist his ardent zeal. His exaltation to the see of Madras was the consequence of the warm regard entertained for him by Bishop Wilson; and the result was all that could be expected or desired. In the Southern Presidency, Dr. Dealtry was not only a moderating but an impulsive agency in all that is good. He was not only a considerable restraint on individual anti-protestant tendencies, but an acknowledged power in all evangelistic enterprises, whether conducted within or without the Church of England. His influence was used with humility and modesty, but it was not the less effective on this account. It originated mainly in his devoted piety and sound judgment; and it continued and expanded, without the accessories either of high talent or profound learning. It extended to all the classes of the Christian community, European and native, official and non-official, in whose estimation he was constantly rising till the day of his death. It was the more genuine and hallowed that it was associated with the most perfect catholicity, recognising the worth, and seeking the co-operation, of all classes of evangelical Christians, the leading members of which, near him and at a distance, were his chosen friends. His two visits to Bombay, particularly the first, and his intercommunion with the "Kirk" as well as with the "Church," are well remembered by numbers in the midst of us. They were characterised by the fraternal and paternal feelings, and the kind deportment which gained him so many friends in all parts of India, and which will long render his memory fragrant throughout our Indian empire. A suitable memoir of Bishop Dealtry is certainly a desideratum. It would doubtless throw much light on the spread of Christianity, not only in the north but in the south of India. Archdeacon Pratt, we trust, will be his successor, and will strenuously seek to follow in his footsteps.—Bombay Times.

COLONEL A. ROWLAND, commandant of the regiment of artillery, is about to proceed to England, the tenure of his command having expired. Colonel Rowland was one of the best officers of this arm of the service, and many will regret his leaving India.

CAPTAIN H. F. BOLTON, 12th Bombay N. I., has been appointed to officiate as an assistant commissioner, Nagpore, third class, on the full salary of that grade.

SIR PATRICK GRANT, commander-in-chief of the Madras army, has resigned his command and taken his departure for Europe, after a service in India of forty years. Few commanders-in-chief have been more generally liked than Sir Patrick, and in 1857 he only just missed obtaining a peerage. When summoned to Calcutta by the breaking out of the mutiny, he was only prevented by the utter want of transport and troops from proceeding at once to Delhi. The services he rendered to his successor Lord Clyde, by stopping at Calcutta, were probably greater than if he had gone on to Delhi, but the chance of a peerage was gone. His farewell order will be found in another column.

MALABAR COAST, Feb. 7.—There is nothing going on in this part of the world. Deliver! deliver! is resounding throughout the place, and returns of income are now quickly being filled up. The magistrates are vigorously applying themselves to this important duty, and the natives now passively submit to the calls of the assessors, and are now fast delivering up their returns. The weather is very fine, but extremely close, so much so that one can hardly venture out in the sun. One company of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, under the command of Captain J. S. Verschoye, embarked on board the steamer Bombay on the 23rd of Jan., for Calicut, and from thence they marched to Malleapooram for the relief of the company stationed there under the command of Captain C. Perrin. The steamer on her return brought over to Cannanore the company stationed at Calicut under the command of Captain R. H. Paget. The Bombay steamer is expected at Cannanore this month, on the 13th, when she takes one company of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, under the command of Captain E. J. Storey, for duty at Calicut, and on her return trip from Cochin to Bombay will bring over the relieved detachment from Malleapooram, now at Calicut, under the command of Captain C. Perrin, and in medical charge of Assistant-surgeon J. McCreedy, M.D., of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, who has been relieved from the medical duties at Malleapooram by Assistant-surgeon G. A. Moorhead, of the same corps. The transport Euphemus, from Madras, with a detail of twenty men, four women and children of the C company, 1st battalion artillery, and twenty-one women and children of H.M.'s 66th Regiment, arrived at Cannanore on Saturday last. The C company 1st battalion artillery, with horse battery attached, are now on their way from Bellary, and expected at Cannanore on or about the 15. On the arrival of the European artillery, the native artillery now at Cannanore will be removed to Mangalore. I regret to inform you that two officers of the 18th regiment N.I. (Lieutenants A. Chrystie and J. Hulleston) are under arrest, and about to be tried before a general court-martial, of which Lieutenant-colonel G. Maxwell is to be president, and Brevet major J. Keating, of the 3rd regiment P.L.I., acting deputy judge advocate, will conduct the proceedings. Lieutenant G. V. Law, 14th regiment N.I., assistant civil engineer North Canara, and Captain J. London, assistant commissary general, from Hoonsoor, proceed to Europe via Bombay on sick leave for fifteen months.—Englishman.

OPENING OF THE N.W. RAILWAY.—The public will be well pleased to hear that on Feb. 29 the first section of the North-West line, that to Cuddapah and Bellary, was to be opened for general traffic and passengers. The new line branches off to the north from the lately-built station of Arconum, about forty-three miles from the Royapooram terminus. The opening of this station at the point of junction will be followed by the abandonment of the former station of Company-pett, close to which it is situated. The North-West branch is now finished as far as Naggerly, distant about seventeen miles from the junction, and nearly sixty from Madras. The station-house and buildings at Naggerly are in an advanced state of progress; while those at Trittany, about half way between Arconum and the former place, are already completed and ready for the use of the public.

THE NO. 1 BATT. 13TH BRIG. ROYAL ARTILLERY are under orders to quit India for England; it consists of two captains, two lieutenants, one assistant-surgeon, two staff sergeants, eight sergeants, two trumpeters, one hundred and fifty-nine rank and file, twenty-one women, and twenty-three children. Seven women and six children of No. 3 Batt. 13th Brig. Royal Artillery will also accompany them.

MAJOR W. W. ANDERSON, of the Bombay Cavalry, has been appointed assistant to the Resident at Baroda.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT. A. N. BRUCE, of the 4th Bombay Rifles, has been appointed to officiate as an Assistant to the Agent Governor-general for the States of Rajpootana, with effect from the 18th December last.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK OF INDIA has declared a dividend of 20 Rs. per share, free of Income-tax, being at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ending the 31st December last.

IMPORTS (Bombay, March 12).—Cotton Piece Goods.—A better enquiry existed for Piece Goods during the early part of the period under report, but latterly holders gave way and forced off their stocks at lower rates. Grey Shirtings have been in good request, and the last sales of most qualities show a decline of prices. Grey Longcloths are scarce and fetch full prices. Grey T-cloths maintain former rates. Grey Printers neglected. Grey Madapollams without improvement. Grey Domestic of heavier makes are in request, while the narrower widths remain unasked for. Grey Jaconets of better make are in request; other qualities are only to be placed at the most unremunerative figures. Grey Mulls are unsaleable except at a concession. Bleached Goods are dull in the same position as last advised, and no noticeable change has taken place. Coloured Goods are almost neglected. Turkey Red Goods are dull. Yarns.—The improvement of the Twist market which was noticed in our last report, lasted only a short time, and since a few days the demand has subsided, and prices in most counts have receded. The market closes quiet. Orange and Green Yarns also show a decline in value, and are less saleable; Turkey Red Yarn in small request at former figures. Metals.—The demand for Copper is languid at former prices, and the market closes with a downward tendency. There is very little doing in Iron, and British and Swedish Bars and Nail Rod are quoted at lower figures. Steel is in good demand at former rates. Spelter is in heavy stock, and shows no change in value. Quicksilver is dull. EXPORTS (Bombay, March 12).—The export market is quiet, and prices have a downward tendency, owing to the less favourable advices from home.

The Cairo Courts-Martial.

Adj.-Gen's. Office, Simla, Feb. 20, 1861.—At a General Court-martial, assembled in Fort William on the 5th day of December, 1860, Lieut. William Clephane Liondin Brown, of H.M.'s Bengal regiment of artillery, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, on the 4th of April, 1860, at Cairo, wilfully mocked and insulted certain dervishes and other worshippers engaged in religious worship in the Great Mosque of the town during a Mahomedan festival; and in having thereby excited and outraged the feelings of the worshippers in the Mosque and the Mahomedans assembled outside.

Finding.—The Court find the prisoner, Lieut. W. C. L. Brown, of H.M.'s Bengal regt. of art., guilty of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having mocked certain dervishes engaged in religious worship in the Great Mosque at Cairo, on the occasion stated in the charge; but they acquit him of the rest of the charge.

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded.

HENRY PALMER, Col., Regt. of Lucknow, President of the Court.

Fort William, Calcutta, Dec. 12, 1860.

Revised Finding.—The Court are of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. W. C. L. Brown, of H.M.'s Bengal regt. of art., is guilty of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having wilfully mocked certain dervishes engaged in religious worship in the Great Mosque at Cairo, on the occasion stated in the charge; but they acquit him of the rest of the charge.

The Court are also of opinion that the act of mockery was insulting; but that it was done thoughtlessly and inconsiderately, and without the intention to insult. The Court therefore respectfully adhere to their former sentence.

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded.

Fort William, 17th January, 1861.

"Confirmed, but not approved."

HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Kurnaul, Feb. 8, 1861.

REMARKS BY H.E. THE C. IN C.

The C. in C. returned the proceedings to the Court for revision of their finding and sentence, with the following remarks:—

1. The C. in C. is at a loss to comprehend the finding of the Court. It is not logical, and it is in direct opposition to the evidence, of which the Court have acknowledged the validity.

2. The Court have found the prisoner guilty of having mocked certain dervishes while engaged in their worship, and of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman in doing so.

3. Although the evidence shows that this act was repeated and frequent, the Court acquit the prisoner of having mocked the dervishes "wilfully."

4. Consequently, the Court must be of opinion that the prisoner did so mock "involuntarily or unintentionally."

5. But H.E. cannot think that the Court intends to say that the prisoner acted "involuntarily" or "unintentionally," because in that case they would not have sentenced the prisoner to be "severely reprimanded" for an act beyond his will or control, and moreover such an opinion would be at direct variance with the evidence for the prosecution.

6. The C. in C. therefore returns the proceedings for revision. He is convinced that the prisoner did not mock the Mahomedan worshippers at their prayers, either "unintentionally" or "involuntarily."

7. Nothing can be more insulting or more ungenerous than a mockery of prayers in a place of religious worship by professors of another belief.

8. The more Christians differ from the tenets and forms of Islamism, or of another sect, the more carefully should they abstain from derision of them—and in countries where there are great varieties of religious beliefs, mockery of the forms of prayers of any one of them is not only an outrage on the feelings of a sect, but a sure means of engendering the worst feelings between the sects themselves.

9. So serious an offence does the new Indian Penal Code consider the mockery of any form of religion, that it punishes it with imprisonment to the extent of one year, or fine, or both fine and imprisonment.

10. The C. in C. requests the Court to reconsider a finding which holds out the baneful principle, confirmed by the fiat of a Court-martial, to the army that one of its members is to receive no other punishment than a mere reprimand for having made a mockery of the worship of religious men in their house of prayer whilst celebrating one of their most solemn fasts.

The Court-martial, on the revision of their finding and sentence, adopted the C. in C.'s opinion that the act of mockery was wilful and insulting; but the Court recorded their opinion, at the same time, that the act was done thoughtlessly and inconsiderately, and without the intention to insult.

This finding is not justice. It is as inconsistent with its rules as if a Court were to decide that a man who came into a Christian place of worship and before a crowded congregation placed himself in front of the minister and wilfully and repeatedly mocked his action whilst in prayer, did so inconsiderately and without intent to insult. Such findings as this lower the influence of Courts-martial, encourage rather than check misconduct, and weaken the hands of those to whom is entrusted the maintenance of the discipline and credit of the army.

If such a principle of reasoning as that followed by the Court were to be adopted, the result would be irresponsibility for crime, and a departure from the axiom that a man intends what is the natural and obvious consequences of his actions.

On the Court rests the responsibility of having decreed that a British officer and educated gentleman may deliberately and wilfully mock in public, and insult the feelings of a whole community—the keenest because their religious feelings—and that he is to be excused on the plea of thoughtlessness; that plea, moreover, being unsustained by a particle of evidence.

The Court have taken no notice of the evidence that the act of mockery produced an immediate and painful feeling, and that the Pasha of Egypt thereupon ordered the foreign visitors to leave the Mosque.

The general officer commanding the Presidency division will, in the presence of his staff and the officers of the garrison, read out the remarks of the C. in C., and then severely reprimand Lieut. Brown for having been guilty of conduct unworthy of an officer and gentleman.

At a general Court-martial re-assembled in Fort William on Friday, the 14th day of December, 1860, Capt. William Frederick Cox, of H.M.'s Bengal regiment of Artillery, was arraigned on the following charges:—

Charges.—1st. With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, on the 4th of April, 1860, at Cairo, when in a state of intoxication, appeared publicly in the streets of the town, and at the door of the Great Mosque and in the vicinity thereof, during a great religious Mahomedan festival, and in having on that occasion conducted himself in a noisy, violent, and riotous manner, tending to excite and annoy the worshippers in and about the Mosque; and other Mahomedans in the streets; and in having thereby excited and annoyed such worshippers and Mahomedans; and in having wilfully broken lamps in the streets.

2nd. With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at the time and place set forth in the first charge, encouraged by his presence and countenance several officers, junior to himself in rank, to make a riotous disturbance in the town of Cairo and in the vicinity of the Great Mosque, during a great religious Mahomedan festival, by breaking lamps, and in other ways, without having endeavoured, by using his authority as their superior officer, or otherwise, to prevent such riotous conduct and disturbance.

3rd. For scandalous behaviour, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, in reply to an inquiry addressed by the Adjutant general of the army to him, as the senior of several officers who had been engaged in a riot at Cairo, on the occasion of a religious festival there, in a letter dated the 31st May, 1860, falsely and designedly denied all knowledge of any outrage having been committed at Cairo, by any of his fellow passengers; whereas, in fact, he well knew that several of his fellow passengers who went to the Mosque and returned therefrom in the same evening with himself, had been noisy and riotous, and that outrages had been committed by them in and near the Mosque, and that one or more of them, and specially Lieut. Patton, of the 1st regiment of Bengal European cavalry, had broken several lamps in the street in his presence.

Finding.—The Court are of opinion that Capt. W. F. Cox, of H.M.'s Bengal regt. of artillery, is Not Guilty of the charges; and they fully and honourably acquit him of the same.

HENRY PALMER, Colonel, regt. of Lucknow, President.

Fort William, Dec. 18, 1860.

The finding of the Court on the first and second charges is approved and confirmed.

The finding of the Court on the third charge is confirmed, but not approved; because Captain Cox's answer to the Adjutant gen. is disingenuous. That answer conveyed the impression that he knew nothing of misconduct of any sort on the part of some of his companions at Cairo, although his own evidence showed that he was present at the door of the Mosque when two officers were engaged in a conflict with Egyptian soldiers, who allowed no more Englishmen to enter it, on account of the outrages committed in the Mosque by the English; and further, that he drove away from the Mosque in a carriage with other officers, two of whom broke lamps, and that he told one of them that his doing so was a shame.

HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Kurnaul, Feb. 8.

The prisoner will be released from arrest, and return to his duty.

At a General Court-Martial re-assembled in Fort William on the 20th of December, 1860, Lieut. J. Henry Alexander, of H.M.'s Bengal Regiment of Artillery, was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge. With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, on the 4th of April, 1860, at Cairo, when in a state of intoxication, appeared publicly in the streets of the town, and at the door of the Great Mosque and in the vicinity thereof, during a great religious Mahomedan festival, and in having on that occasion conducted himself in a noisy, violent, and riotous manner, tending to excite and annoy the worshippers in and about the mosque, and other mahomedans in the streets; and in having thereby excited and annoyed such worshippers and Mahomedans; and in having wilfully broken lamps in the streets.

Finding.—The Court are of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. J. H. Alexander, of H.M.'s Bengal Regt. of artillery, is not guilty of the charge, and accordingly fully and honourably acquit him of the same.

HENRY PALMER, Col., regt. of Lucknow,

Fort William, 21st December, 1861. President.

I regret, on a perusal of the whole evidence, that I am unable to do more than confirm the Finding of the Court.

HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Kurnaul, 8th February, 1861.

The prisoner will be released from arrest, and return to his duty.

At a General Court-Martial re-assembled in Fort William on 22nd of Dec., 1860, Lieut. James Alexander Mountford Patton, of H.M.'s 1st Regt. of Bengal Euro. Light Cav., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With having behaved in a scandalous manner, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, on the 4th of April, 1860, at Cairo, when in a state of intoxication, appeared publicly in the streets of the town, and at the door of the Great Mosque and in the vicinity thereof, during a great religious Mahomedan festival; and in having on that occasion conducted himself in a noisy, violent, and riotous manner, tending to excite and annoy the worshippers in and about the Mosque, and other Mahomedans in the streets; and in having thereby excited and annoyed such worshippers and Mahomedans; and in having wilfully broken lamps in the streets.

Finding.—The Court are of opinion that the prisoner, Lieut. J. A. M. Patton, of H.M.'s 1st regt. of Bengal Eur. L.C., is not guilty of the charge, and accordingly fully and honourably acquit him of the same.

HENRY PALMER, Col., regt. of Lucknow, Fort William, Dec. 22, 1860. President.

The C. in C. confirms, but cannot approve, the full and honourable acquittal of the prisoner; inasmuch as he himself admitted that he had broken lamps in the streets of Cairo, which was part of the offence with which he was charged. On the other hand, the C. in C. notices with pleasure and approbation the manly candour with which Lieut. Patton unreservedly declared his own misconduct; a solitary instance, the C. in C. regrets much to say, on the part of those implicated in the painful occurrences at Cairo. The Court of Inquiry, of which Col. Guy, c.b., of H.M.'s 5th Fusiliers, was president, which first investigated the case; commented on the unwillingness to state facts; the law officer who had to give an opinion on the case, did the same. There can be no doubt that this reticence not only has caused the prolonged delays which characterised these trial, but has actually impeded the course of justice.

HUGH ROSE, General, C. in C. in India.

Kurnaul, Feb. 9, 1861.

The prisoner will be released from arrest, and return to his duty.

By order of H. E. the C. in C.

Farewell Address of the C. in C.

Feb. 26.—I have been permitted by H.M.'s Government to resign the command of the Madras army, and to return to England.

When I assumed the command of the Madras army on the 10th of June, 1856, I expressed my confident hope that I should receive the cordial support of every right-thinking soldier in maintaining the discipline and efficiency of the service.

That expectation has been amply fulfilled, and my most grateful acknowledgments are due to the officers commanding divisions, field forces, brigades, and regiments, and to the departments of the staff of every denomination at army head quarters, whose untiring exertions and cordial assistance have secured the firm enforcement of a system which has proved eminently successful.

Of the state of discipline, with few exceptions, of the troops, European and native, in the Madras Presidency it is my grateful privilege to record that it has called forth the frequent and marked commendations of the highest authorities, as respects both the efficiency of the several corps and the full, clear, and well-considered reports of inspecting officers, who, by the bold and uncompromising discharge of their very important duties, have so well justified the principle of selection which placed them in the high commands they have exercised with such rare and proved ability.

The services in the field of the troops of this presidency employed in the suppression of the rebellion and mutiny, are now matter of history, and the glowing terms in which they have been recognised must endure for ever an imperishable record of the achievements of those noble soldiers.

In the foremost rank, and in high distinction second to none engaged in that arduous struggle, stand the Madras Fusiliers who fought under Neill, Havelock, and Outram; while it never can be forgotten that, to their immortal honour, the native troops of the Madras army have been, in the memorable words of the Earl of Ellenborough, "faithful found among the faithless."

These are facts of which every soldier, European and native, from the private to the general, may justly feel proud; and it will ever be to me a source of the highest gratification that during the most critical and eventful period of British rule in India, it has been my good fortune to have been at the head of an army so distinguished for all the best qualities of faithful, brave, and loyal soldiers.

I cannot conclude without offering to Colonel Simpson, inspector general of ordnance, to Brigadier Hammond and Brigadier Whistler, successively commanders of artillery—to Colonel Adye, c.b., commanding the royal artillery, and to the select committee of artillery officers, my sincere and hearty thanks for the valuable assistance they have ever rendered in dealing with the innumerable questions which have been under discussion connected with the all-important artillery branch of the army and the ordnance department generally. I earnestly trust that sooner or later these labours may lead to that complete assimilation of system and equipment throughout the artillery of the British army which is indispensable to thorough efficiency, and which successive Commanders-in-chief have for five-and-twenty years striven to accomplish.

I desire also to tender to Drs. Pearce, Macpherson, and Beatson, the heads of the Medical Department, my best thanks for the zeal and great ability with which their important duties have been discharged.

My military career and my active connection with India and its armies are now about to close; but in that retirement in my native country to which forty years of service in a tropical climate entitles me, I shall always cherish a warm recollection of the valued friends and brother soldiers from whom I am about to separate, and to whom I now bid a cordial and affectionate farewell!

PATRICK GRANT, Lieut. gen., C. in C.
H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir Patrick Grant, k.c.b., having this day embarked for Europe, H.E. the Governor in Council directs it to be notified that the command of the army of this Presidency has devolved on Maj. gen. Richard Budd, next senior officer on the staff, as provincial commander in chief.

All returns will be made to Maj. gen. Budd accordingly.

Supply of Indian Cotton to England.

Home Dept., Feb. 28, 1861.

Resolution.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council has had under his consideration the possibility of a greatly and suddenly-increased demand for Indian cotton in England, and he desires to draw the attention of each local government within the territories of which cotton-producing and cotton-exporting districts lie to those measures whereby the power of India to meet such increased demand for cotton may be augmented by help of Govt.

It is to be observed:—

First.—That no measure which places Govt. in the position of the private capitalist, cultivator, or speculator, or which in any way interferes with private enterprise, can be otherwise than permanently injurious in itself and detrimental to the object in view.

Therefore, all attempts to stimulate cultivation or labour by any exertion of Govt. authority, directly or indirectly, are out of the question.

The same objection will apply to model forms and experimental cultivation conducted by officers of government.

Secondly.—No measure will meet the object immediately in view unless it shall tell on the production of cotton during the next season, and on our means of getting that season's crop to port. This limitation will exclude from present consideration such projects as railways or canals, which, although the surest permanent means of increasing our power of export, could be made to tell to only a very limited degree on the exports of the next few seasons. Moreover, the attention of Government is already directed to promote these works to the utmost extent compatible with its financial means, and even so serious a calamity as an apprehension of a short supply of cotton in England could hardly add to the desire of the Government of India to advance them as rapidly as possible.

The question for consideration is, what can the Government do towards facilitating an immediate increase of production, and towards improving the means of bringing the produce to port.

AS TO INCREASING PRODUCTION.

The solution of questions connected with the tenure of land, and with the law regarding contracts for the delivery of agricultural produce, which are now under the consideration of Government, may ultimately produce a very considerable effect on the investment of European capital in the cotton districts, but the result could not be immediate. More probably an immediate increase of the coming crop of cotton will depend on the rapidity with which information regarding the demand and prices in England can be communicated to the producers in the cotton districts and on the removal of all impediments to intimate and rapid communication between those who grow or collect the cotton in the interior, and the merchants who export it from the port of shipment. Directly and indirectly the Government may do something to promote these objects, especially if agents of the mercantile community of our ports will visit the cotton-producing districts, and do all that may be effected by personal intercourse to reduce the number of hands through which the produce must pass between the place of production and the place of shipment. There is also much valuable statistical information regarding the extent of cotton cultivation which it may be in the power of the Government officers to furnish from the public records, or to verify when obtained through other means.

The operation in the interior of the capitalists at our seaport towns may be facilitated by affording them the aid of the Government treasury in their banking arrangements in those parts of the country where as yet no private banks have been established. The agents of respectable firms at the presidency towns might be permitted, under certain rules, to have their bills on the presidency cashed at the Government treasuries, paying no more premium than the actual cost of conveying the coin. This, without entailing expense on Government, might often prove a convenience to the merchants.

AS TO IMPROVING THE MEANS OF BRINGING THE PRODUCE TO PORT.

It is by facilitating existing means of communication, even though it be in a rough way, that Government can best aid the merchant promptly without exceeding its legitimate functions.

Projects for bridged and metalled roads are not practicable within the next year or eighteen months; but there is a great extent of country capable of producing cotton, which is now not easily accessible to ordinary country carts, even during the fair season, and probably it is by improving the present country cart and pack bullock tracks, and thus extending the mileage over which an ordinary load of cotton may be conveyed at a rate of two and a-half or three miles per hour, that the export of the next season's crop may be most effectually aided.

In this view the Governor-general in Council requests that each local Government will at once take measures to have the lines of traffic between their cotton-producing districts and the port of shipment, whether on sea or river, examined and reported on by a competent officer. This officer should note, in general terms, the extent and probable cost of any improvements required to bring the existing country cart tracks up to the standard just described. For the execution of the improvements the Government should select the nearest executive authority as the one to be charged with the work; and where there is no such authority at hand, a special agency should be employed for the purpose; the only conditions being that the work to be undertaken should be capable of immediate execution.

For such purposes officers of high scientific attainment as engineers are not needed. An officer of judgment and energy, with a capacity for rapidly estimating the probable cost of the very simple works required, will be almost as useful as an accomplished engineer. In the event of any expenditure being required, which it is beyond the power of the local government to sanction, application should be made to the Government of India for a special grant.

It would be very desirable that the officers employed to examine and report should be accompanied each by a member of whatever commercial community may be most interested in the produce of the district, who might observe and report on any obstacles other than physical, which may appear to impede the cotton trade. The combined report of two such gentlemen, if well selected, would furnish information of considerable practical value regarding any province in which they might be employed.

The Government of India will be prepared to bear the charge of the travelling expenses of any gentlemen who might be deputed by commercial communities to accompany its officers.

It is not intended to discourage, on the part of those who may be engaged as above described, suggestions of any extensive or costly work which may promise to subserve, in a larger and more permanent manner, the great object in view, even though it may not admit of speedy execution, or be within the means of Government to sanction immediately.

Ordered that a copy of this resolution be communicated to the Governments of Madras and Bombay; to the Lieut.-governors of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab; to the Commissioners of Pegu, Nagpore, and Mysore; and to the resident at Hyderabad.

Ordered further, that the local Governments and administrations be requested to communicate a copy of the resolution to the commercial communities at their chief towns, through the Chambers of Commerce, or otherwise; with an invitation of any suggestions which may occur to those practically interested, and which may aid more effectually to attain the great national object in view. W. GREY,

Sec. to the Govt. of India.

The Opium Crop.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

From Henry C. Hamilton, Esq., Benares Opium Agent, to the Off. Jun. Sec. to the Board of Revenue, L.P.

Fort William, dated Gazeepore, Feb. 16.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit for the consideration of the Board the following particulars connected with the prospects of the current season, and regret to think that they are fast falling off, owing to the absence of rain and dew, and to the consequent increasing deficiency of water in tanks and wells. At the present time there is not the slightest appearance of a change in the weather—we have not had a single nor-wester this year, and strong westerly winds during the day are destroying crops of every description.

BENARES AND MIRZAPORE DIVISION.—Mr. Wilson writes, "During the past fortnight the weather has not been favourable for production of opium, a boisterous dry wind has set in unusually early, and has prevailed with remarkable persistency since the 4th inst. to the present time, and as it has the effect of rapidly accelerating the hardening of the seed capsules of the poppy plants, from which opium is in process of extraction, it tends very materially to diminish the quantity of opium obtained. I am unable to determine the extent to which injury may have been sustained from this cause, but it has extended in some degree to every field in which the collection is going forward. The appearance of the cultivation is luxuriant and promising, and it is very satisfactory to me to find that in a year of unusually protracted drought the cultivators have very generally been induced to listen to my earnest remonstrances and representations, and have allowed a large portion of land to remain fallow,—from which cause alone, had the weather continued to be favourable, I had fair grounds for expecting a considerable increase in the provision of opium of this division."

AZIMGHUR.—Mr. Wintle reports, "That the poppy plant in this division still looks in a healthy state; the early sowings being all in flower, and the latter coming on well. During the last few days, however, a strong westerly wind has prevailed, which is rather detrimental to the manufacture of leaves, and if it continues (as at present seems likely) I fear it may interfere with the irrigation, as the Assamees are afraid of weakening the stems by watering under such boisterous weather. There has been no rain since my last report, and there seems every appearance of the hot weather setting in at once."

FUTTEHPORE, INCLUDING BANDA, HAMEERPORE, AND ALLAHABAD.—Mr. Anderson states, "That the weather during the last ten days has been pretty favourable, the wind however for three or four days has been too strong, but it is to be hoped that it will not continue so. The sowings in this division are much earlier than usual. During the past week every village nearly that I have visited the collections have commenced, and the juice is flowing freely."

SELEMPORE IN GORUCKPORE.—M. Casserat writes, "I regret to state that it has been blowing very strong indeed from the west, hulling occasionally towards night, but never entirely becoming calm, and is consequently unfavourable for the preparation of the leaves. I have myself seen some few fields during the past three days in which the flower leaves have been blown off the plant and scattered about. The poppy also in poor soils is not looking well, and from fear of the plant being laid level with the ground the cultivators are loth to water. As yet I have received no unfavourable reports from the Gomastahs, but I much fear I shall not be able to give so favourable an account of the prospects of this division in my next report if this weather continues. In another week or ten days the collections will have commenced. The first sowings are all well in flower or buds just opening, and all, in the irrigated lands, looking very luxuriant and promising, more especially where the cultivators have kept their lands fallow; and this to a very great extent is the case throughout this sub-division."

CAWNPORE, INCLUDING ETAWAH, FUTTYGHUR, MYNPORE, AND SHAHJEHANPORE, &c.—"The Gomastahs," reports Mr. Turnbull, "are still sanguine as to the outturn reaching maunds 3,138, but, without we have rain shortly, I very much fear it will fall far short of their estimates, the greater portion of the cultivation being still very backward. I have inspected a large portion of the Nawabad cultivation in Koliikund, and it is very promising on the whole."

GORUCKPORE.—Mr. Osborne states since the 1st inst.:—"Very strong westerly winds have prevailed all over this district, which may have interfered in some degree with the collection of the leaves, but up to this date I have not heard of any serious injury to the plant itself. Such as I have seen appears in a very satisfactory condition. The first sowings have flowered very generally, but a portion of the petals have been blown off by the high winds."

GAZEERORE.—Mr. Armstrong reports, "The cultivation is looking well, collection of opium commenced four or five days ago. That which I have examined appears very good. The Assamees I have met with appear well satisfied with their present prospects, and as yet nothing detrimental to the results of the season has come to my knowledge. Although the strong westerly winds have destroyed poppy flowers, no unfavourable report on this account has, up to the present time, been received, as flowers are still abundant."

Mr. Nicholson reports that "in consequence of the long-continued drought the growth of the latter sowings has been retarded. The strong west wind that has prevailed is also unfavourable. But if there is favourable weather for collections, I still expect the out-turn of the season will not be less than from 750 to 800 maunds."

Under these circumstances it is at present quite impossible to calculate the probable out-turn of this division.—I have, &c.,

A CONSTABULARY FORCE FOR INDIA.

THE first Report of the Police Commission is now before us, containing seventy "propositions" as a sequel to thirty-three introductory paragraphs. Considering the ample time allowed to Indian officials for drawing up any reports they may have to submit to Government, their characteristic prolixity is quite inexcusable. With a little more concentration of thought their ideas would become clearer to themselves, and, consequently, their expressions both more perspicuous and concise. As it is, there is no more wearisome task for a journalist than to wade through the feeble, but never-ending torrent of words in which their meaning is concealed. In sifting such a report, for instance, as the voluminous document sent in by the Police Commission, it is very difficult to keep the attention fixed, so as to pounce upon the few scanty grains of genuine ores amid such a mass of useless rubbish. After much pains, however, we gather the main fact that it is proposed to substitute a civil for a military police, and this is really the most hopeful proposition that has emanated from the wise men of the East for many a long day. The abolition of the present anomalous military police force will not only effect a very considerable saving of expense, but will avert whatever danger may lurk in a large native army. The new constabulary is likewise, indeed, to be drilled and disciplined and trained to the use of fire-arms, but on ordinary occasions their only weapon will be a stout baton. At the station-houses will be kept a carbine and two swords for every two men, so that in no case could more than one-half of the entire force be possessed of fire-arms. They will, further, be so much scattered and dispersed over the country that any organised movement would be difficult of execution, and as each corps will be essentially local there will exist no bond of union between the different divisions. Europeans and Eurasians are to be largely employed in the higher ranks, nor will intelligent and reliable natives be debarred from holding posts of responsibility and honour. One very important feature of the proposed arrangement is, that the military will be relieved of all non-military duties. Whatever duty should properly be discharged by the civil power will henceforth be withdrawn from the soldiery, who will be required only to fight the battles of the State, and to enforce obedience to the laws when called upon to do so by the magistrate. There are, no doubt, certain districts where the police must necessarily be armed, especially at night, but even those exceptional cases will gradually diminish in number. In towns, and along the great military roads, the simple baton ought to suffice for the maintenance of good order, especially if the carrying of swords, and matchlocks, and spears, be strictly prohibited on the part of the general population. The appointment of native gentlemen as honorary magistrates will greatly facilitate the perfect pacification of the country, and contribute largely to the efficiency of the new police force. It is impossible to be too careful in elaborating the details of the measure now under consideration, for on its proper working will mainly depend the future tranquillity of the country. By consulting the native landholders as to the selection of constables, and by interesting them in the general development of the scheme, a good feeling will be created between them and the European magistrates, who will thus become better acquainted with the people whose happiness and prosperity are entrusted to their good sense, tact, and sagacity. It is becoming every day more manifest that if we wish to retain our hold upon India on any other than ruinous conditions, we must avail ourselves of native agency wherever it is practicable. It is neither possible, nor desirable, that India should be much longer governed as a conquered country. The people must gradually be associated with the dominant race, and be taught the art of self-government, the first and last step towards which is self-respect. The more we succeed in inducing the respectable natives to co-operate with their present rulers, the less need will there be for the maintenance of the present costly system an incubus alike on India and England. When Trojan and Tyrian, Native and European, can be treated as morally equal, the Indian problem will have been solved, and that great dependency will have become in truth the brightest gem of the British Crown. But before that day arrives the Greek Kalends may be looked for. However, where perfection is unattainable, approximation may be both aimed at and achieved.

WILL INDIA EVER PAY?

THAT India does not "pay" at present is admitted on all hands, but there are sanguine individuals who entertain enthusiastic notions touching the benefit it is destined hereafter to confer on the British Empire. It would be pleasant to think that there were any grounds for this expectation beyond the active imaginations of these dreamers. So far as our memory serves us, no military dependency has ever, at any time, been commercially advantageous to its rulers. This remark does not, of course, apply to colonies, which are not to be confounded with military posts. It may seem strange, perhaps, to apply this term to our eastern possessions, but a little reflection will show that it is the proper light in which to regard them. For what is the reason always assigned by those who insist on the importance of India? Is it not that if we withdraw our troops, it will become a prey to France or Russia? No one ever pretends that England, as a nation, derives either strength or wealth from her dominion over those hundred and fifty millions of dissatisfied natives. We must hold India, it is said, in order to protect our commerce—that very commerce being a subject of loss to the country at large. Individuals, no doubt, frequently accumulate considerable fortunes by trading with India—though to a far less extent than is generally supposed—but it is manifest that the balance of trade is heavily against the nation. For many years past the annual exportation of silver bullion, or specie, to India, has exceeded eight millions, no portion of which finds its way back again. But silver belongs neither to the raw produce nor to the manufactures of Great Britain. It is not even imported from our colonies. The adventitious supplies of gold received from Australia have diminished the pressure upon our markets, and postponed the fatal day of reckoning for a time, but any interruption to this golden shower would infallibly bring about a most disastrous derangement of all monetary and commercial affairs. As it is, instead of vivifying existing manufactures, and creating new ones, it is absorbed in the purchase of the silver required to fill up the deficit in the commerce with India. It would be a matter of less consequence if there were any indications of even a future return of a portion of the hundred millions sterling of hard cash exported within the last dozen years. But not a shilling will ever come back. The effect of this influx of specie into India has been, unquestionably, very beneficial so far as the natives themselves are concerned. Agricultural produce, and consequently the value of labour, have risen considerably in price, and but for the famine—an exceptional disturbing cause that has nothing to do with the argument—a far greater amount of material prosperity would now be within reach of the trading and labouring classes of India than in any other country in the world. But, unlike the citizens, or the peasantry, of any European nation, neither bunniah nor ryots care to expend their increased profits on articles of dress, or in a more generous diet. They are still content to clothe themselves after the manner of their forefathers, in national fabrics, and to enjoy a frugal meal of fish and rice, and fruit. Their surplus wealth is buried beneath the earth, or almost as uselessly expended in the purchase of trinkets, or lavishly flung away in marriage ceremonies, and the impure rites of a grovelling superstition. Whatever be the mode of expenditure they happen to select, it is never to the advantage of British commerce. How, then, it will be asked, do we hear of such large fortunes being made? We reply that few fortunes are made in the course of legitimate barter. A successful coup may now and then be won by the merest speculation, but there is no doubt of the fact that the balance of trade is in favour of India. Sooner or later—and certainly in the event of a sustained European war—this long-continued drain of specie must inevitably straiten our merchants and manufacturers to such an extent that either the circle of trade must be greatly reduced, or carried on by a perilous system of credit—a sort of waiting on Providence and Micawber-like expectation of something "turning up."

perial army. We concede the first clause of this postulate, if it can be shown that the families thus benefited would not do quite as well in sending their younger sons to Australia, or Canada, or any other British colony—every transaction in which is indirectly advantageous to the mother country. As to the military consideration, we do not hesitate to affirm that India is the weakest point in the British empire, and the source of weakness through every part of it. The drain of men is even a more dangerous and exhausting process than that of money, and cannot be continued without lowering the morale of the entire army, for in the face of high wages it is not to be expected that a sufficient number of steady, industrious, sober-minded lads will be found to enlist in a service that possesses no attractions, but many discomforts. Should a war break out in Europe, in which this country becomes involved, the necessity of keeping up a large establishment in the East must necessarily detract from the means available for active operations nearer home; and at such a time it would be most unsafe and impolitic to withdraw any Europeans from India.

What, then, is to be done? Is it advisable to renounce the magnificent conquests won by so much heroism, and at so great a cost of men and money? Must we acknowledge to the whole world that we have more strength to seize than to retain, and that our wisdom in peace is not equal to our valour in war? Would not this entail a loss of moral influence more than equivalent to any material advantages likely to result from the greater compactness of the empire? These questions are susceptible of an easy answer. The moral influence of a nation depends, after all, upon its physical strength. Its prestige will soon vanish after its actual weakness has been discovered, or even suspected. In war time India must infallibly be a burden upon Great Britain, and in peace it is little more than an object of vanity. No one, of course, would counsel the immediate abandonment of those possessions, but it is idle to disguise the fact that we cannot govern them either profitably for ourselves or satisfactorily for the natives. The idea of European colonization is a foolish chimera. The climate of itself will prevent such a result, and independently of the climate, no Englishmen who have any respect for themselves will submit to be excluded from the governing class. If India be held at all, it must be as a military dependency, under military law administered by civil despotism. This is the system that prevails in Algeria, where three millions of Arabs are held in subjection by a standing army of 100,000 French soldiers, at an annual cost of 20,000 lives and three millions sterling. The natives of India are, fortunately, less warlike and less united than the Arabs, and therefore do not entail such a heavy expenditure, comparatively speaking, either in men or money. But, nevertheless, the waste is far greater than this country can much longer bear with impunity, and under the present system Europeans and Natives are alike dissatisfied, and equally embarrassing to the Local Government. A first step towards self-government has been attempted in Oude, and with great success. The experiment should now be tried on a larger scale, and a hope held out to the quasi-independent princes, that those who rule their subjects with equity shall have an accession of territory. By degrees the entire peninsula might thus be portioned out, and nothing retained by the dominant Power beyond the seaports and mouths of rivers—to prevent French aggression under the plea of avenging the death of a missionary, or an imaginary insult to the national flag: our own experience will teach us the danger of even the smallest occupation of territory. Commercially we should be no losers, for whatever trade there might and always will be between Europe and India would pass through the hands of British merchants. Politically, we should gain to an extent only fully appreciable in time of war, but not less real in time of peace. The natives, too, would be far happier under the prompt administration of their own rulers than under our dilatory doctrinaire system which dispenses law at the cost of equity, and by delay and legal charges converts a just sentence into positive injustice to all parties. The people of England are already as heartily sick of India as the Indians are of their English rulers. This state of things cannot possibly last much longer. Let us begin, then, to prepare for the severance of existing ties by accustoming the natives to self-government, and laying the foundation of such sincere respect, love and admiration, as shall hereafter produce their natural fruits in mutual goodwill, and in reciprocally advantageous and amicable relations.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIRECT CADET.—Mr. E. N. D. La Touche passed his examination on the 2nd instant.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—The report of the Agra and United Service Bank, issued preparatory to their meeting this day week, states that the net profit during the past year was £130,345, making the available balance £142,647, out of which dividends have been already declared at the rate of 12 per cent., free of income-tax. Of the remainder, £10,000 has been added to the reserve, which now stands at £220,000, leaving a balance of £12,647 to be carried forward. Owing to the rapidly increasing business at Kurrachee, a branch has been established at that port.

FROM CHINA TO INDIA OVERLAND.—The following is an extract of a letter from a captain in the royal artillery, dated Shanghai, Feb. 6:—"The arrangements for the expedition are now pretty complete. The party consists, besides myself, of Major Sarel, of the 17th lancers, and late aide-de-camp to Sir Hope Grant, Dr. Barton, an Englishman, giving up practice here, Mr. Schereschewsky, who undertakes to interpret for us, while he goes under the auspices of an American missionary society, four Chinamen, and four Sikhs, whom we have obtained from the 11th Punjab infantry here. The whole expense will fall on the three of us, but we expect when we get through that the Indian Government will at least find the interpreter and Chinese passages back to this country. The general has sanctioned my drawing advanced pay, and I believe that the expense will not outrun my pay according to the Indian rate. My proper battery goes to the Mauritius this year, and I have obtained nine months' leave, with orders to report to the adjutant-general in India, and believe there will be no difficulty in getting an extension of leave to England. We take with us small canvass tents, although I fancy, as long as we are in China Proper, we shall require to use them but little. We have a boat also, built in compartments which screw together, and in which, if it stand the transport across the mountains west of China, we hope to explore some of the little-known Thibetian lakes. Of guns and rifles we have a goodly supply, my fire-arms being a double gun, a Sharp's breech-loading rifle, and a Colt's revolver. We take a little war-paint (regimentals) for the purpose of creating an imposing appearance, and we are going to rig the doctor in a staff uniform. In order that you may be able to trace our intended route on the map, I give you the following programme:—"The naval squadron will be composed of some ten or twelve vessels, which will leave Shanghai on the 10th instant. A consul will be established at Chin-Kiang, another near the Peyang Lake, and a third at Han-kow, about 700 miles up the river. Thence the force will be reduced to small surveying vessels, and I don't think will get above Kivei, where there are said to be rapids, but we hope, of course, that they may get much further. Our party will be on board one of the steamers up to Han-kow, where we shall probably charter a native boat, and be towed, after which we must make the best of our way, in the native fashion, up the Yang-tze as far as Chung-king, in the province of Sechuen, where we intend taking to the land, reaching Ching-tu, the capital of the province, and thence proceeding most likely by the route by which the Abbé Huc was sent back a prisoner from Lassa (see "Huc's Tartary and Thibet" and "Chinese Empire"). From Lassa our course will be along the north side of the Himalayas to the source of the Indus, and then through the mountains, coming out into North-Western India about Simla in October or November. You must not expect to hear from me for the next six weeks, as the first chance for a letter will be by the returning squadron down the Yang-tze."

SIAM.—A series of reports received from our Consuls on the trade of foreign countries has been issued by the Board of Trade, with a promise that they shall in future be published more speedily; this may easily be, for the present series relates to the year 1855. The longest report is from Sir R. Schomburg, British Consul at Siam. He states that a rapid development of the commercial resources of Siam has taken place since our treaty, negotiated in 1855, came into operation; but the Siamese Government do not as yet appreciate the great advantages of a free commerce, and fear it may be favourable to foreigners and disadvantageous to themselves. Their principal export is of rice to China, and next to it sugar, of which ten times the present quantity might be produced if there were sufficient labour to be had; but the extraction of the juice of the cane and its manufacture into sugar are carried on without any of the modern improvements for acquiring the largest possible quantity from the cane and a superior quality of sugar. The alluvial districts might produce as fine cotton as the United States, but there is a scarcity of labourers, and it is bulky for transport in canoes down the river. Her Majesty's Government included among the presents forwarded to the Sovereigns of Siam a hydraulic press to compress cotton into bales. Coffee grows luxuriantly, and is of a superior description; it might be cultivated to an unlimited extent. A number of woods, the produce of the forests of Siam, may become of importance. The teak wood is considered the strongest and most durable timber of India, or perhaps of the world, only the greenheart of Guiana vying with it; but it had become scarce, and the supply had almost ceased. The taking might perhaps rival it in size and quality, if examined more closely. Sir R. Schomburg saw, at the building sheds of the first king, a log of this wood, which was being prepared for the construction of a war-canoe, measuring one hundred and thirty-five feet, and perfectly sound and without a flaw. It possesses the property of being easily bent by artificial means. There are many ornamental woods, the colour and suitability to receive a high polish of which would render them valuable articles of export. A beautiful dye of a brilliant colour is prepared from the heart of the jack tree, which might also become of importance. Sir R. Schomburg had seen silk cloth manufactured in Siam of a green colour, with much more lustre than sap green; this green dye, he was told, was extracted from a vegetable substance procured in the forests of the interior. There is said to be a varnish obtained by incision from a tree, probably the theet, on which neither the sun nor the rain has influence, and hence it is employed for securing the gilding of idols; it might be advantageously employed for gilded monuments and ornaments which are exposed to the influence of the atmosphere. The balsamic resins of Siam also deserve attention. The betel nut is extensively cultivated, to be used as a stimulant; and so is hemp, for the sake of its intoxicating and narcotic qualities, it being used in the preparation of "guncha," which has the same effects as opium; but a considerable quantity of opium of inferior quality is produced in the tributary provinces of Siam, on the China border. Elephants abound in the interior of Siam. The hides are sent to China, where, having undergone a process similar to that of obtaining gelatine, they are considered a delicacy. The horns of the rhinoceros are said to possess medicinal virtues. The Chinese likewise attach fanciful virtues, medicinal and invigorating, to the bones of tigers and crocodiles, and the hairy-covered young horns of the deer.

BOOKS.

The Truth About the Indian Army and its Officers. By Hydaspes. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.

A pretentiously written pamphlet with the above title having been sent to us, we presume it is expected that we should express our opinion of its merits, whatever they may be. In the first place, it is not easy to understand the writer's precise object in publishing this extract from a mass of materials collected in Algeria for the purpose of making a book, which was to have been called "The Lion and the Eagle." The purport of that embryo volume was to illustrate the different management of Algeria and of the northern part of British India. Unfortunately "the few publishers" consulted on the subject afforded little encouragement, and it is therefore to test public opinion that the present "pilot balloon" is sent up. It is, in short, an appeal from "the Row" to the "general reader," and if the latter reverse the judgment of the "lower Court," the author will be emboldened to publish the main body of his notes. This being the case, it appears to us that "Hydaspes" has either not made a judicious selection, or otherwise, if he has really favoured the public with a taste of his average quality, we are inclined to think that "the few publishers" gave him very sound advice. He is evidently better acquainted with India than with Algeria, and his "Diary of a Sub. at Meeran Meer," though exaggerated, is a tolerably correct delineation of military life in that country. His observations, too, of the abominable jargon which Gilchrist and Shakspeare contrived to convert into a language, are sensible and pertinent, but it is clearly too late in the day to expect to do away with the Oordoo—at least until English be ready to take its place. But to compare India with Algeria is simply absurd. There is no point of analogy between them, except that both are held by a dominant race. Nor is there much reason to exalt a system that costs France three millions sterling per annum, and requires to be enforced by the presence of an army of one hundred thousand men. "Hydaspes" does not estimate the latter at even sixty thousand; but the recent debates in the Corps Legislatif prove that he is mistaken on that point, and we are disposed to question his infallibility on some others. If, therefore, this be a fair specimen of his projected work, he will act wisely in leaving the Lion and the Eagle free and unfettered to roam at large whithersoever they will.

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz.:—

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE burden of the Calcutta papers received by the mail of the 8th of March is that "India is going to the dogs." The prospect is certainly not cheerful. Twenty-two millions sterling, at the lowest calculation, are required to complete the railway system, and the home authorities are coolly requested to make good this deficit. There can be little doubt now that the Government erred in entrusting the construction of railways in India to private enterprise. It would have been far wiser to have taken the matter into its own hands, raising money for the purpose by special loans. Had this been done, at least one line would have been, ere this, in working order throughout its entire length. As it is, there are three or four sections open to traffic, a few isolated viaducts, and here and there a good many miles of earthen embankments. Considering that the land was given gratuitously by the Government, this is hardly a sufficient return for the outlay of £34,500,000, the sum supposed to be expended up to All Fools' Day of the present year.

The indigo question is another thorn in the well-pricked side of the Viceroy. On the 4th of March a deputation of the Indigo Planters' Association had a lengthened interview with the Governor-General, when Mr. Larmour described the present condition of Lower Bengal in the most gloomy colours. The ryots, he said, not only refuse to cultivate indigo—in accordance, as they believe, with the wishes of the Lieut.-Governor—but even to pay their rents. The arrears due to the Company of which he was the manager and representative, he continued, already exceed £10,000, and unless prompt measures were taken by Government to preserve the tranquillity of the district, neither his own life nor that of any other European trader would long be respected.

Mr. Laing's Currency Bill will not come into force, it seems, before the 1st March, 1862. Several modifications have been made in Committee, chiefly relating to the value of the notes, which are to be as low as ten rupees, instead of twenty, as originally proposed. It is to be regretted that the minimum was not fixed still lower—say at five rupees—at least if the object be to stimulate the retail trade of the country; and the internal trade is principally of that description. Neither do we appreciate the objection to making these notes payable at all the large civil stations, where cash balances to a sufficient amount are always at hand to meet every exigency. At Lahore, Agra, Lucknow, Allahabad, Benares, &c., there would be no more difficulty in cashing whatever notes might be presented, than in Calcutta itself; and in that case, instead of a miserable issue of four millions sterling by way of experiment, three times as much might have been sent forth with perfect assurance and safety.

Thus far the results of the Sikkim expedition are manifest in an abundant supply of oranges to the troops engaged in that expedition. Possibly that refreshing fruit might have been obtained on cheaper terms in the Calcutta bazaar, but, then, its flavour would not have been heightened by a previous march over a difficult country. On the whole, we are glad that the gallant little army has nothing more disagreeable to do than to suck oranges.

Another glorious campaign has terminated in Chittagong; but instead of regaling itself with oranges, the force there employed has had the satisfaction of killing twelve men and burning down a thatched village at the trifling cost to Government of £10,000—no more than his tenants owe to Mr. Larmour or his employers.

There is no abatement of horror in the accounts received from the famine-stricken districts in the North-West. It is gratifying, however, to learn that the sufferings of the people in Travancore have been somewhat exaggerated. The distress in that province chiefly arises from the abolition of slavery, and the substitution of free labour. Formerly the landed proprietors were as much interested in maintaining the health and strength of their bipeds as of their quadrupeds, and a failure of the harvest affected the rich rather than the poor. But since the inauguration of a better era the peasants have become free—to starve.

On Wednesday, March 6th, Lord Canning had an opportunity, of which he did not fail to avail himself, of appearing in a popular and graceful part. As Chancellor of the University of Calcutta he presided at the graduation of such students as had passed the usual examination. His speech was admirably appropriate to the occasion, and well calculated to make a beneficial impression upon his audience.

The news from China and Japan is not of much general interest, except as confirming the announcement of the murder of Mr. Heuskin. Lord Elgin has returned to this country, having landed at Dover on Thursday, the 11th inst.

On the same day, at a Court of Directors of the East India Company, Colonel Sykes, M.P. was elected chairman for the ensuing year.

BENGAL.

THE COTTON SUPPLY.

The Friend of India, in an article headed "India the Feeder of Lancashire," enters at considerable length into the statistics of the cotton trade. The article would be worth reproducing but for the carelessness by which it is disfigured throughout. Thus the writer tells us that while the extreme price of Orleans cotton in 1818 was 1s. 9d. per lb., it is now not more than 4d., and that Sea Island, the extreme price of which was then 4s., is now only 9d.; the last quotations from Liverpool, meanwhile, being as follows:—

Good fine New Orleans 0s. 8½d. to 0s. 9d.
" Sea Island... 1s. 6d. to 2s. 2d.

We find next the weekly consumption by England of cotton declared to be 48,136 bales, which, in 1860, are said to have come from the following countries:—

America ... 40,954 bales.
East India ... 3,255 "
Brazil ... 2,065 "
Egypt, West Indies, &c. ... 1,862 "

Whence the Friend obtained these statistics it is hard to say. Instead of 48,136 bales a-week, the total deliveries for home consumption, during the last seven years, were as follows:—

		Bales.	Bales.
1854.	American	29,356
	East Indian	3,995
	Brazil	1,936
	Egyptian, &c....	2,200	87,487 per week.
1855.	American	30,345
	East Indian	5,324
	Brazil	2,201
	Egyptian, &c....	2,501	40,371 "
1856.	American	32,441
	East Indian	5,413
	Brazil	2,852
	Egyptian, &c....	2,830	43,536 "
1857.	American	26,015
	East Indian	6,903
	Brazil	2,975
	Egyptian, &c....	1,760	37,703 "
1858.	American	31,512
	East Indian	6,203
	Brazil	2,172
	Egyptian, &c....	1,931	41,818 "
1859.	American	36,669
	East Indian	3,413
	Brazil	2,027
	Egyptian, &c....	2,012	44,121 "
1860.	American	43,107
	East Indian	3,386
	Brazil	2,180
	Egyptian, &c....	1,966	50,639 "

We may be permitted to leave the Friend of India for a moment, to point out the influence the immense American crops of the last two years have exercised upon the consumption of East Indian cotton in Lancashire. The consumption of the staple, which in 1857 was 7,000 bales of East Indian per week against 26,000 American, was less than 3,400 of the one against 43,000 of the other in 1860. The following comparative totals of the quantities of East Indian taken for consumption and export in Liverpool during the last seven years will be of interest to some of our readers:—

	Consumption.	Export.
1855 ...	276,834 "	188,600 "
1856 ...	281,452 "	216,600 "
1857 ...	362,076 "	226,540 "
1858 ...	322,570 "	173,880 "
1860 ...	176,068 "	345,800 "

It must be confessed that these tables are discouraging. With abundance of American cotton in the market, the Manchester men clearly will not look at the East Indian staple, which has to seek a market in the ports of the continent. The fact speaks trumpet-tongued to us of the condition in which our staple goes forward. The oracular nonsense in which the Friend challenges our merchants to cease "prating" to the native upon the necessity of improving the character and appearance of the staple, becomes more clear when viewed in the light the above statistics cast upon the nature of the home demand.

We are next favoured by the Friend of India with the strange information that Bombay exports cotton to China "more largely than to Great Britain, because the Chinese give a higher price." Let the following table of comparative exports to the two countries furnish the reply:—

EXPORTS OF COTTON FROM BOMBAY.

	To Great Britain.	To China.
1854 ...	275,778 bales.	122,357 bales.
1855 ...	338,696 "	96,727 "
1856 ...	533,158 "	137,930 "
1857 ...	557,292 "	38,324 "
1858 ...	331,423 "	104,652 "
1859 ...	561,883 "	153,257 "
1860 ...	475,515 "	205,098 "

Average 7 years 439,106 " 122,621 "

The monstrous error is followed up by a sentence which we do not attempt to criticise, for the simple reason that its meaning is incomprehensible:—"Bombay exports to China more largely than to Great Britain, because the Chinese give a higher price. And if this is the case from the chief cotton port of a country which has no good roads, and few irrigation canals, the self-interest of whose natives has not been called into play, yet who grow enough of cotton for the wants of 200,000,000 of people," besides what they export, can it be said that India will never take the place of the States to Lancashire?" Does the Friend of India really mean that the exports to China represent "cotton enough for the wants" of the Chinese Empire of two hundred millions of people? At that rate the Chinamen must indulge in a somewhat severe style of dress, as our exports would furnish the population upon an average with two or three ounces of raw cotton each a-year.

Lastly, where did the Friend of India learn that the Indian Government has spent a million sterling in cotton experimental farms? The total amounts of these experiments, if we remember rightly, is £350,000. We notice these errors on the part of our contemporary because of the wide circulation given to them, and because they are destructive of all home respect for Indian writers. If we are ever to exercise a just influence upon the home press, we must show ourselves better informed upon Indian subjects than they. The Friend has little excuse for its carelessness; it aims apparently at rivalling the inaccuracy which went so far to destroy the value of the late Dr. Buist's writings.—Bombay Times.

THE INDIA OF THE FUTURE.

Lord Canning has personally visited Central India and Oude. The result of his conferences with the officials who administer these provinces will soon appear. We do not mean to anticipate it otherwise than by again directing attention to the wisdom of the policy of aggregating our outlying non-regulation provinces into united and compact proconsulates. It is fortunate that all nations are not created like the French, nor all empires marked out like that of Napoleon by arbitrary laws and mere artificial boundaries. Providence works by an internal principle of growth. Each race or nation gradually fills up into the space allotted for it, and assumes a form as well as an extent of territory which disappoints all previous expectation, and overleaps all but impassable bounds. Island nations like the English may be hemmed in by the sea, but their spawning force seeks new seats at the antipodes. In the vigour of youth favoured races like the Spaniards may have the empires of the east and west in their grasp. But the votaries of a cruel faith and the sport of a dynasty of monarchs whose imbecility is redeemed only by their madness, they permit Portugal to exist by their side, and are themselves barely tolerated by the statesmen of Europe. In the struggle for political existence and supremacy there is, however, something more than spontaneous development. Modern politics have long been based on the theory of a balance of power, which has permitted Turkey and Austria to exist on the map of Europe. Congresses have been summoned to assign arbitrary limits to States, new kingdoms like Greece have been created, old kingdoms like Flanders have been revived, and the tree of European history from time to time has been pruned. The present position of the Powers of Europe is the result of spontaneous development modified by arbitrary rule.

The same cannot be said of our Eastern empire. It has done nothing but grow, wildly, luxuriantly, almost fantastically, till now it is co-extensive with the natural boundaries of the peninsula. Only the Hill States await annexation. The theory of natural frontiers has been carried out most fully in India. The time has now come for pruning, for the Governor-general to do for the provinces which are ruled on such different systems what many a Congress has done for the countries of Europe. As Lord Dalhousie, by his policy, made it possible for her Majesty to assume the direct Government of India, and for Lord Canning to place its chiefs and princes in their proper relation to her as subject nobles, so the late Governor-general by his territorial acquisitions has rendered it necessary for Lord Canning to bring order out of chaos, to apply to ever-varying customs well-established principles, to aggregate little districts into large proconsulates. Accident made Calcutta the capital of Southern Asia; accident, modified by nature, gave the three presidencies their present limits; accident emphatically assigned to all the non-regulation districts their existing boundaries. It is time for law to be introduced.

Looking at the map of India, we know not if the most doctrinaire statesmen would suggest any large alteration in the existing limits of British Burmah, Bengal Proper, Madras, Bombay, and the Punjab. The time must come when Assam and the Eastern districts will demand something more than the thousandth part of a distant Lieutenant-governor's attention. The time has come when Sind should be submitted to the rule of the Punjab rather than of Bombay. But the relation of all the provinces comprehended under Oude, the North-West, and Berar, requires re-adjustment, as well as their connection with the intervening territories of our feudal nobles, Sindia, Holkar, and the Nizam. Oude is too large for a division, too small for a province. The North-West is a straggling aggregation of districts administered on different systems and by men with varying powers. Its officials are ever coming into contact with the native chiefs, whose complaints absorb the attention of our political agents. The North-West is, in fact, a slice of regulation territory subject to the Sudder Court, between two slices of non-regulation country and native states. The evident course is to confine the Lieutenant-governorship of the North-West to the regulation districts, to create the non-regulation provinces on the North into one compact Chief-commissionership, and those on the South into another. The result of this arrangement would be that Goruckpore, if not also Azimgurh and part of Sarun, would be added to Oude, which the Gogra would then traverse in its whole course. Oude would then be bounded on the east by the Gunduk. Some arrangement of this kind is contemplated, we suspect, on the departure of Mr. Wingfield. In Central India the obstinacy of the Nizam, encouraged, we regret to say, by the opposition of Colonel Davidson to the policy of the Supreme Government, has prevented the creation of a great Lieutenant-governorship of Central India, with Nagpore or Jubbulpore for a capital. Colonel Davidson, as Resident at Hyderabad, would like to govern Berar, and so he fails to carry out Lord Canning's wish to remove Berar entirely from all connection with the Nizam. And Lord Canning submits where Lord Dalhousie would have removed the obstruction. Leaving, then, Berar to a weak and anomalous Government, consenting to hold part of it almost as a fief of one of our own subjects, there is still enough left for a Chief Commissionership of Central India. Arrangements are in progress to amalgamate Nagpore with the Saugor and Nerbudda territories and the Jhansee division into one pro-consulate as the Chief Commissionership of the Central India Provinces.

Whether Major Erskine, the Commissioner of Jubbulpore, or Major Elliot, of Nagpore, is to be appointed to the office we know not. The latter has a reputation as an officer of ability. The position is one which should be held by the most able "military civilian in India." But it is a cause of regret that, by the obstinacy of one of the most deserving of our own officers, the original scheme we have so often proposed should be mutilated, and we should be deprived of the vigorous administration which one quasi-independent Lieutenant-governor would have exercised in the great cotton provinces, at a time when India is called on to take the place of the States of America.

By thus aggregating the non-regulation districts into proconsulates separate from those under the regulations, and by carefully weeding out the estates of such nobles as Sindia and Holkar, we shall arrive at simplicity of government and vigour of administration. As the non-regulation system is gradually modified and refined by the elevation of the people in intelligence and social feeling, all India may become, like England, subject to one imperial policy energetically directed from the capital, while its proconsuls exercise independent power, guided by open Legislative Councils in all local matters. Following the course of the great rivers, the next half century should see nine lieutenant governorships in our Eastern Empire—of the valley of the Irrawaddy with Rangoon as its capital; of the Brahmapootra with Dacca; of the Ganges from the spot where the Gogra meets it with Calcutta; of the Gogra with Fyzabad; of the Jumna and Ganges Doab with Allahabad; of the Indus with Kurrachee; of the table land of the Deccan with Nagpore or Jubbulpore; of the West Coast with Bombay; and of the South with Bepore or Ponany.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SINGULAR NATURAL PHENOMENON.—The Daily Reviewer reminds us (Hurkaru) that it was in his paper of this day week that we saw the notice of the extraordinary rise of the water in the banks at Serampore (not Howrah as we had thought it was). The following is the paragraph that appeared in his paper of that date:—"The following is from our correspondent at Serampore, 16th February:—'I do not see you are often troubled from this quarter. I, however, hasten to let you know of a strange occurrence which took place here half an hour ago. About seven p.m., and after the usual time for the natives to blow the shell, all the inhabitants were startled to hear continued peals of this instrument from all parts of the town. The first impression of many was that a moon eclipse was taking place, but it was soon evident that such was not the case. The peculiarity of the time and the noise of the shells, which for all the world sounded somewhat stranger than usual, made me go out in the street to see what was the matter. The streets, which used to be very quiet, were crowded now. I soon learned that shells were being blown on account of a certain phenomenon in a certain Baboo's tank. I was told that it was just discovered that the water in the tank was influenced as if by the strength of the moon, flowing and ebbing like in the river. As soon as this was known hundreds came to see this extraordinary occurrence, and in a few moments all the shells were being blown. Soon after I learnt that not only one particular tank but all the native tanks in Serampore were affected in the same manner. I never heard of the like before.' In our paper of the 22nd of February we gave the following intelligence from a friend:—'On the 16th between 6.30. and 7 p.m. a most extraordinary (at least for these parts) heavy swell or bore in the rivers was experienced at the south entrance of the Gorai and Anno. The noise produced in the neighbourhood was similar to that of a large steamer putting out fire. A number of ferry boats have been swamped.' We have here an account by independent witnesses of the occurrence of the same phenomenon, the agitation of water, at exactly the same hour at two places sixty miles distant from one another. Here is an opportunity for the Asiatic Society to raise itself from its lethargy, to give up its record of the discovery of four-penny bits of the reign of Akbar, and to be of some real use to science. We stated in our issue of Friday that the phenomenon might be attributed to a greater slip than usual in the gradual sinking of the plain of Bengal, which we know is going on, and which it is probable has been going on for thousands and tens of thousands of years. The Society ought to put itself into communication with all the places extending along the great volcanic line from Thibet passing through or near Chittagong down to Sumatra, Java, and Borneo, and to ascertain whether at the time that this slip took place, there was any great volcanic activity there. They ought also to ascertain whether there was any great barometric change here at the time this phenomenon occurred. Whether such was observed or not there ought to have been such a change. There ought also to have been a great disturbance in the atmospheric electricity. It would be well also to know how this sinking is going on. We know the Gorai River well, and we know that it is now running nearly all the water of the Ganges, though but thirty or forty years ago it was a mere rivulet. Of late years it has not increased a foot in breadth, but has, we are told, become thirty feet deeper than it was before. This would indicate a much greater rapidity of stream. Can it be that the country is sinking on both sides towards the course which it takes? Let the Asiatic Society inquire into this, and give us the result of their observations. Though they may not at first appear to be of much use, they will, we are sure, be turned to great advantage by our geologists at home. The above was written on the 23rd. The dawk of the 25th brought us a letter from Balasore, informing us that on the same day (Saturday, the 16th) the phenomenon of the rise and motion of the water in the tanks was observed at that place. Our informant does not mention the hour, an omission which we hope he will supply. A letter from Soorool, dated the 23rd, states as follows:—"The phenomenon of the motion of the water in the Howrah Tanks, noticed by you in your yesterday's issue, was also witnessed in Beerbhoom. I cannot recall the date, but the hour named by your Mofussil correspondent (between 6.30 and 7 p.m.) exactly tallies with the time reported to me by several of the neighbouring villagers. No rumbling noise, such as accompanies an earthquake, was heard.' We have thus information of the simultaneous occurrence of a silent and imperceptible (to the senses) motion of the earth, extending over about eight thousand five hundred square miles. Let it be the duty of our savans to collect yet more information."—Severe shocks of earthquake were felt at 7 p.m. of 16th February at Penang, Malacca, and Singapore.—Ed. A.I.M.

DARJEELING, Feb. 21.—It was high time that our men left Buchis or Buchim, for there was no water there, and they had to return three miles for it to Sandoochie. At daylight, therefore, of the 15th, Colonel Gawler with his advance party left Buchim, with the intention of reaching Yangong, on the Teesta, if possible that evening; but, after toiling all day up and down the hills, on wretched paths, without a drop of water, they came to a deserted village, Yangong being within sight on the next spur at some distance. Here they found a lot of women and children, and one old man who could not run away. As there was water just below his house, the men were halted there for the night. The old man reported that four of the enemy had just been there inquiring about us (for we rush about here and there making ourselves ubiquitous, and they are puzzled where to look for us), and finding the place clear, had returned to join a party of 100 men who had gone on to Temi with the full intention of fighting us; determined fire-eaters were they, and no mistake! Meanwhile, Captain Impey, with a company of the 6th Royals, two guns, and some of Baker's Sikhs, having charge of the supplies, and accompanied by Mr.

Eden, marched from Sandoochie, and taking the path via Tendong (8,000 feet), arrived at Temi by five p.m. Here they suddenly came upon some of the enemy eating their dinner. They sung out, "the Europeans are upon us," as our advance guard fired at them; and then springing up around, left everything and bolted, our men giving them a volley at thirty yards, but without, I fear, hitting a man. A third party, under Captain Unwin, of the 6th, had also marched that morning, the 15th, bound for Temi by another road, but not arriving in due time, the quartermaster-general had gone in quest of them. Doubtless they have since turned up somewhere, all right. On the morning of the 16th, before daylight, Colonel Gawler's column marched for the Teesta, where the enemy had a bridge. The old man had told them that they would find nobody at Yangong but some at the bridge, where stockades had been thrown up on the opposite bank. On nearing the bridge, and when within one hundred yards, a great noise was heard on an adjacent hill. Some of the Europeans immediately advanced in skirmishing order, the rest in rear. After going some little distance three men were seen and heard calling out to us. They held a letter from Lassoo Kazie, saying that he would now come over if we would not advance our troops. As a precaution, however, against treachery, our men were moved close up to the bridge in the jungle; and after some delay, having first sent his servant over, and not without being desired to look sharp about it, came over the Lassoo Kazie himself. The stockades on the other side were destroyed, if I understand the business aright, by the Bhootiahs themselves, and the bridge then cut away on our side. The force of the enemy at this point on the opposite bank was estimated at only 200, and there are hundreds of villagers who have been driven across lest they should prove friendly to us, and who would gladly seize the first opportunity to return to their homes. On the eve of the 17th Colonel Gawler and Captain Murray went up the river, about two miles, to look at another bridge, but the enemy had cut it away the night before. On the 18th they marched for Yangong, which they found quite deserted. In the Goompah or monastery here our unfortunate prisoners had been confined for some time, but no papers or writing calculated to afford information regarding them were found. Two of them—the Moonshiee and English writer—are said to be not far off, on the other side of the Teesta, within a march of Tumloong, and will probably be delivered up. But the rest are reported to have been sent on to Lhasa for detention until a satisfactory solution of present difficulties. Lassoo Kazie is supposed to have instructions to come to terms with us; but the fighting men, wherever or whoever they may be, are not disposed to agree. Other Kazies and influential men are expected to come over when they get a notion of our terms. Cheebo Lama, the Rajah's vakeel in our camp with Mr. Eden, is in a state of great excitement, and most anxious that we should not cross the Teesta. The colonel and envoy, however, are resolved to settle matters at the capital alone, from which they were distant only three or four marches. But the question of supplies is a very serious one. Already the "baccy" runs short, and every mile of advance into such an impracticable country calls for the utmost energies of the commissariat department. In ascending to Yangong our force got a view of Neh, beyond which is Barasong ghat on the route to Tumloong, where I dare say we shall cross over the Teesta. On our left frontier at Goke, Lieut. Pierson, of the Engineers, is throwing a bridge over the Rummam, so I infer that the permanent occupation of that portion of the country has been decided upon. Four men of the 73rd N.I. have been brought to a court-martial for disobedience of orders, in refusing to work upon the construction of a military road. The old Pandey leaven is at work amongst the native officers of this regiment, by whom, without doubt, these youngsters have been influenced. The prisoners, I believe, are some of the very men, Pahariahs or Nepaulese, who, at the period of the mutiny, when the 73rd were shaky, were enlisted up here and marched down in hot haste to Julpiorie, to neutralise and keep down the bad spirit of the pandies. P.S.—Weather very cold; everything parched up for want of rain; also a murrain amongst our cattle.—Feb. 28. The troops had made a night march, and arrived at the Bhurum Cane Bridge long before daylight on the morning of the 24th, where the men were put under cover of the adjacent rocks, and the guns placed in position ready to open upon the three stockades on the opposite bank. All was ready, every eye fixed on the stockades, and every man's musket pointed towards them expecting a volley at the break of day, when lo! to the astonishment of all, a fellow came out of the stockades, sat down in front and looked at us! Captain Murray went down and got him over the bridge to our side, when he said, "we have instructions not to fight." So ended all the gallant Colonel's well planned attempts to come to conclusions with our comical enemies! A pity they did not make a clean breast of it at first, and save themselves and us all this trouble and expense. Some of our people were impolite enough to say, "confound them, they won't fight." Three more of the prisoners have been restored, namely, two of the sappers, and a chuprassie. They saw the native doctor safe at Tumloong, and the cloth merchant being taken on to a place called Latchee, distant about ten days' journey. Twenty-one of our rifles and some pouch belts have also been given up, and the prisoners on their way in met three loads of flint muskets being taken up to Tumloong, which seems to say they have had enough. On the 25th, Colonel Gawler went to have a look at Neh, their abandoned stockaded position on the Teesta. He found it very strong. Every approach to it had been stockaded; and large rocks so placed and poised that with a touch of a lever at hand they could have been hurled down upon us. But we could easily have shelled them out of the place. Our party returned after destroying all the defences. This Neh is the place whence the Goorkhas were beaten back in 1788, as far as Ilam by the Sikhimites, aided by Thibetans and Bhoteahs. The Goorkhas, however, returned, when reinforced, and finally succeeded in holding Darjeeling and the country up to the Burra Rungeet, until the conclusion of the second Nepal war in 1816, when it was ceded to us, and made over to its original masters, the Rajahs of Sikhim, who, out of gratitude, vassals as they are in truth of ours, have ever since shown a passively hostile attitude towards the British Government; ending by the recent murderous attacks upon our subjects, the forcible carrying off of our ryots, and the insidious attack upon our little force.—Englishman.—Another letter from Darjeeling informs us that the health of the troops on the Sikhim expedition is reported excellent by the envoy, and that many persons have applied to Dr. Campbell for compensation for losses during the late disturbances at Darjeeling; the amount of the demands so far being nearly Rs. 11,000. The report in the station is that Lassoo Kajee had joined the envoy with a letter from the Rajah, offering to comply with all demands if a little time be given him. Mr. Eden, instead of answering the letter, verbally replied to Lassoo that he cannot delay his movements for a day. The Dewan has fled to Thibet; the Lepchees are now anxious to join us. Many men, women, and children are on the other side of the Teesta, and would have come over to us but for the destruction of the bridge.

PROPOSED ABOLITION OF FORT WILLIAM COLLEGE.—The Civil Finance Commission, says the Herkart, have recommended the abolition of the college and board of examiners of Fort William, by which a saving of Rs. 25,000 yearly will be made. As a substitute for the college, members of the civil service, covenanted and uncovenanted, will be examined in their linguistic acquirements, &c., by the Sudder Judges, who will form an ex-officio board of examiners. Military officers, it has been proposed by the commission, should be examined by duly qualified officials, without any remuneration.

ALLAHABAD, Feb. 28.—We have had a subscription here for the Famine Relief Fund, and Colonel Baird Smith is here, making inquiries as to the delay caused by the railway in not forwarding on the quantities of grain lying at the stations between this and Cawnpore. The railway to Etawah will positively open by the end of May, and it is hoped to Agra by November next. The Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. Edmonstone, is expected in with his camp on Saturday. He has been out in the Juanpore district, and also to Mirzapore. He met Lord Canning at Benares. As houses have been taken at Nainee Tal, he, with his Secretaries, will go up again the second week in March; but no deputation allowance is to be drawn in future by those accompanying him. This comes hard on the clerks, but as Sir R. Montgomery has done it in the Punjab, Mr. Edmonstone had orders to the same effect. The new police arrangements have come into effect here. We have three European constables, or rather superintendents, but crime, murder especially, was never so rife. On Saturday week a murder took place in the Ruttana bazaar, nearly opposite the cutcherry, in the house of one of the native officials employed in the accountant's office. He left his wife at home with her mother; the latter happened to go out for a short time, when three men rushed in, cut the throat of the wife, and took away all the jewellery on the body. As yet no trace of the murderers has been found. From Rohileund and other divisions we hear of nothing but robberies. The Oonao murderers have not yet been traced, and Lieutenant Sharpe, of the Oude police, has been ordered from Pertabghur to take the place of Captain Ryall there. I am sorry to announce the death of Mr. Ford, of the firm of Ford and Self. He had been long ill, but died yesterday; he will be much regretted by a large circle of friends in these provinces. We have several detachments of recruits passing up lately, but it is getting warm now for marching. Mr. Moens, from Bareilly, one of the competition men, has succeeded Mr. Monteith in the secretariat. Mr. Lushington, the accountant, North-West Provinces, is going home, as are one or two others of the civil service.—Englishman.

DELHI, Feb. 24.—The new police system, somewhat similar to that introduced in Oude, is to be tried here. I doubt not that it will, under European superintendence, succeed. European inspectors are to be appointed, and although the policemen will be trained to the use of arms, and be essentially military, they will only be permitted to carry truncheons in times of peace. The natives have got up a report here, which they are circulating very diligently, that a violent storm from the Deccan will come off in the approaching Ramzan,—such a storm as has never been experienced. This is the report; but of course there is a hidden meaning, which can only be discovered by inquiry. A day or two ago they spread a report to the effect that the prisoners had all been released from the Lahore jail; of course the report was false, and was intended to unsettle the minds of the timid and peaceable portion of the community. It is a great pity that the originators of these evil rumours are not identified, and made answerable for them. At the same time, as this is almost impossible, it would be as well if the authorities were on the alert and less anxious to pay court to people who may be the originators, but who disguise their real feelings and sentiments too well to appear so. Those who are behind the scenes generally know more of the play than those who sit in judgment on it, and a little advice and caution is never to be despised. The weather is again cloudy, but the clouds are high and not heavy. A good shower would prolong our cold weather. H.M.'s 89th Regiment marched in yesterday. The band of the Connaught Rangers played them in. The 89th, with a company of the 4th Native Infantry added for sentry duty during the day, are to take charge of treasure (ten lakhs) as far as Umballa, and marched hence this morning. A number of "big wigs" are congregated here to meet the Lieut.-Governor. The Commissioner of Hissar and General Van Cortlandt come in to-day.—Feb. 28. The Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Colonel Becher, C.B., and other heads of departments, passed through Delhi this morning. A salute was fired, which most people thought was to announce the departure of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab; but, although he is likely to leave some time to-day, he is still with us. It is most likely that his Honour will leave this evening, and be at Kurnal to-morrow. Major Hutchinson, Officiating Military Secretary and Inspector-General of Police for the Punjab, remains back upon business connected with his new duties. The new police system will come into operation immediately. I believe that the Kotwals already make their reports to Major Smith, the superintendent appointed for Delhi. A meeting of the residents took place at the Exchange yesterday; the Rev. Mr. Sloggett, Secretary to the Famine Relief Fund, was present, and the object of the meeting was to increase the amount already collected to alleviate the distress in the neighbouring villages, and in the city. Mr. O. Wood, assistant commissioner, is going to Kurnal as deputy commissioner, an arrangement by which his position will be considerably improved. Mr. Wood is much respected in Delhi for his independent administration of justice, and his departure will be a source of regret to the community, both European and native. Mr. Prowlett, C.S., is named to succeed him here. H.M.'s 88th, Connaught Rangers, are under orders to proceed immediately, so soon as they are relieved, to Moradabad. H.M.'s 82nd, from Shahjehanpore, are to succeed them. The thermometer has taken a sudden jump within the last day or two; probably owing to clouds coming up. Tatties and punkahs are now talked about—and rather early in the year for them.—Englishman.

TEA PLANTATIONS FOR SALE.—The North-West Government advertises the sale in fee simple of two tea plantations in East Gurwhal and Kumaon. "Paoree," in the former, 350 acres in extent, of which 130 are cultivated, with two slated houses, one slated factory, and the stock and block complete, is offered at the upset price of £10,000. It yielded last season 13,000 lbs. of tea and 200 maunds of seed. "Blurtpore," only twelve miles from Nynee Tal, is offered at Rs. 20,000. Of its 331 acres, only 31 are under cultivation. It yielded last year 1,450 lbs. of tea and 170 maunds of seed. There will be no lack of intending purchasers. Tenders must be sent to W. Jameson, Esq., Saharunpore, before the 1st October next.

MAHARAJAH RUNBEER SINGH has asked of the Government assistance to engage a suitable European to undertake the manufacture of cider, and also to ascertain and report on the mineral resources of his territory. The Maharajah, it is said, is in expectation of some handsome present from the Queen, through the Secretary of State, for his services during the mutiny.

OUR EXCHANGE OF TERRITORY WITH SINDIAH.—We (Friend of India) are now able to publish details of the districts which, with a view to the aggregation of our territory, we have given to the Maharajah of Gwalior in exchange for his possessions south of the Vindhya and the Punj Mahals. Sindiah takes that portion of the Jhansee district which lies between his present frontier and the city of Jhansee, viz., the whole of Pergunnahs Kurera and Pachore, and sixty villages in the Jhansee Pergunnah; the whole of the Neemuch assigned districts, and portions, not yet fixed, of the districts of Madhogurh, Indoorkee, Daboolie and Northern Bundere; also that part of the Chundeyree district which lies to the west of the Betwah. The same policy of consolidating our provinces is about to be carried out with Holkar.

THE FAMINE.—A correspondent of the Englishman writes as follows from the North-West:—"I remained at Bolundshuhur all day yesterday, and it was frightful to see the poor people dying from starvation. Two native boys fell down apparently dead before my eyes. They came begging for food and I sent my coachman to get something for them, and before he came back the poor things were really dead."

KOOCH BEHAR.—The Governor-general's agent on the north-east frontier has been instructed to watch the proceedings of the Kooch Behar Rajah carefully, in consequence of repeated complaints having been made against him.

MAJOR-GENERAL C. A. WINDHAM, to whom the command of the Presidency Division on General Harsey's departure was assigned by current rumour, is going home to England on leave for some months, which will not, however, interfere with his being nominated to the Calcutta command. We have also heard Brigadier Showers, commanding at Agra, mentioned in connection with the presidency command; but we believe that the appointment of that distinguished and gallant officer would involve a supercession, unless a senior officer could be otherwise provided for.

THE OUTRAM TESTIMONIAL.—A very well attended meeting of the general committee of the Outram Testimonial Fund was held in the Town Hall on the 6th March, at which the honorary secretary brought forward the accounts, showing a gross subscription of about Rs. 43,000, of which about 40,000, in round numbers, had been realised; and it was calculated that with the deductions for expenses of advertising, collection, &c., the committee could finally reckon on Rs. 35,000 at their disposal to carry out their design. A lengthy and spirited debate ensued, on a proposition mooted by Dr. Duff, that a portion of that amount should be devoted to the Outram Institute at Dum-Dum, but the strong feeling of the great majority of the committee was expressed in their resolution that the fund should be devoted to the erection in Calcutta of an equestrian statue of the gallant general. Mr. Foley, to whom its execution is to be entrusted, had undertaken to send to Calcutta such a statue for £3,500. So that it remains for the committee only to raise, when required, the Rs. 4,000, which will be about the sum required to erect the statue on its arrival here.—Englishman.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS.—The 1st battalion of the 5th Fusiliers were to leave Calcutta about the 10th of March by the Walmer Castle and the Cambodia; the 70th have left for New Zealand, and the Carabineers, who are at Raneegunge, will follow the 5th in the Lady Anne and the Queen of England, as speedily as possible.

CAPTAIN E. ST. GEORGE, employed at present in the Rajpootana agency, comes down to the Presidency to officiate as secretary to the Board of Examiners, Fort William, and in the other appointments held by Captain W. N. Lees, going home on sick leave. We think it probable that Captain St. George will, during his acting incumbency, witness the abolition of the Board of Examiners, recommended by the Civil Finance Commission.

DR. C. PALMER, now in Calcutta, will officiate as Marine and Presidency Surgeon for Dr. A. Macrae, during the temporary absence of the latter officer on leave to England, till November next.

THE VICEROY AND THE PLANTERS.—A deputation from the Indigo Planters' Association waited upon the Governor-general on the 4th March, and informed him of the present deplorable condition of Bengal. His Excellency was surrounded by the Lieutenant-governor, Mr. Beadon, the commissioner of Nuddea, and a few other officials. Mr. Larmour gave a description of the condition of the estates belonging to the Bengal Indigo Company. He declared that the Ryots refuse to pay their rents. Mr. Mackenzie confirmed the above statement, and believed that he would have to leave the country in his old age, a ruined man. The indigo question was not touched upon. The interview lasted for more than an hour.

CAPTAIN J. RENNIE, C.B., superintendent of marine, proceeds to England on sick leave in April. Government has not as yet made the official arrangements for the discharge of the duties during his absence, but if rumour be correct, they will be just and impartial. So many high officials of the Government have seldom gone home in any hot season as are now moving, and the warm weather has only just commenced.

SIKH CHIVALRY.—The Peshawur correspondent of the Delhi Gazette mentions a melancholy accident which occurred at that station on the occasion of a "sham fight." It appears that a sowar, a noble fellow of Jackson's irregular cavalry, while making a dashing charge, accidentally received a thrust from the tulwar of his right hand man, which severed one of the large arteries. The doomed sowar rode out of the ranks, dismounted from his horse, and striking his lance in the ground, laid himself down at the foot of it, and expired.

DACOITY COMMISSIONER.—It is understood by the Hurkaru that the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has suggested to the Government of India that the appointment of Dacoity Commissioner should be given to an uncovenanted servant, and that the salary should be reduced from Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 1,000 per mensem. The present incumbent is about to proceed home on furlough, so that his Honour considers the opportunity for making this change a favourable one. One reason given by Mr. Grant for his proposal is, that the services of covenanted officers are much needed in the other regular branches of the service. He also proposes to extend the operations of the Dacoity Commissioner to the districts of Eastern and Lower Bengal. He is assured that there are many districts in which the operations of the commission are urgently required and would be attended with a beneficial result. It will be necessary that each commissioner should have a gunboat at his disposal, but this expense the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to meet by a reduction in the establishment of guardboats attached to different Tannahs. At the same time the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to effect a further saving by abolishing the appointment of assistant-superintendent of thuggee and dacoity, which appointment is no longer needed, and which is now held by Lieutenant Boddam, for whom possibly some other employment may be found. The Dacoity Commissioner would, of course, when out in the interior of his districts, draw the usual travelling allowances. The total saving effected, if the above proposals be sanctioned, will be Rs. 1,200 per mensem.

AN EDITOR AND "A GENTLEMAN."—Romance is omnipotent. We (Friend of India) have read the warmly sensual letters of an English girl in a comparatively high rank of life to Azimoolah Khan, Nana Sahib's vakeel, and formerly a khitmutgar. The letters were found at the sack of Bithoor.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES IN OUDE.—The American Methodist Episcopal Church has occupied the provinces of Lucknow and Rohilcund in strength. Under the Rev. Dr. Butler, as superintendent, are the Rev. J. J. Humphray and J. W. Waugh at Bareilly; Rev. S. Knowles at Budaon; Rev. C. W. Judd at Moradabad; Rev. E. W. Parker and J. L. Hawser at Bijnour; Rev. J. M. Thoburn at Nynsee Tal; Rev. J. A. Cawdell at Shahjehanpore; Rev. H. Jackson at Luckimpore; Rev. A. Pierce, J. Baume, and J. H. Messmore in Lucknow; with schools, native catechists, and teachers. The mission is well organised. The American missionaries are now a numerous and most valuable body in India, and represent the leading Protestant sects.

INDIAN MINTS.—The Mint of Calcutta is being doubled in extent, and will soon boast of having twenty-four coining-presses, capable of producing collectively 1,440 pieces per minute, thus giving a money-making power three times in excess of the Royal Mint on Tower-hill. The Bombay Mint will presently have four more presses added to the eight it now possesses; while at Madras important augmentations of minting machinery are contemplated. All this will be needed, but it seems to us more economical to have the copper coinage made by contract in England. There is a probability that bronze will be substituted for copper here as in England.

THUGGISM seems to be reviving. In the Onao district several cases have occurred. On the last occasion the murderer was pursued by the district superintendent and Lieut. Dodd to his favourite haunt. The culprit confessed his crime, but made no disclosures.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, March 8).—Indigo.—A slight improvement is observable in the prices given for the lower qualities since our last, and the remainder of the crops are gradually passing the hammer. Raw Silk.—A large business has been done in European Filatures, high Surdabus 100 bales at 17-12, and about 300 mds. of Watson's Radnagores at 16-4. Vardona's silk is also reported as having found buyers at 15. Jute continues in great demand, and prices are, if anything, rather higher. Shellac and Lac Dye.—A considerable business in Shellac, principally native manufacture, is reported, but no transactions for European marks. The Dye is saleable at former rates. Hides.—A large business has been doing, stocks are cleared off, and full rates are easily obtainable.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, March 8).—The slight improvement noticed in last report cannot be said to have continued. Advances of large shipments has mainly contributed to check any improvement in rates. A considerable business has been doing, but at barely remunerative prices. Grey Shirtings.—Since our last report the market for this staple has improved, particularly for 39-inch makes, which have advanced 4 to 6 as. per piece. White Figured Shirtings and Brocades may be quoted 2 annas per piece higher than before. Grey Jaconets are in some demand, and may be quoted about 1 anna per piece higher than before. White Jaconets.—Middling qualities of these goods have improved about 1 anna per piece on our last quotations; 38 inches at Rs. 1-11 to 5-1; 45 do. at 3-0 to 6-1. Grey Madapolams.—Low qualities of these goods have advanced 2 to 3 annas per piece; but other kinds only 1 anna per piece; 32 inches 42 reeds at Rs. 1-14; do. 50 do. at 2-0 to 2-1; do. 56 do. at 2-3. White Mule Twist.—Since our last report this staple has improved both in demand and value; No. 20 at 8-0 to 8-2 annas.

MADRAS.

NATIVE THEATRICALS AT COCHIN.

One very noticeable feature of native life in Cochin is the theatricals, which will afford ample materials for a very interesting chapter in any description of the manners and customs prevailing on this coast. The actors are all Roman Catholics, and the few weeks immediately preceding Lent is usually observed as a species of carnival, distinguished chiefly by the exhibition of dramatic performances. At this period, play-going is all the rage. Old and young, the matron and the young maiden, the mother with her infant in arms, assemble in great numbers at the imminent risk of cold and fevers, the almost inevitable penalties of exposure to the night-dew and land-breeze common at this time of the year. Each play is generally continued for three nights, commencing at about nine, and kept up through the live-long night, till the grey streaks on the eastern sky warn the actors to prepare for the serious duties of the day. The place selected as a theatre is the sea beach or some other open area. The stage is of extremely rude construction—a bare platform raised some six feet high, with a canopy of bamboo matting. The only ornament which may occasionally be seen, consists of fanciful and tawdry scenes sketched by the hands of some amateur unknown to fame, bearing no affinity to the events to be represented, and usually so faded and time-worn that it would be hard to decipher their original characteristics. In front of the stage the multitude is promiscuously seated, under the open sky, with the exception of a few Portuguese families who have the luxury of temporary booths, too frail, however, to afford effectual protection from the weather.

The music claims a principal share of attention. It is of a most unearthly character, and baffles any attempt at description. Shades of Mozart and Handel hide your diminished heads! The people are invited by these enchanting strains which are repeated at intervals of half an hour, by way of prelude; and the same notes are heard at the close of every scene throughout.

The plays are chiefly selections from the sacred drama of Portuguese literature, representing passages in the lives of eminent saints and martyrs, but so changed in the wretched attempt at adaptation to the Heathen stage—which it was found necessary to do to attract the fancy of a multitude still retaining the traces of their native barbarism—as to possess all the most pernicious features of the latter, with very little of the pathos and dramatic power which adorned the Portuguese originals. In persons of taste and sensibility, familiar with the electrifying power of the English stage, the miserable exhibitions here witnessed can excite no other feeling than one of intense disgust. The costumes are quite out of character, and partake more of the habit of Indians than of European heroes. There is no attempt to represent nature in its true aspect. The emperors, princes, and great officers of state are divested entirely of the dignity proper to their position, and are made to skip about after the most absurd fashion, as if they were so many court fools; and the ludicrous effect is heightened by the Queen and all the domestics indiscriminately joining in these preposterous movements. The speeches are sung, and not spoken—but this is by no means to be accounted a defect, if each character performed his own part in due season. Unfortunately every speech is taken up by a chorus of voices, not excepting those to whom the part in question is not assigned, so that the spectator unacquainted with the leading incidents of the story, will be utterly at a loss to follow the play.

In a literary point of view, little can be said in praise of these native imitations of the drama. The language employed is professedly Tamil, although it must be evident to any one with the most limited pretensions to Tamil literature that the higher models of the poetic art have not been followed. We have also been able to detect gross corruptions of style savouring much of colloquial Malayalam. There is but little of originality in the whole composition; the few portions of real dramatic interest are derived from the European original, and the merit of the composer chiefly lies in a certain acquired facility of rhyming and alliteration to which the sense is unhappily too often made subservient.

The most repulsive feature, however, of the whole play is the farce. There is an entire absence of any regular plot, and the ridiculous gestures of a single low-bred buffoon are made to do duty for more rational amusement. The entire acting of this merry-andrew is generally unrelieved by a single sally of genuine wit or racy humour, whilst the filthy jesting in which he freely indulges, has the certain effect of scaring away every person who values his self-respect, except, perhaps, the European stranger who sits unconscious of anything but the strange antics enacted to his great amazement. These pitiable displays are not intended to fill up the weary intervals between the serious parts of the play. The buffoon is always on the stage, and interrupts the gravest scenes of a tragedy by his ill-timed and coarse rillery.

Criticism upon such despicable acting would be simply thrown away; nor is it our intention to regard the question from a purely artistic point of view. We have alluded to native theatricals at Cochin as illustrative of national habits and feelings, and the subject suggests many grave and melancholy reflections. As an index to the civilisation of the people we see little cause of congratulation. Our remarks must not be understood to apply to the spectator, whom a very pardonable curiosity leads to spend a half-hour in observing the sources from which his native fellow-countrymen draw their amusement; but to those for whose special entertainment such exhibitions are improvised. We must confess to one redeeming feature discoverable in these plays. The grand ends of moral justice are finally asserted. Virtue receives its reward and vice its punishment. But it must be a sadly vitiated taste indeed that could lead vast numbers of all ages and sexes, at a ruinous sacrifice of rest and health, to witness for nights together the wretched profanities of the native stage, in the hope of imbibing moral maxims. We can only pity the men who cannot otherwise strengthen their faith in the triumph of righteous principles. Is it not painful to see the rising generation familiarised with the low, demoralising indecencies of a mean jester, and all relish for the refined pleasures of the legitimate drama totally destroyed by contact with the victims of a perverted school and a hybrid literature? If professing Christians feel no compunction that the scenes recorded in Scripture history—the most solemn events in the lives of martyrs, who have attested with their blood the glorious truths of the Gospel, are thus miserably caricatured in public by the ignorant and the vulgar—can Catholic ministers look upon such scandalous mimicry with any complacency? The answers to these inquiries will readily suggest themselves to every enlightened and discriminating reader.—Cochin Courier.

THE RED KARENS.

(By the Rev. Dr. MASON, Toungoo.)

The Eastern Bghai, Bghai-mu-hay, or Red Karens, call themselves Kaya, their term for man, and are called by the Burmese, Ka-yen-ni, by the Shans, Yenlaing, or Red Karens, from the colour of their dress, which was originally all red, as it occasionally is now, but a mixture of black garments is now commonly seen. Yule says, "It is generally believed that they are not in any way closely allied to the Karens proper of Pegu and Tenasserim, but that they are rather a Shan race. I have not been able to find any proof of the latter kindred, other than their being a gens braccata." This proof fails when it is known that we have pant-wearing Karens living in sight of Toungoo.

The men wear short red pants, with perpendicular narrow black or white stripes. Sometimes the pants have black ground, with red or white stripes. Below the knees are black bands, several inches in diameter, formed of twisted thread. A shawl or sheet of white, with red or black stripes, is wrapped around the body with or without a Shan jacket. A bright red turban is worn on the head, and an ornamental bag is hung across the shoulders. Every man carries a short knife in his belt—many, swords—and those who have not muskets or matchlocks, carry from one to three light spears, which are used in war like javelins, and thrown from the hand. Every man has a pony, so that in time of war they form a species of light cavalry, when all turn to service, and the cultivation is carried on then by the women exclusively.

The female dress is peculiarly picturesque, though every garment is only a rectangular piece of cloth. The head-dress is a large red or black turban, bound up to form a small tower on the top of the head. There is no gown; but a cloth like the Roman toga is tied by two corners on the right shoulder, and the left arm is sometimes kept covered; but more often it is thrown out above the garment. A second piece of cloth like the first is kept in the hand like a loose shawl, or around the body. These garments are usually one black and one red. For a petticoat, another rectangular piece of cloth is wrapped two or three times around the person, and is kept in its place by a wampum belt, some half-dozen inches in diameter. Another enormous band of beads is worn below the knees, and on the ankles large silver bangles. Both sexes wear silver bangles on the wrists, and the women a profusion of silver necklaces, formed of ingots of silver, or coins, to which are added a dozen or more strings of beads. Ear-drops are worn by both men and women, and the latter add silver ear-plugs of an inch or more in diameter. Beads are as numerous among the women, though all imported, as among the American Indians; and the profusion of silver ornaments seen indicates anything but poverty. The feminine instinct for ornaments above all other things, is strikingly illustrated while I am writing. A girl stood in the crowd while some boys were going over their spelling lessons, and she was asked to study. "If I do," she replied, "must I put off these?" pointing to her ornaments; and on being told she must, the decided answer was, "Then I won't yet."

It is not generally known that the country inhabited by the Red Karens is the finest known in the interior of Burmah. After fourteen travelling days from Toungoo, I found myself on the summit of a mountain four or five thousand feet high, about the twentieth we had crossed on our way, when the land of the Red Karens opened suddenly before us, and a more beautiful prospect

I never beheld. Mountains in two massive ranges ran down like the sides of a triangle, with the apex at the south near where we stood, and in the interval was spread out what appeared to be an immense plain, bounded on the north only by the horizon. It seemed to be pillared on mountains two or three thousand feet high, like a gigantic altar on which to offer sacrifice to God, or to build a temple for his worship. Its scant shrubbery and bare red soil, contrasted strongly with the dark mountain sides, covered with heavy timber. The picturesque summits of the almost perpendicular walls that supported this expanse, indicated them to be, as they proved, of mountain limestone. On entering the country, however, I found it far from being the plain it appeared in the distance. It is a rolling country with long dry ridges, and deep hollows in which the water sinks, as in Kentucky, to arise in perennial springs in other places. The village in which I now am has no water for its fifteen hundred or two thousand inhabitants, except what one of these springs supplies. The country, with the mountains around it, resembles both Scotland and Vermont; and the inhabitants are only what the Highlanders were in the days of the Wallaces and the Bruces.

They are governed by a Saubwa, who is now, according to his own statement, more than ninety years of age; and his son and heir tells me that they have occupied their present locality for forty generations, having been driven down from the north by the Burmese, and separated at Upper Pagan from the Chinese, with whom they were then associated. Here on this high table land they have lived, a terror to both Burmese and Shans, plundering, kidnapping, and killing as opportunity offered, and selling the slaves they did not need to the opposite nation, Shans to Burmese, and Burmese to Shans. The country remained intact until the days of the present Saubwa. Many years ago a member of the Burmese royal family, Phapau-min, fell into disgrace at Ava, and he fled into the Karen country for refuge, where he was protected by Kapho, the present Saubwa, or, as the Burmese call him, Kephogyee. In process of time the Burman succeeded in supplanting the Karen chief, and obtained the supremacy of the Eastern Red Karen country, which he made tributary to Ava, and was on this account received back to favour. He died a few years ago, and his two sons are now the rulers, but the principal power is said to be in the hands of a Shan who is nominally under them. Three years ago the Shans of Moby revolted, and were aided by eight hundred men from Kephogyee; but the Burmese were successful in subduing the revolt, and their principal town is occupied at the present moment by a considerable Burmese army.

Ever since this event, the western Red Karens have been threatened with destruction from their brethren on the east, aided by the Burmese. The work was commenced a few months ago, and a village destroyed; but it was arrested by a demonstration from the English Government, who sent two companies of Shans to aid Kephogyee on the defensive. This has stopped a general attack; but Menloun, a rebellious chief, who fled from the English territories last year, where he had long been a terror to the Karens of Shwaygyeen and the Yunsalen, has been received to the protection of the eastern Red Karens; and supported by them, issues from his retreat and plunders, killing all that opposes him in all the villages on the boundary. Within a week several villages have been attacked, and several persons killed in each, within a few miles of the place where I write. The boundary is a low range of hills not two miles distant, which no Karen on this side dares to ascend; so that he may be within twenty minutes' march of us at any time without our knowledge.

The eastern Red Karens are said to be three times as numerous as the western, and these must amount to fifty or sixty thousand. I am told there are ninety-four large villages and several smaller ones. This one has between three and four hundred houses, and there are three or four villages larger. Supposing them to average one hundred each, we shall have at five or six persons to a house, the population of the whole district, fifty or sixty thousand. I find the people, with all the savageness which is imputed to them, by far the most civilised Karens known. They are better clad, provide themselves with better food, are better skilled in the arts, are more vigorous, active, laborious, than any jungle-tribe I have met. They make their own knives, axes, swords, spears, hoes, bangles, silver ornaments, and earthenware, bits and bridles, saddles and stirrups. Every foot of land they cultivate is hoed with a heavy hoe of the European form, such as is never seen among either Burmese or Karens, but is used by the Chinese. They have cattle in great abundance, which are trained to carry panniers as donkeys are in Europe, and which bring their produce from the fields to the villages. Almost everything cultivated in Burmah is seen growing here. Jacks, tamarinds, mangoes, guavas, oleaster plums, limes, citrons, plantains, and other fruits are seen scattered in all their villages. Millet is cultivated in great abundance; beans of several species, vegetables, eggs, gourds, pumpkins, leeks, sugar-cane, and yams abound. Cotton flourishes here better than in any other locality where I have seen it in Burmah; and various dye-plants are cultivated. Their houses are kept in much better condition than among other Karens, and they fence in their yards and grounds, and have stiles and bars to take down and put up on their cross roads, reminding the traveller of the country in England and America before the advent of railroads.

They make both a spirituous and fermented liquor, the use of both which, it is said, is almost universal. Both the Saubwa and his son, who is nominated heir, never, however, taste either. Neither do I see any intoxicated Karens, while drunken Shans, whose religion forbids the use of such drinks altogether, pass my house daily.

A considerable portion of the population are slaves; but slavery here exists in its mildest form. There seems to be very little difference between master and slave. A little boy who comes to worship with his master, was stolen from one of our now Christian Bghai villages two years ago, and his father came recently to redeem him; but the child refused to return to his home. He is undoubtedly better clothed and better fed than he was in his father's family.

There is a cluster of Shan houses in this village, all whose inhabitants are the slaves of the Saubwa; but he makes no demand whatever on their earnings, and the men are allowed to go where they like; but the women are forbidden to leave the village, which is the only mark of slavery on them. In other respects they are slaves in name only. The master of the little boy bought him of a Bghai chief for a pair of oxen, when six or seven years of age; and while I am writing, two Tounghoo women are brought in for sale. For the one who is young, eighty rupees are demanded; for the older one, forty. This may seem to indicate the value of the commodity.

From all I see of them it is difficult to believe the stories that are told of their ferocity. Perhaps I see only their sunny side. They are civil, good tempered, and intelligent, and might be made anything desired with right training. They afford a singular specimen how a people can do without doctors, lawyers, and policemen. When sick, they have no medicine, but offering to evil spirits; and yet I see as many old people among them, if not more, than in cities where there is either a homoeopathy or allopathy physician at every corner, and a druggist's shop or a vendor of quack medicines in every street. They have no lawyers. Every one pleads his own cause, and offers his present to the judge without the charge of bribery. Yet, when the old gentleman, from whom there is no appeal, decides the case in the palace-yard before me, both parties retire apparently as well satisfied as litigants usually are. There is no police, no prisons, no penitentiaries, no schools for young thieves; and yet they have no locks on their doors, no watch-dogs in their yards, no man-traps or spring-guns in their gardens; and still thefts are said to be very uncommon. The men often talk very loud, but they do not often break each other's heads, as in Christian lands.

The people seem more strongly devoted to making offerings to evil spirits than any with whom I have met; yet they have very distinct traditions of the true God, whom they denominate Eapay. Eapay, they say, created the heavens and the earth, and man and all things. He associated with men at first; but when they ceased to obey him he left them, and is now in "the seventh heaven." When sick they often pray to God, saying, "O Lord Eapay, have mercy on me! I am sick, I am suffering, O Lord Eapay!" They have long traditions in poetry, I am told, concerning God. A small specimen given me I found to be in lines of ten syllables, to which they have tunes adapted, a measure that I never before met in Karen poetry. Like the rhymes of other dialects, it abounds in repetition, as may be seen by the following:—

"The earth at its origin, Eapay created.
The heavens at their origin, Eapay created.
Man at his origin, Eapay created.
The sun at his origin, Eapay created.
The moon at its origin, Eapay created.
The grass at its origin, Eapay created.
The trees at their origin, Eapay created.
The bamboos at their origin, Eapay created.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE NEW GOVERNOR. — According to the Athenæum, Sir William Denison is quietly mastering the details connected with his new position, and, consequently, is not much heard of by the public. Some natives, however, the other day, presented an address to his Excellency, in which it was kindly pointed out what he ought to do if he wished to rule Madras well. They were also good enough to tell him that he should follow in the wake of Sir Charles Trevelyan, and that they were ready at any time to furnish him with any information which might be required. They received the following diplomatic reply:—

"I return to you, the representatives of the Hindu and Mahomedan inhabitants of Madras, my best thanks for your kind congratulations on my arrival to assume the government of this important portion of her Majesty's dominions.

"I feel the magnitude of the trust confided to me, and can assure you that no effort will be wanting on my part to promote the happiness and the prosperity of the millions, who in this country are the loyal subjects of the Queen.

"To me, as her Majesty's representative, the people naturally look as the guardian of their interests, and I shall always be found willing, and I trust able, to give effect to her Majesty's gracious wishes and intentions towards her faithful subjects in this presidency. That in the performance of my duties I can depend upon your assistance I feel fully convinced, and I shall not hesitate to avail myself of your offer to afford me information whenever the occasion may present itself."

SIR PATRICK GRANT, the late Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army, embarked for England on board the steamer Bengal, at noon of the 27th February, a salute of fifteen guns being fired on the occasion. His Excellency the Governor was present, as were also the Commissioner of Police, the Master Attendant, and a few other gentlemen.

CURE FOR DYSENTERY.—The Burmese cure for dysentery seems simple, and is within the reach of the poorest native. It is as follows:—An equal weight of Palm jaggery and onions, boiled into a common jelly, a table spoonful of which should be taken three times a day. The only regimen necessary is, the patient should abstain from acids, spices, and liquor.

PROGRESS IN WYNAAD.—A Ceylon planter, now settled in Wynaad, thus describes the effect of a few years' coffee cultivation on the district. "Where hundreds weekly pass along the road, twelve years ago travellers were so rare that when a man was seen coming he felt certain it could only be a message for himself; and at a much later period a planter had to gallop for his life from a pack of wolves within a thousand yards of where I am writing this, in the midst of a smiling settlement, and a dozen European Bungalows in sight!" There are 10,000 acres in the district covered with coffee.

FAREWELL DINNER TO CAPTAIN GORDON.—On Thursday evening, March 7th, a graceful tribute of regard was paid by the officers of the Madras Volunteers to Adam A. Gordon, Esq., M.A., one of the oldest of their captains. Mr. Gordon being about to embark for England on sick leave, his brother officers availed themselves of the opportunity thus afforded of giving him a dinner. Unfortunately, Colonel Silver was compelled from indisposition to absent himself, but with true military exactness forwarded a medical certificate. At eight o'clock about fifty people sat down to an excellent dinner. Almost the whole number was made up of officers of the Volunteers. There were present about a dozen guests, civil and military.

CAPTAIN GRANT, it is said, has been ordered by the Secretary of State for India to rejoin his corps, the 11th Madras N.I., and that officer has accordingly returned to India.

THE FAMINE IN TRAVANCORE.—We (Cochin Courier) are happy to say that the accounts from Travancore are of a more cheering nature. Every assistance, in the way of private charity and providing labour, has been afforded to meet the necessities of the working classes; so that the distress has been confined to very narrow limits. From reliable information that has lately reached us, we learn that although the fearful drought that very generally prevailed in the southern districts had naturally led to scarcity and high prices, it is not so much the actual want of grain that is the cause of the prevailing misery, as the inability of the poor to purchase their supplies of food. A sufficiency of grain appears to exist in the country, but the means of obtaining it are wanting. It will be remembered that the emancipation of the slave population was extremely distasteful to the landholders. That measure gradually instilled into the slaves some degree of self reliance, and their former masters regarded with peculiar jealousy every effort on their part to obtain an independent livelihood. The same spirit of hostility was manifested towards all classes of labourers who looked for higher wages than were generally earned by agricultural labour. The landowners could no longer obtain workmen for their fields at the nominal rates they had been accustomed to give, and were by no means pleased at the competition that was created by the opening of public works and other means of employment, offering reasonable rates of wages. When, therefore, the rigours of an unfavourable season, with its attendant scarcity and high prices, and the destruction of many sources of independent occupation, rendered large bodies of the working classes utterly helpless, the wealthy landholders selfishly refused them employment, and left them to contend with all the horrors of distress and starvation. It was therefore necessary that the State should come forward to provide the men with the means of labour, which was their greatest want, and this, we are glad to learn, has now been done to a great extent, by increased expenditure upon the public works in progress throughout the country.

TESTIMONIAL TO SIR MARK CUBBON.—There was to have been a meeting a short time ago at Bangalore to compliment Sir Mark Cubbon prior to his departure from Mysore, but it did not take place, in consequence, as the Bangalore Herald of the 5th March states, of General Spencer prohibiting the attendance of officers as being contrary to the following regulation:—"Deliberations or discussions among any class of military men, having the object of conveying praise, censure, or any mark of approbation towards their superiors, or others, are strictly prohibited, as being subversive of discipline, and an assumption of power which belongs to the king alone, or to those officers to whom his majesty may be pleased to intrust the command and discipline of his troops." The Herald adds that there is a subscription list in circulation amongst the members of the commission and other non military persons, for a farewell testimonial to Sir Mark, the committee being headed by Mr. C. B. Saunders, the judicial commissioner; and that his highness the Rajah has, with his usual munificence, given Rs. 10,000 towards it.

A SINGULAR UNION.—The Mangalore correspondent of the Madras Times relates the marriage at that station of the Rev. H. A. Koundinya, a Concanese converted Brahmin, with a young German lady. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Moeyling, the founder of the Coorg Mission, in the presence of upwards of fifty Brahmans of the bridegroom's caste.

MADRAS IN THE OLDEN TIME.—From a list published by an Indian journal of the company's servants at Madras in 1699, it appears that there were 119 Englishmen, of whom 35 are entered as "freemen," or interlopers, and 38 as seamen. Only 26 of the whole 119 were married to English ladies, 14 to "Castees," 4 to "Mustees," 2 to French women, and 1 to a Georgian. Seventy-two were thus bachelors, while there were 14 English widows and 10 "single English young women." The census must have surely been taken immediately after the arrival of one East Indiaman, and before the departure of another.

TRADE OF PEGU.—The Rangoon Times gives the trade of Pegu for the second quarter of 1860-61, by sea, at Rs. 46,31,466, or at the rate of more than two millions sterling a-year. The trade of the quarter shows an increase in the customs' duties of Rs. 41,610 on the corresponding period of last year. The value of the trade by land was Rs. 16,99,530, yielding in duty to the State Rs. 1,15,457. This tells a different tale from the recent dolorous memorial of the Rangoon merchants. The autumn rice crop is said to have been very good.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BERBERA.—Brigadier Coghlan, our resident at Aden, has published an account of the trade at Berbera, the port due south of Aden on the coast between Cape Gardafui and the Straits of Babel-Mandel. The trade of Aden with the African ports is yearly 8 1/2 lakhs, of which six represents that with Berbera. Like that of Zanzibar, it is chiefly in the hands of Banians from India. During the great fair a British man-of-war rides off the port to preserve order among the traders, who during the cold weather number as many as 20,000. By the end of March the place is deserted. The principal exports from Berbera are coffee, ivory, gum Arabic, myrrh, frankincense, aloes, and other aromatic gums and resins, ghee, hides, ostrich feathers, sheep, cattle, and ponies. The principal imports are dates, rice, metals, glass beads, cotton, silk and satin cloths, hardware, and tobacco. Berbera is the Mosyllon of Pliny and Ptolemy. It was frequented by Greek traders from Egypt in ancient times. There they purchased the products of Africa direct from the sellers, instead of through the Sabaeen and Arab merchants who used to monopolise the Eastern trade.

A WELL QUALIFIED TRANSLATOR.—Mr. Romanjee Cursetjee, a Parsee merchant in Bombay, has had the temerity to publish a French translation of Byron. Misinterpreting the comments of the press on his acquaintance with the French language, he modestly explains in a letter to the Bombay Gazette that he owes his knowledge of French entirely to self-tuition; in fact, he never looked carefully into any French work except Holland's Grammar, and that only for a month. He frankly admits that he has not "paid attention to its masculine and feminine genders—adjectives—some of which are put before nouns—elisions and contractions which are by far too difficult to keep in mind, particularly for a merchant whose attention is invariably directed to his books and business."

Mr. H. YOUNG, late Chief Secretary of Bombay, has been allowed by the Home Government £1,000 per annum for the term of his absence in England, but with instructions that no opportunity be lost of appointing Mr. Young to the first available post.

THE DAVID SASSON INSTITUTION does not seem to be in a prosperous condition, the expenses considerably exceeding the income. The present number of inmates is eighty-five; but in future the maximum number admitted free of charge will be forty.

CARINJA.—At the meeting of the Bombay Asiatic Society, on the 14th February, a paper was read on the geology of the island of Carinja, about seven miles from Bombay. There is a dyke of dark basalt on the North-East of the mountain called "Great Carinja." In some parts of the dyke are found portions of an entirely granitic nature, of the same breadth as the dyke, and marked off against the basalt on each side by a defined line. The basalt is hard, tough, splintering in the fracture, and of a dark black iron-grey colour, identical with the basalt of Malabar Hill in the island of Bombay. The granite is composed of large crystalline masses of pink and white felspar, hyaline quartz, and small portions of glistening white chlorite. This establishes the fact that granite exists in situ among the traps of the westernmost border of India, and that it probably belongs to an age posterior to the myocene or middle-tertiary period.

BHOWNUGGUR.—Sir George Clerk seems to have been unusually gracious to the Rajah of Bhownuggur during his late visit to Kattyawar. To the assurance that the British Government desired to secure all the loyal princes of India in the exercise of their privileges, the Rajah replied that he and all his brother chiefs felt a strong attachment to the Empress of India. Bhownuggur will henceforth be on the footing of a British port, and Soondrye be opened as a foreign port "for the import and export of all articles which have been duly exported from British ports in India, with the exception of spirits, salt, and opium."

THE PARSEE HIGH PRIEST, Eduljee Dorabjee Jamaspassana, died recently at the age of 76. He was a leading member of the Parsee community and was well acquainted with the Persian, Pehlvi, Arabic, and Sanscrit languages.

POPEY IN WESTERN INDIA.—The "Administrator of the Vicariates of Poona and Bombay" has issued a pastoral letter, denouncing those of his flock who send their children to Protestant schools. Much better are the Government schools, in his opinion, for they are godless altogether. He draws a sad picture of the state of Popery in Western India. The young, and many men of a mature age, will not go to confession. This state of things "so broke the heart of our venerable predecessor, that he preferred rather to abandon this mission than to witness any longer such deplorable evils, to which he could afford no remedy." So "inconstant" are some pupils that after a short stay in the Popish schools they "return to Protestant institutions under frivolous pretences." Roman Catholic parents are as wise as Protestants in their generation, and will send their children to the school where the best education is given, in spite of the priests.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—The third Matriculation Examination of the Bombay University commenced on the 4th of March at the Town Hall. Altogether 80 candidates presented themselves at the examination, of whom 53 were Hindoos, 3 Parsees, 1 Portuguese, and 1 Mahomedan. Thirty of the candidates were from the Elphinstone College, 17 from the Elphinstone School, 2 from the Free General Assembly's Institution, 34 from the Poona College, 2 from the Poona Free Assembly's School, and 1 from the Belgaum School. During the day paper questions on the English grammar and idiom, and vernacular grammar and idiom were given, and each candidate was called up, during the time allowed for answering the papers, to be examined orally in English. Sir Alexander Grant and the Rev. J. S. S. Robertson were engaged in conducting the oral examination in English. The members of the Senate and examiners who attended at the examination were Dr. Harkness, Dr. Sinclair, the University Registrar; Rev. Dr. Wilson, Rev. J. S. S. Robertson, Sir A. Grant, Bart., E. I. Howard, Esq., H. Coke, Esq., Major Candy, N. Fernandez, Esq., Moosa Khan, Esq., Dr. John Peet, M.D., and Nanabhai Haridass, Esq. At the close of the examination, the superintending officer, Dr. Harkness, sealed up the answers of all the candidates, and forwarded them immediately to the registrar.

INAM COMMISSION.—We (Bombay Gazette) understand that in consequence of the breaking up of the Inam Commission the services of the following gentlemen have been dispensed with:—Major Gordon, Inam Commissioner, Southern Division. Captain Dods, Assistant Inam Commissioner, Northern Division. Mr. Gopalrow Hurree, Assistant Inam Commissioner, Sattarah. Messrs. R. Welsh, Rungrow Bhimajee, and Vishnoo Phurusram, Sub-assistant Inam Commissioners, Northern Division. Mr. R. W. Ravenscroft, of the Guzerat Special Commission. Mr. Cooverjee Cowasjee, of the Guzerat Special Commission. Mr. Madhew Nursing, of the Guzerat Special Commission. The proposed summary settlement of Inam and other claims will be conducted by the remaining members of the Alienation Department, under the supervision of the Revenue Commissioners of the Northern and Southern Divisions. The services of Messrs. F. F. Arbuthnot and S. J. Harrison (unconvicted) will be retained for duties in connection with the Guzerat Alienation Enquiry, with a small establishment. Mr. Pestonjee Jehangeer, Sub-assistant Inam Commissioner Northern Division, is appointed an assistant to Mr. Mansfield, Revenue Commissioner Northern Division; and Mr. Bhasker Damodur, an assistant to Mr. Rose, Revenue Commissioner Southern Division. The rest of the establishment will be kept on until the summary settlement is completed. By this arrangement an annual saving of about a lac and a quarter of rupees will be effected.

MOUNT ABOO.—At Bombay a meeting of the Medical and Physical Society was held, at which was read a very interesting paper on the Mount Aboo Sanatorium, by Doctor Moore. We learn that the altitude of the hill is 4,500 feet above the level of the sea, and that the thermometer in the hot weather seldom exceeds 80 deg. While 297 inches of rain have fallen in one year at Mahableshwar, the average fall at Mount Aboo is 55. The advantages of the Sanatorium in question are that its elevation does not cause abdominal complaints. Cholera has never prevailed there.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, March 2.—The London mail of January 10th arrived here on the 27th February. The news from this part of the East which goes home by the present mail is of some importance as far as concerns Japan. We are now in a condition to confirm the accounts sent by last Overland mail in regard to the unfortunate murder at Yeddo of Mr. Heuskin, interpreter to the American Consul there. This unhappy gentleman, it appears, had been frequently cautioned, especially of late, to be more careful of exposing himself to maltreatment. Why he more than any one else should have been so cautioned is at present only dimly hinted at. It would seem that his accurate knowledge of the Japanese language had brought him acquainted with certain nefarious designs of the anti-foreign party at Yeddo, which, it was supposed, could only be concealed effectually by his removal. He, however, paid no attention to the so-called cautions. On the night of Monday, the 14th December, he was returning from the house of the Prussian Minister, where he had been dining. He was accompanied by three bettos and four mounted Yakunins, but was waylaid by a body of seven or eight armed Japanese, who struck out the lights carried by his servants, and rushed yelling upon their victim. He spurred his horse and galloped off, but did not escape receiving several sword wounds, which subsequently proved fatal. In the meantime one of the Yakunins, whose horse had been wounded, dismounted and proceeded to the American Legation for assistance. This was obtained, and several medical men, including two native doctors, were soon in attendance, but their aid was of no avail. The unfortunate gentleman, after receiving the last rites of his church, expired about midnight. He was buried on the 18th, his funeral being attended by the Governor and all the ministers of legation. Shortly after, the ministers of the various embassies at Japan quitted Yeddo, with the exception of the American minister, who declined to leave, saying that his life was as safe in Yeddo as it had ever been. In another column of this paper will be found the despatch addressed by Mr. Alcock to the Japanese ministers, in which he intimates his retirement to Yokohama, and his reasons for that step. It appears to us that the retirement and the reasons for it are equally weak. Among the last of Mr. Heuskin's public acts appears to have been the assistance he rendered towards the conclusion of the Prussian treaty with Japan, which takes effect two years hence. It is not reported that trade has been at all interfered with by these events.

From Tien-tsin and the extreme North there is almost nothing in the way of news during the past fortnight. What there is may be confined to the movements of that portion of the fleet still remaining in the north. Off the Peiho were the Watchful and Clown gunboats. The Drake gunboat and the Odin were at Hope Sound. The Janus having been got off the reef there, had gone to Shanghai. The Reynard, with a mail from Shanghai, could not get within sight of the Furious on account of the ice. At Hope Sound the thermometer at noon stood at 20 degrees. Food was scarce and dear. The Woodcock is reported at Chefoo.

The only news from Shanghai is the departure of the Yang-tze expedition, which consists of the following vessels:—Centaur, Coromandel, Cooper, Atalante, Waterman, Banterer, Bouncer, and Havoc.

The gentlemen appointed to represent the commercial community in this expedition are Messrs. Hamilton, Michie, and Ballance. The Admiral did not wait for Mr. Parkes, who therefore followed in a gunboat. The rumour that various rebel movements had been successful of late is still circulating, as also that the redoubtable Sang-ko-lin-sin had been defeated by the Shantung insurgents. There are as yet no symptoms of the Emperor's being in a mood to return to Peking.

From Swatow, a correspondent informs us that matters there are calm. Double Island has now begun to exhibit signs of Western occupancy; it possesses a book-club, two billiard tables, and a bowling alley, not to speak of three consuls—English, American, and Hamburg—with the full complement of officials, who seem to enjoy each other's society, and go on together in harmony.

From Canton we have unpleasant news, to the effect that a tragedy had occurred on board the vessel Leonidas. This ship was about to sail with a cargo of coolies shipped by the French Emigration office, and was lying at anchor three miles below the Macao Fort. While the officers and men were at breakfast about 9 o'clock, the coolies rose and attempted to murder all the Europeans on board, and to set fire to the ship. Owing to the prompt courage of Captain Wood, seconded by his officers and men, the coolies were overcome and the fire quenched. Mrs. Wood had a narrow escape for her life. Assistance was obtained, and the gunboat Weasel towed back the Leonidas to her former anchorage opposite the Sha-meen. The matter is undergoing investigation by both foreign and Chinese authorities. Of the 290 coolies on board, about 90 are missing, who have jumped overboard, have been drowned, or have escaped on shore. Among eight Europeans who were more or less hurt in the affray, the third officer, Mr. Tucker, is dangerously wounded.

From Macao there is no news of importance.

In Hong Kong the past fortnight has been devoted to that kind of mild dissipation that usually attends the annual races. The races occupied three days, and if a day previously be allowed for making up little bets, and a day following for "settling," it will be seen that the best part of a week has been given up to recreation. What with this, and two "balls," one at the Governor's and another at the club, not to speak of a concert and some capital amateur theatrical performances, there has been more gaiety compressed into the past two weeks than is usual in any two months during the rest of the year. The thermometer varies between fifty and sixty.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, March 16.—During the past fortnight, although the temperature has continued high, a good deal of rain has fallen, interfering somewhat with the preparation of coffee at Colombo, and bringing out a splendid show of blossom on the majority of the lower coffee districts. On some of the low, wet, and wind beaten districts the deficiency of crops is beyond even the worst anticipations formed; while about Kallebokka and other rainy neighbourhoods wonderful harvests have been gathered in: 17½ cwt. an acre in one case.

Seven ships have sailed with coffee, all for Great Britain. In six which cleared for London the exports included 34,218 cwt. plantation coffee, and 5,822 native; together, 40,040. A single vessel for Cork took 719 cwt. plantation; so that the addition to our exports has been 34,937 plantation, and 5,822 native; total, 40,759. In plantation we are now just 10,000 cwt. ahead of the corresponding period in last season; but the deficiency in native is no less than 42,000 cwt.; so that the falling off in the total is 32,000—a figure which will, we suspect, swell as the season rolls on.

In cinnamon there is also a falling off, while the exports of oil show an immense increase on the previous three seasons.

The Governor has gone to Kandy—has held his first levee—and his Excellency's promised visits to the various planting districts are looked for with much anxiety.

The immigration scheme has made but little progress since our last. The deputation from the Planters' Association were not able to bring the Governor over to their views in favour of an immediate order for steamers. His Excellency expressed himself anxious to have yet another expression of opinion from a public meeting; but, as far as the Planters' Association is concerned, a clear and definite opinion in favour of the immediate purchase of the steamers has been already expressed. They consider Government pledged to the purchase of the vessels. With the Governor no doubt the difficulty is to find the purchase-money, while the cost of working the steamers is also a serious consideration. Captain Graham, meanwhile, has proceeded to examine the North Road, and Mr. Robert Dawson, the able secretary of the board, has just returned from a tour in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies. The results of his observations are to be given to the public in a detailed report. Pending its publication we have been given to understand that it does not hold out much hope of our obtaining a supply of labour from any of the districts he has visited, on more advantageous terms than in those from which we have hitherto obtained the hands we required.

While the Governor is about to visit the interior of the island, the Major-general, accompanied by his staff, including the deputy inspector-general of hospitals, Dr. Dane, starts this day in the Pearl, on a tour of inspection. The sudden death of Major Vanderspar has caused a move upwards in the Ceylon rifle regiment. Colonel MacDonald again assumes the post of Commandant at Galle. There is a good deal of sickness in the shape of fever and cholera abroad; and in Colombo the occasion has been taken again to bring forward a plan for the supply of water.

Mr. Robert Dawson has resigned the office of secretary to the Immigration Company, and has joined the firm of Dawson, McMinn and Co.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

SARAWAK.—The Rainbow arrived at the town of Kuching from this on the 11th February, with Sir James Brooke, &c., on board. The Rajah was most affectionately welcomed back by his people, and on the night of his arrival the town was illuminated by all classes, Europeans, Chinese and Malays. In honour of the event the courts were closed and a week's holiday was proclaimed. Chiefs from all quarters continued to arrive daily up to the time of the steamer's departure to pay their respects to the Rajah. On the 20th the usual New Year's-day boat races, which had been postponed until the Rajah's arrival, came off with unusual spirit. The first race, contested by upwards of twenty large boats, manned by some 300 men, was a beautiful sight. Other sports, such as sack races, climbing a greasy pole, succeeded, and the greatest hilarity prevailed. The Sarawak flag was then formally hoisted on board the Rainbow, under a salute of 21 guns. On the 22nd a grand fete was given by Mr. Helms, the manager of the Borneo Company, to inaugurate the opening of their extensive steam machinery. The machinery was set in motion by Sir James Brooke and worked admirably. It is calculated that this manufactory will turn out ten tons of sago flour or tapioca per diem. The process is similar to that of starch-making in England. It is simple, and promises to be very economical, compared with the rude process of the Chinese. Connected with this factory are extensive saw mills, &c. Great credit is due to the active manager of the company in Sarawak for the successful erection of this complicated machinery under great difficulties. As soon as it was known that the company intended to manufacture tapioca considerable quantities of the kayu ubi were brought from the neighbouring islands, and its cultivation on a large scale has been commenced in Sarawak by Chinese, Malays and Dyaks. The machinery is adapted to the manufacture of sugar, and the cultivation of sugar cane is also being entered on with great zeal by the natives. On the 23rd the festivities closed with a feast given by the Rajah to the Malays. A large building was erected for this purpose, and decorated with flowers and flags. At three o'clock, all being prepared, Sir James, surrounded by the Europeans and principal natives, sat down on a raised dais at one end, the rest of the building being filled by upwards of seven hundred of his people, when all partook of a plentiful repast. There was afterwards a rifle match for a kris. Sarawak was perfectly quiet, and the traders were actively preparing their boats for a trading expedition to Java. This trade had been almost entirely relinquished of late for the more lucrative Muka trade, but has revived, as these shrewd men know full well there is no security in trading with a country filled with their bitter enemies, as Muka is at present. Some boats have lately arrived from Oya, reporting that Muka was being again very strongly fortified by Serif Masahore and his followers, who were oppressing the unhappy Muka people in every way. All classes were suffering greatly from famine, produced by the interruption of their trade with Sarawak, from which place they formerly drew their supplies of rice, salt, tobacco, &c. A number of persons from Muka had fled to Sarawak, while others had retired into the interior, to escape the exactions of Serif Masahore. Ship-building is being prosecuted with spirit, and this branch of industry is capable of being largely developed, the forests of Sarawak affording inexhaustible supplies of suitable timber. A handsome schooner of some 150 tons was lately launched at Kuching.—Singapore Free Press.

The Hon. Mr. Edwardes, Governor of Labuan, is expected at Singapore by the first opportunity, on his way to England. It is supposed he has resigned his appointment in consequence of the disapprobation expressed by her Majesty's Government of his conduct in the Muka business.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—In the residences of Soerakarta, Djokjokarta, Kadu, Bagelan, and Banyumass, floods have taken place which have inflicted immense damage. Hundreds of persons have lost their lives, and many thousands have been ruined. Earthslips have also taken place in many places, which have destroyed whole tracts of country. Several villages have been completely submerged, and the roads have been everywhere rendered impassable. The telegraphic communication had been interrupted, so that full particulars of this calamity had not been received, but it is known that the destruction of houses, crops, stores of all kinds, roads, &c., has been such that many millions will not compensate for it.

PINANG.—The Governor visited the south of Province Wellesley last week. He left Butterworth accompanied by his secretary and the Assistant-Resident on Tuesday morning, proceeded by boat to Kwalla Pry, the landing-place of the ferry on the north of the river being impracticable. Juru bridge was inspected, and the preparations for the new one, consisting of a copper-dam for the erection of one of the buttresses. Alma and Tasik estates were next visited, the night being passed at the latter. Next morning the route lay by Valdor, Jawi and Nibong Tibal on the Krian. After breakfasting at Caledonia estate, Colonel Cavenagh proceeded in the afternoon by water to Batu Kawan, and landed at the south end of the island, where horses were in readiness to take the party through the whole length of the estate to the works where they dined and slept. On Thursday morning the Governor inspected Bukit Tambun public buildings, and then embarked in the Hooghly boat, which took in on board the steamer then anchored near Pulo Kra, whence they steamed back to Pinang. Shortly before starting, two large Malay boats, crowded with the principal inhabitants of Pulo Kra, including several ladies and some children, came off to inspect the steamer, and although there was only time to take a hasty look at the engines, they seemed highly delighted. After they had got into their boats, they passed up the end of a rope for the purpose of having a tow, but it broke before they had been towed a hundred yards, so they were disappointed.—Pinang Gazette, Feb. 23.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Feb. 2.—The Ameer was highly pleased with the news of Mohamed Allee's victory over the Kafrees, and in a fit of joy turned towards Shere Allee Khan and said, that as Mahomed Allee Khan had received a wound in his hand, why did he (Shere Allee) not bring him back to Jellalabad, as he would not wish to let the poor boy remain in such a state in the camp. On this Shere Allee Khan replied that he had just received a private letter from Mohamed Allee, in which he told him that his wound was a very slight one, and that he was doing well. A letter was ordered to be written and sent to Mohamed Allee Khan, directing him to leave some troops under some officers at Bakheel and himself to come to Jellalabad.—Feb. 3.—Mohamed Ameen Khan's urzee, containing the following intelligence from Heerat, was received to-day. After Mamana had been taken by the Persians under Sirdar Mohamed Omer Khan, brother of Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, a vakeel had been sent by the ruler of Heerat, to the Hakims of Undkhoe and Shiburghan, with a request to shake off the yoke of Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, and to obey the Persian Government. The Vakeel accordingly went to the above-named Hakims, and told them that formerly, in the times of Wuzer Yar Mohamed Khan, the late ruler of Heerat, the country containing Mamana, Undkhoe, and Shiburghan belonged to Heerat; that it was only lately that Ufzul Khan had encroached upon the above-named places, and advised them to go to Sirdar Mohamed Omer Khan, the brother of Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, now at Mamana, and to do as he says. The Vakeel also gave them hopes that if they would take his advice they would be allowed one year's revenue and made great men. The Hakims, instead of listening to the Vakeel's advice, made him prisoner, and sent him to Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan, who spoke to the Vakeel as follows:—"Your master Sooltan Ahmed Jan is dreaming of taking Undkhoe and Shiburghan, but he does not know that I am intending to march on Heerat, as soon as arrangements are completed." Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan also stated in his urzee, that Sooltan Ahmed Jan had been so much out of temper when he had heard that his Vakeel had been taken prisoner by Sirdar Ufzul Khan, that he had ordered his troops to be ready to march to Toorkistan. It was given out in Heerat that Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan was going to command the troops in person. A letter was ordered by the Ameer to be written to Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan, directing him to collect all his available troops in one place and to keep a sharp look out on the movements of the Persian troops. The Ameer also told him that after Nouroze (New Year) a large army would be sent to Toorkistan. The original letter of Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan was ordered to be enclosed.—Feb. 4.—The Ameer held his Durbar in the garden of Sirdar Ghoolam Heider Khan. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan was desired to inform the chief of the Kazalbash Sowars, that the matters had been settled at Bakeel and therefore their services were not required at that place. It is ascertained from the letters received from Baboo Kara, by the merchants of this place, that the young King of Bokhara is more kind and generous to his people than his late father was. It is said that when Akoondzadah Sirajood-deen, the Ameer's Ambassador, went there he treated him very kindly, and ordered his chiefs to see that the Akoondzadah was not in want of anything. The late King of Bokhara is said to have taken a quantity of silver from the merchants and bankers of Bokhara, on the plea that he would get the silver coins made and give them in return. After the demise of the king the merchants had gone to the young King and had asked for the money. The present King, after inquiring into the matter, had ordered their silver, which had not as yet been made into coins, to be given back to them, but being advised by the Wazeer that the silver would be wanted for the mint, he had ordered the merchants to make out their accounts, and to be paid in gold.—Feb. 5.—It is ascertained from a person just arrived from Cabul that the corn-sellers of the market of Cabul had gone to Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, the present Governor of Cabool, and offered him six hundred rupees, provided he would allow them to sell the grain in the munde. On this Wully Mohamed had replied that he was not habituated to take bribes; he would be very glad if they would give this sum towards the relief of the poor people who were starving. In short, Wully Mohamed Khan did not allow any shopkeeper to sell the grain. The Ameer was very much pleased with Wully Mohamed Khan's conduct.—Feb. 6.—The Durbar was held as usual in the garden of Ghoolam Heider Khan. The Ambassador of the Bokhara Court, with Sirdar Shere Allee Khan, attended the Durbar, and handed over to the Ameer the letter which he had received from his master. It was written in the letter addressed to the Ambassador that, as his presence was urgently required, he was to take leave from the Ameer and reach Bokhara as soon as possible. After perusal of the urzee, the Ameer told the Ambassador to wait a few days more, and then he would dismiss him with the due honour. The Ameer then turned towards Nazir Naem Khan, and told him not to be afraid of anyone in Cabool or Jellalabad, as this time he would send him to Toorkistan to Ufzul Khan, who would give him a respectable situation. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan has been taking all the jageers in Cabool and Jellalabad in contract for himself, and does not allow anyone else to keep any place either by contract or as a jageer.—Feb. 7.—The Ameer held a private council to-day. Sirdars Sooltan Mohamed Khan, Shere Allee Khan, and Ghoolam Mohamed Khan were sent for to discuss the matter of the Ambassador. The Ameer said it was his intention to keep the Ambassador as long as the Nouroz, and then to send him along with the troops which he was going to send to Toorkistan under one of his sons, but as the King of Bokhara urgently required him, he could not keep him against his wishes. Ghoolam Mohamed Khan seconded the same, but the other Sirdars passed their opinion to the effect that it was quite useless to keep the Ambassador when he had been written for by his master. At last it was decided that he should be sent away with the Khillut &c. Shah Murd Khan was then sent for by the Ameer, and asked if he had received the Cashmere shawls, &c., which he had ordered some time ago. He had just heard, he said, from Peshawur that the kafilah, which his man with the Cashmere purchases is accompanying, had left Peshawur for Jellalabad, and would be there in two or three days.—Feb. 9.—An urzee was to-day received from Sirdar Mohamed Ameer Khan from Kandahar, in which he informed the Ameer that Meer Ufzul Khan, son of Sirdar Kohindil Khan, who had lately gone to Heerat and had received a jageer of sixty thousand rupees a year in Subzawar, having been instigated by Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, the ruler of Heerat, had marched with his troops on Furrah near Kandahar, and had taken that fort without any opposition or bloodshed. Some of his (Sirdar Mohamed Ameen's) sowars of the garrison of Furrah had surrendered, while the others being unable to resist the stronger party were obliged to leave the fort and to make speed to Kandahar. In appearance the Kandahar Affghans were showing their regard to him (Mohamed Ameen), but, in reality, they were all wishing for Meer Ufzul Khan. Mohamed Ameen Khan also stated in his urzee, that it was not Meer Ufzul Khan who had done all this, but it was the wish and order of Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, who had been meditating it for a long time. If a good reinforcement was not sent in time (continued Mohamed Ameen), it would be a hard job for him to keep the Kandaharees quiet, if ever they took it into their heads to revolt. As soon as the Ameer had glanced over the urzee he broke up the durbar and retired to his seraglio.—Feb. 10.—Sirdars Mohamed Oosman Khan, Ubdoolwahab Khan, Shere Allee Khan, and Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, Mookhtear, were sent for by the Ameer, and a private council held. The urzee of Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan was handed over to the abovenamed Sirdars, and they were desired to pass their opinion about the subject. "I knew all along," said the Ameer, "that Sirdar Sooltan Jan, being one of my family, would never have borne such an enmity towards me, and so I never thought of him; but now I am fully convinced that he is a double-faced man because in the first place he sent his brother, Sirdar Oomer Khan, with troops on Mamana, and now he has sent Meer Ufzul Khan to Furrah. Had it not been for Sooltan Ahmed Jan, Meer Ufzul Khan dare not come and take Furrah." On this Ghoolam Mohamed Khan stated that he knew very well that whatever Sooltan Ahmed Jan had done, it must have been the order of the King of Persia, as he never does anything until he receives the order direct from the King. "Whether it be the King of Persia or Sooltan Ahmed Jan himself," remarked the Ameer, "I know very well that Sooltan Ahmed Jan is now thinking of encroaching upon Toorkistan and Affghanistan, if he can." It was then decided that Sirdar Shere Allee Khan with some cavalry should start at once for Kandahar, and after Nouroze a good number of troops would march for that place.—Feb. 11.—To-day, after the Durbar had been broken up the Ameer went to Sirdar Mohamed Oosman Khan, and having consulted with him about some private affairs, returned and inspected his horses. The following is ascertained by a merchant, just arrived from Kandahar. He says, it is about twenty-six days since, when he was going to leave Kandahar for Jellalabad, a European had arrived there from Heerat, and had been very kindly received by Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan. Mahomed Ameen Khan having been told by the gentleman that he intended to visit Cabool, persuaded him not to do so, until he, Mahomed Ameen, had informed the Ameer and had received his permission. On this the gentleman urged him, saying that if he would not allow him to travel by the direct road, he would make his journey via Shikarpore, but go to Cabool he must, and see the Ameer at once.—Feb. 12.—The Durbar was held as usual. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan stated before the Ameer that the roads from Jellalabad to Kandahar were quite impassable for troops, and as almost all his troops were on service in Kohibund and other places, he was quite at a loss what to do. "Never mind the troops," said the Ameer, "it would be better if you would go to Kandahar straight off and see how things are going on there." As all the Kandaharees were dissatisfied with Mahomed Ameen Khan, the Ameer was afraid of their showing their teeth and causing rebellion. As for the troops he need not be afraid, as he would send a strong army after Nouroze. Shan Murd Khan was then desired to write to the officers of the different troops in Kohibund and Baghistan, to make haste to march back to Jellalabad after leaving a few of his men in charge of the places.—Feb. 13.—Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan's letter was to-day received from Cabool. He intimated to the Ameer that the people of Hazara Shaikh Allee had quarrelled amongst themselves and had wounded the Hakim of that place, who had gone to put a stop to the affray. When he, Wully Mohamed, had heard of this he had ordered Auleejah Ubdool Kareem Khan Populzie to go with fifty sowars and punish the Shaikh Allee people. As soon as the Hazara men were informed of the arrival of the Auleejah, then they deserted the village and went up to Kohibund. Some of the Shaikh Allee Hazara chiefs have now come in, and asked for pardon on the plea that they had not intentionally wounded their Hakim, but it had been done by chance. They have also brought five hundred rupees as a fine, if the Ameer would forgive them. As the Hakim has been severely wounded, he, Wully Mohamed, does not know whether to accept their offer or to refuse their terms. The Ameer ordered a letter to be written to Sirdar Wully Mohamed Khan, directing him to take the fine and to allow the Hazara people to reside in the villages for the present. On his return to Cabool he would look into the affair. Wully Mohamed was also desired to get the wounded Hakim to Cabool, and to look after him.—Feb. 14.—It is ascertained by the paish khidmut of the Ameer that a private letter was received to-day by the Ameer from Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan from Toorkistan, to the following effect:—"When Sirdar Oomar Khan, brother of Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, arrived at Mamana, all the Jamshadees, with the exception of the natives of Khanabad and Shiburghan, where Sooltan Ahmed Jan's son had been killed in the late battle, welcomed him with great joy and obedience. The Shiburghanees being afraid of Oomar Khan, came to him (Sirdar Ufzul Khan), and said that if he would give them some of his regular troops they would at once go and cause disturbances in Mamana, and by degrees would get that place for him. On this Ufzul Khan gave them hopes, requesting them to wait a few days. As soon as the Shiburghanees arrived at their native place they caused a rebellion. Some fighting took place in which a few men were killed and wounded on both sides. When he, Ufzul Khan, heard of this, he ordered one battalion of infantry, four hundred sowars and four guns, under Auleejah Nusroollah Khan, Uchuckzæ, to march to the fort Khanabad. Sirdar Ufzul Khan has again requested the Ameer to send troops to Toorkistan.—Feb. 15.—To-day the Durbar was held in the garden of Mohamed Ukbur Khan. Ubdool-razak Khan Moostoufee was desired by the Ameer to write a letter to Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, directing him to collect as many troops as he could at Gurrushk, but not to march onwards, to make alliances with the chiefs of Kandahar, Gurrushk, &c., and to keep the people well pleased by administering justice. He was also told that Sirdar Shere Allee Khan was very nearly going to leave for Kandahar, and that the troops would be sent after Nouroz.—Feb. 16.—Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, Mookhtear, attended the Durbar and complained of his Syce, who had gone in the city to buy some barley for the horses, having been so unmercifully beaten by the Kotwal, that the poor fellow had been brought to the camp on the charpoy. Ghoolam Mohamed being asked by the Ameer the cause of the quarrel, replied, that the Syce had some words with the corn-seller, and that was all. He also told the Ameer that his sons were going to pay off the Kotwal, but he has forbidden them to do so. The Ameer there and then sent for Subzy Allee Khan, Kotwal, and asked him angrily what business had he to interfere with his camp followers. The Kotwal made several excuses, but to no purpose, as the Ameer fined him twenty rupees, and made him pay the sum to the sweeper or Syce. Shah Murd Khan was told by the Ameer that as this was always the case with the corn-sellers, he was to make arrangements so that one shop-keeper was to supply the barley, &c., to one khan or chief, and then there would be no confusion. Accordingly Shah Murd Khan informed the corn-sellers and told them to supply the camp with all the things required.—Feb. 17.—The following are the contents of the urzee received to-day from Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan, from Kandahar. When Abdool Ghafoor Khan, the former chief of Dahmunde, heard that Meer Ufzul Khan, the son of the late Sirdar Kohindil Khan, had made himself master of Furrah, he went to him and said that if he would be so kind as to give him some of his troops he would go and take his native place, Dahmunde, which in 1275 Hijree, had been captured by Sirdar Futteh Mohamed Khan, son of late Wuzeer Mohamed Ukhbur Khan. Meer Ufzul Khan complied with his request and placed his two thousand cavalry and infantry at his disposal. Abdool Ghafoor Khan, with the above-mentioned body of regular troops, and a number of people of his own tribe, marched on Dahmunde and besieged it. The small number of the garrison of the fort finding that they were unable to oppose the besiegers, quietly vacated the fort and made their escape to Kandahar. The moment Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan got notice of this, he wrote to Sirdar Mohamed Shurreef Khan, his brother, under whose charge the place was, to march with his troops to Dahmunde and retake it. Mohamed Shurreef Khan, instead of listening to his brother's advice, wrote to him (Mohamed Ameen Khan) in reply that he was not strong enough to go and fight with Meer Ufzul Khan, if he Mohamed Ameen wished to do so, he was at liberty to go and fight. The Ameer got quite mad when he perused the urzee, and called Mohamed Shurreef Khan names in the durbar.—Feb. 18.—The durbar was held as usual. The Ameer handed over the letter which he had received the other day from Mohamed Ameen Khan to Sirdar Shere Allee Khan to read, and addressed him as follows:—"Did I not tell you when in Cabool that your brother, Shurreef Khan, who was fond of drinking, was not fit for the Hakoomut and Sirdaree." "Now see," continued the Ameer, "the enemy is at the door, and Mohamed Shurreef Khan is fast asleep." Shere Allee read the letter over and over, and for a moment remained downcast and silent, and then looking up at the Ameer, replied,—"Really I did not know when we were sending Mohamed Shurreef to Khandar, that he would prove himself so unworthy a man." A letter was ordered to be written to Mohamed Ameen Khan, directing him to try Shurreef Khan once again, if he took his advice good and well, otherwise to keep him quiet until Shere Allee Khan had arrived at Kandahar, and then to send Shurreef Khan as a prisoner to Cabool. A letter was also written to Shurreef Khan, telling him to do as he was bid by his brother, Ameen Khan.—Feb. 19.—News was received from Bookhara to the effect that when the Hakim of Summurkund had introduced the chiefs and the Jageerdars of that place to the young King of Bookhara, the King had received them very kindly, and had granted upon them good khilluts and more Jageers respectively. The Hakim of Ooratpa had also made his appearance in Summurkund, and offered to the King valuable presents. The King, after taking his son in hostage, had conferred upon him a khillut, and restored him to the Hakoomut of Ooratpa. Having thus treated the people of Summurkund, the King had left for Shahur Subz, where he intended to remain for a month. "If these are the habits of the King of Bookhara," said the Ameer to Ghoolam Mohamed Khan, "he will very soon become a popular King."—Feb. 20.—Sirdar Mohamed Oosman Khan attended the durbar, and applied to the Ameer for six days' leave of absence to go to Balabang to see his son who had been taken ill. Sirdar Shere Allee Khan is preparing himself for Kandahar. He is examining the accounts of the revenue of Jellalabad which place he has also taken in contract. Shah Murd Khan and the Moustoufee are making Shere Allee Khan understand all the present and past accounts. While playing chess, Ghoolam Mohamed asked the Ameer where probably to spend the Eel? "In Cabool very likely," replied the Ameer.—Feb. 21.—An urzee was received from Sirdar Mohamed Allee Khan from Bakheel in Lughman, in which he informed the Ameer that Uta Mohamed Khan with his followers had gone to the fort of Mohamed Shah Khan and had made an alliance with the Kafur Seeah Posh people. After he (Mohamed Allee) had placed his own officers at Bakheel, he would leave for Jellalabad. He also stated in the urzee that some old residents of Bakheel had waited on him, and asked for pardon, saying that Uta Mohamed was the only ringleader of the rebellion, and he should have been punished; as for them, they were poor natives of Bakheel, and as they had nothing to do with the affair they should be allowed to occupy their houses. On this the Ameer ordered a letter to be written to Mohamed Allee Khan telling him that if such was the case the Jageer and the houses of Uta Mohamed were to be confiscated, while the other inhabitants were to be allowed to go and reside in them.—Feb. 22.—Sirdar Mohamed Ufzul Khan's urzee was to-day received from Tash Kurgan in the Toorkistan. He intimated to the Ameer that as the Persian troops were increasing every day in Mamana, and he was doubtful of the fidelity of the Hakims of Indkhoe and Shiburghan he had thought it advisable to send his son Ubdoolrahman Khan with two thousand sowars, one battalion of infantry, and four guns, to the city of Surbool, which is situated between Mamana and Indkhoe. He had written to the Hakim of Indkhoe and Shiburghan to come to him at Tash Kurkhan, as he wanted to speak to them personally on some important matters, and if they complied with his request, he intended to take them prisoners. On this the Ameer ordered an answer to be written to Ufzul Khan, directing him to be very careful of his country, and if he really had any suspicion of the honesty of the above-named Hakims, to keep them with him as friends and not as prisoners, otherwise to give them good Khilluts and to dismiss them with honour. In the latter case it would be good if he (Mohamed Ufzul), had taken one of their sons a hostage.—Feb. 23.—Sirdar Wallee Mohamed Khan informed the Ameer in his urzee from Cabool that he had received a letter from his brother Sirdar Mohamed Ameen Khan from Kandahar, in which he had bitterly complained of the unworthy conduct of Mohamed Shurreef Khan, and had requested him, Wallee Mohamed, to bring the matter to the Ameer's notice. The Ameer wrote to him in reply that he had already written to Mohamed Ameen Khan, and Mohamed Shurreef Khan about the subject, and requested him also to write to his brother to keep Shurreef Khan on good terms, until the arrival of Shere Allee Khan, at Kandahar.—Feb. 24.—Sirdar Mohamed Azim Khan's letter was to-day received by a kossid from Khanabad in Koonduz. He informed the Ameer, that the ruler of Koolab had sent to him by his eldest son, two slaves, two slave-girls, nine valuable horses, and nine camels, as presents, with a friendly letter, saying that he, the ruler, was one of the Ameer's servants, and was ready to serve the Ameer. The above presents had been sent to Sirdar Ufzul Khan, and a grand Khillut had been conferred upon the son of the Hakim of Koolab. The Ameer was very much pleased at hearing this news, and ordered the kossid to be paid ten rupees as a reward. The Ameer then turning towards the kossid, asked him which way he had travelled from Koonduz to Jellalabad? "It took him thirteen days in coming via Undrab and Kashkar," replied the kossid, "but he had now found out another direct road which would only take nine days from Jellalabad to Koonduz.—Delhi Gazette.

Prize Property Captured in Pegu.

H.E. the Gov. gen. is pleased to direct the publication of the following royal warrant, authorising the distribution of the prize property captured in Pegu in 1852 and 1853:—

"Whereas the commissioners of our treasury have represented unto us that the Government of India having failed to obtain redress from the Court of Ava for injuries which had been inflicted on British subjects, in gross violation of existing treaties, was compelled to declare that reparations should be exacted by force of arms, and that to this end an expedition was organised, composed of our naval and land forces, and of the naval and land forces then in the service of the East India Company, such naval and land forces being respectively under the command of Commodore Lambert, now Vice admiral Sir G. R. Lambert, K.C.B., then the C. in C. of our naval forces in the Indian Seas, and of Maj. gen. Godwin, C.B., since dec.

"And whereas it hath been further represented unto us that, in the course of the operations which ensued in the years 1852 and 1853, booty, consisting of bells, timber, bullion, and other effects, was captured by the said combined forces, and the proceeds arising from the sale of the said booty amount to Rs. 340,316 9 a. 3 p.; and whereas our said commissioners have recommended unto us to grant the said sum of Rs. 340,316 9 a. 3 p. to our said naval forces, and to the said naval forces then in the service of the said East India Company, and to the said land forces, in proportion to the numbers of the men belonging to each of the said forces, without reference to rank, who were employed and took part in the said expedition, and that the proportion to be so granted unto our said naval forces be divided in such manner and proportions as are usual in our navy for the distribution of prizes, and that the proportions to be so granted respectively unto the said naval forces then in the service of the said East India Company, and to the said land forces, be divided in such manner and proportions as were usual for the distribution of booty and prizes in India at the time of the said expedition.

"And whereas we have been graciously pleased to consent thereto.

"Our will and pleasure is, and we hereby authorise and require you to pay to the account of our Paymaster-general at the Bank of England, on account of naval prize, the sum in sterling which, at the rate of exchange in force at the time of payment for the settlement of pecuniary transactions between our imperial Government and our Government of India, will amount to the proportion of the said sum, which, according to the terms of this our grant, will be payable to our said naval force, to be distributed under the directions of our commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral for the time being, to and amongst the officers and men composing our said naval forces, who were employed and took part in the said expedition in such manner and proportions as are usual in our navy for the distribution of prizes. And we further hereby authorise and require you, or such person or persons as may be appointed by you for that purpose, to distribute the remaining portions of the said sum to and amongst the officers and men composing the naval forces then in the service of the said East India Company and the said land forces who were employed and took part in the said expedition, in such manner and proportions as were usual for the distribution of booty and prize in India at the time of the said expedition; and we do further authorise you to determine any doubt which may arise in respect to the distribution of the proportions of the said sum hereby granted respectively to the said naval forces of the said East India Company and the said land forces, subject to the condition that such determination be duly notified in writing to the commissioners of our Treasury for the time being, and the same shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes unless within three months after the receipt thereof at the office of our said commissioners, we shall be pleased otherwise to order, thereby reserving to ourselves to make such order thereon as to us shall seem fit, and for so doing this shall be to you and all others herein concerned a sufficient warrant. Given at our Court at Balmoral, this 12th day of September, 1860, and in the 23rd year of our reign.

"By H.M.'s command,

"(Signed)

WILLIAM DUNBAR.
JOHN BAGWELL.

"To our Sec. of State for India in Council."

Useless Guards and Sentries.

The C. in C. during his tour of inspection has observed that there were at many stations useless guards and sentries, and has given orders for their discontinuance.

2. As it is probable that the same practice prevails in cantonments not yet visited by his Excellency, officers commanding stations are requested to see that no men are detailed for garrison or regimental duties which do not absolutely necessitate the employment of military guards and sentries.

3. The employment of useless guards needlessly harrasses the troops, and deprives them of opportunities which would otherwise be devoted to instruction and the improvement of discipline.

4. General officers commanding divisions will ascertain during their half-yearly inspections that there are no unnecessary guards or sentries at the stations they visit.

Officers' Pensions for Wounds.—Revised Warrant.

No. 133.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council directs the publication in G.O. of the following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 23 of the 16th ult., with the Royal Warrant therein referred to.

This cancels Govt. G.O., No 109 of 1858:—

INDIA-OFFICE, LONDON,
16th Jan., 1861.

TO H.E. THE RIGHT HON. THE GOV. GEN. OF
MILITARY.—No. 23.

MY LORD,—Copies of a Royal Warrant, dated 27th Oct., 1860, revising the regulations under which pensions and allowances are granted to officers on account of wounds received in action are herewith transmitted. This warrant cancels the Royal Warrant on the same subject, dated 13th June, 1857.

2. The previous warrant defined the retrospective staff appointments, and the amount of pension to be allowed in each case. The new warrant provides for the staff, by the words "and officers holding equivalent relative rank."

3. In reply to an enquiry made on this point, I am informed by the Sec. of State for War that these words apply to the officers of the various staff appointments specified at pages 6 and 7 of the Wounds Warrant of the 13th June, 1857; and that the scale of pensions, as previously fixed for such staff officers, remains in force.

4. The regulations under which officers of H.M.'s Indian forces receive pensions and gratuities for wounds received in action are to be revised in accordance with the rules prescribed in the warrant now forwarded.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. WOOD.

Circular, No. 638.

HOME AND FOREIGN.

VICTORIA R.—

Whereas it has been found expedient to revise the regulations under which pensions and allowances are granted to officers of our land forces on account of wounds received in action; and whereas we were pleased to issue a warrant under our Royal Sign Manual, dated the 13th June, 1857: our will and pleasure now is that our said Royal Warrant of the 13th June, 1857, shall from henceforth be cancelled; and that this, our Royal Warrant, to be administered and interpreted by our Sec. of State for War, be the sole and standing authority upon the matters herein contained.

Given at our Court of St. James's this Twenty-seventh day of October, 1860, in the Twenty-fourth year of our reign.

By H.M.'s command,
S. HERBERT.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES TO OFFICERS OF THE LAND FORCES, LIMITED TO WOUNDS AND INJURIES RECEIVED IN ACTION.

GRATUITY OF ONE YEAR'S PAY.

1. If an officer shall receive a wound in action which shall occasion the loss of an eye or limb; or shall lose thereby the total use of a limb; or shall receive bodily injury equal or nearly equal in its consequences to the loss of a limb, he may receive a gratuity in money, or one year's full-pay of the regimental rank of staff appointment held by him at the time he was wounded, for the loss of such eye, or limb, or for such injury.

PENSION.

2. If an officer shall be wounded in action, and it shall be reported by a board of army medical officers assembled by order of the Sec. of State for War for the personal examination of such officer that he has, in consequence of his wound, lost a limb, or an eye, he may be recommended to H.M. for a pension, at the rate fixed in the annexed scale for the rank held by him when he was wounded, and commencing one year after the wound was received.

LOSS OF MORE THAN ONE LIMB OR EYE.

3. If the officer shall have lost more than one limb or eye, he may be recommended for a pension for each limb, or for each eye, so lost in action.

TEMPORARY PENSION.

4. If the wound received by an officer in action shall be so severe in its permanent effects as to be fully equal, or nearly equal, to the loss of a limb, and the injury shall be so reported by the Military Medical Board, he may be recommended to H.M. for a temporary pension, the continuance of which shall depend upon subsequent examinations before a Military Medical Board.

GRATUITY.

5. If any wound received in action shall be certified to be severe and dangerous, but in its permanent effects not nearly equal to the loss of a limb, the officer receiving such wound may receive a gratuity, varying according to the nature of the case, from three to twelve months' full-pay of the regimental rank or staff appointment held by him at the time he was wounded.

PERMANENT PENSION.

6. If an officer shall have held a pension for a wound received in action for a term of five years, and shall have been examined twice at the least, before a Board of Army Medical Officers, he may be recommended for the permanent continuance of such pension; but if the officer, before the expiration of the term of five years, shall have so far recovered that his wound or injury is not equal, nor nearly equal, to the loss of a limb, then he shall cease to receive such pension.

LIMIT OF APPLICATION FOR PENSION.

7. If within the period of five years after a wound has been received an officer shall not apply for the pension, or, on his so applying for it, the wound shall not have been proved to be permanently equal nor nearly equal to the loss of a limb, such officer's claim to a pension for such wound shall not at any subsequent period be entertained.

GRATUITY.

8. No gratuity for any wound shall be granted after the lapse of five years from the time the wound was received.

LOSS OF VISION.

9. No pension for the loss of an eye, from a wound received in action, shall be granted unless the actual loss of vision shall have occurred within five years after the wound was received, and be solely attributable to such wound.

BREVET RANK OR DUTIES SUPERIOR TO THOSE OF REGIMENTAL COMMISSION.

10. ### Thanks of the Queen to the Officers and Troops in China.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Feb. 15.—The C. in C. has much pleasure in publishing the following extract of orders issued by the officer commanding the British forces in China:—

"Head Qrs., Shanghai, Jan. 14.—H.E. the Commander of the forces has received her Majesty's commands to express to the troops in China her admiration of the gallantry and discipline which have been signally displayed by them in the operations which terminated in the fall of the Taku Forts.

"The Queen deeply deplores the inevitable loss incidental to the achievement of this great success.

"To the relatives of those who have fallen her Majesty offers her heartfelt sympathy, and the expression, not only of her own sorrow, but that of her people, for their bereavement.

"For the wounded she feels the deepest concern and she trusts that they may be soon restored to the ranks in which they have so nobly fought.

"To the generals of divisions, brigadiers, and to all the officers and men engaged, her Majesty tenders her warm and heartfelt thanks.

"The Commander of the forces congratulates the army on these expressions of her Majesty's sympathy, and on the gracious manner in which she has been pleased to denote her satisfaction with their conduct; a further proof of the regard which the Queen has always evinced for her troops."

The Native Regiments returned from China.

Military Dept., Fort William, Feb. 26.—No. 146.—The native regiments which have returned from service in China will revert to the same footing in respect to establishments and allowances as they were on before they proceeded on service.

The officers in excess of the authorised establishment being no longer required with the regiments to which they have been attached, will be disposed of as H.E. the C. in C. may direct.

The Governor-general has already, in G.O. of Jan. 17, commended the exemplary conduct of the native troops in China, but H.E. in Council cannot allow the young officers who are now separated from the regiments with which they have been so honourably connected to leave without carrying with them the expression of the high sense he entertains of their zealous services and good conduct.

THE BISHOPRIC OF MADRAS.—The see of Madras, which has become vacant by the death of the Right Rev. Dr. Thomas Dealtry, includes the whole of that presidency, and is worth £2,500 a-year. The appointment of a successor will devolve upon Sir Charles Wood, the Secretary of State for India. The late bishop graduated LL.B. at St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, in 1823, when he took a first-class in civil law. In 1846 the then Archbishop of Canterbury conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was for some years minister of St. John's Chapel, Bedford-row, when the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Noel succeeded from the Church of England, and previously Archdeacon of Calcutta, under Bishop Daniel Wilson. He was appointed to the Bishopric of Madras in 1849, on the retirement of Bishop Spencer, now Chancellor of St. Paul's. The diocese consists of 141,923 square miles, the population 13,500,000, and the number of clergy about 140.

COTTON FROM INDIA.

THE impending, or, rather, the accomplished disruption of the American Union has caused the cotton manufacturers of Great Britain to look far and wide for a continued supply of the raw material on which depend their own prosperity and the daily bread of hundreds of thousands of British workmen. It does not follow, indeed, that the severance of the Southern from the Northern States will necessarily interfere with the growth of cotton in the former, or with its exportation to this country, but prudent men foresee the possibility of future hostilities between the kindred and contiguous republics, and the consequent interruption for a time of all commercial relations between them and the nations of Europe. It is useless to expect to receive any large quantity of cotton from Africa, at least for very many years to come. A few bales may, perhaps, be obtained from different points of the coast, but not to an extent that will exercise any perceptible influence on the home market. Australia will doubtless prove, in the long run, the best auxiliary to Lancashire, and the utmost encouragement should be given to every project likely to stimulate the growth of cotton in that or any other colony. For it should always be remembered that our best customers will naturally be those who are descended from the same race, and who possess the same habits, manners, customs, and peculiarities. For every pound of cotton or other raw produce imported from a colony, a manufactured article of equal value will be exported thither from the mother country. The prosperity of our colonists will lead to and confirm the prosperity of our own people. And even if some portion of their increasing wealth should find its way into France and Germany, the inevitable result would be to increase our own trade with the French and Germans. Some little time, however, must elapse before the Lancashire mill-owners can hope to draw very regular or abundant supplies from the Australian plains, and in the mean time they turn their anxious eyes to India. Hitherto they have contented themselves with abusing the Court of Directors and the local Government because of the badness of the roads and the dirty condition of the cotton; but they never attempted to apply their own shoulder to the wheel. The utmost exertion they ever made was to send out a commissioner to report upon the nakedness of the land, but no practical steps have ever been taken by them to insure a steady delivery of cotton at the seaports, or to improve its quality. It would not be reasonable, indeed, to impute to them as a fault that they had hesitated to expend any capital in the improvement of the means of transit, but neither was it just on their part to blame the Indian Government for omitting to do so. All that was really wanted was a regular demand, and the employment of trustworthy merchants to purchase direct from the grower. If once a trade had been fairly opened, local funds would have been provided to keep in tolerably good order the rough tracks leading to the metalled roads, while the personal surveillance of the purchasing agents would have guarded against imperfect ginning, as well as against adulteration. But the Manchester lords did positively nothing to foster the trade. If American cotton chanced to fall off in quantity or quality they submitted with sufficiently ill grace to make up the deficiency from India; but it was merely as a last resource that they ever turned to that quarter. Now, all at once, they are clamorous for cotton from Berar, or from wherever else it may be obtained; and the Indian Government has generously stepped forward to their assistance. The cross roads are to be rendered passable, every information is to be afforded to those who ask for it, and even the Government treasuries are to be converted into banks of discount for the accommodation of purchasers of cotton. Naturally enough, the different journals at the Presidency towns, reflecting as they do the views and opinions of the mercantile community, rejoice exultingly over the new era that seems about to be inaugurated. The increased exportation of cotton is all clear gain to the shipping houses, and to those that speculate on their own account it is equivalent to another throw of the dice. No wonder, then, that there is mirth in Calcutta and gladness in Bombay; but it is by no means certain that this country will have any reason to participate in the joyfulness of those excellent cities. Already the trade with India is a serious drain upon its commercial resources. Money has to be paid down to a people from whom it does not again find its way back, directly or indirectly. A still larger amount of specie will have to be exported to meet the requirements of the cotton cultivators. These do not care for European goods, nor will they be satisfied with any equivalent for rupees. This is a consideration that should not be overlooked by British manufacturers. The only chance of reciprocity is in the development of the natural wealth of our colonies. With them the interchange of commodities will be annually on the increase—with India it will probably never pass beyond its present limits. It is unquestionably the duty of the Indian Government to lose no opportunity of promoting the welfare of its subjects; but it is equally the duty of the Home Government to look first of all to the well-being of the mother country and its colonies, and to regard as a matter of secondary importance the interests of a people wholly absorbed in their own pursuits, and blind to everything but their immediate interests.

"INDIGO AND ITS ENEMIES."

THE internecine strife between the civilians and the planters seems as far as ever from a settlement. Neither party has much reason to plume itself on the position it occupies before the judicial public. Both sides have indulged in personalities and recrimination until untravelling folk at home begin to think that there is little to choose between them. The war is now being briskly waged in this country. A formidable attack was made upon the planters by Fraser's Magazine, which was met, and partially repulsed, by a portentous looking pamphlet in red covers, that charged Mr. John Peter Grant with "trenchantly wading through standing facts." A champion then sprang forward from a quarter whence such help could least of all have been expected, to do battle for the civilians. Mr. John Dickenson, Jun., chivalrously dashed forward to their rescue, and fell with headlong fury on his old clients, the indigo planters, but only to be accused by another pamphleteer of being actuated by the ingratitude of the said planters in not subscribing more liberally to the payment of his salary as Secretary of the Indian Reform Association. His opponent professes, indeed, to give "the facts on both sides," and as a proof of his impartiality, would have his readers believe that Mr. Grant and his brother civilians are moved by malice prepense to ruin the planters, and utterly destroy the cultivation of indigo in Bengal. The real cause of the agitation, however, is sufficiently apparent from this writer's own statements. The planter is as deeply involved as the ryot. The latter is not more ruinously indebted than the former, who draws from his agent in Calcutta the funds that enable him to make advances to the husbandmen. His profits in a tolerably good season are estimated at no more than ten per cent., and in a bad year he has to submit to a loss as best he may. Thus hampered by debt it is impossible for him to treat the ryots with much liberality, or even to make a slight increase upon the price of the raw plant, notwithstanding the enhanced value of all other kinds of agricultural produce. It is contrary to human nature to suppose that the struggling peasantry will go on cultivating a plant that makes them no adequate return for their risk and labour as compared with other crops. True, they are bound in honour to act up to the understanding that existed between them and the factories, but what man in his senses would ever expect that an ignorant and impoverished peasantry would be guided by merely honourable considerations. Where a regular agreement has been entered into the civil courts afford some slight redress, but rather nominal than real. But the simple fact is, that under present circumstances the cultivation of indigo does not answer in Bengal. The actual crisis may have been accelerated by the injudicious conduct of Mr. Eden and his brother magistrates, but it could not in any case have been much longer deferred. If the planters can contrive by means of science or otherwise to pay a larger price for the plant, amicable relations between all parties may speedily be restored. But if this cannot be done, it is clear that the business has been conducted on unsound principles, and that that has happened which always does, sooner or later, happen in such cases—the bubble has burst—the balloon has collapsed, and there is no parachute to break the fall of the aspiring adventurers.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.

NEITHER the supply of cotton, nor the cultivation of indigo, is the real difficulty of the Indian Government. A question of even greater importance than either of these is pressing for immediate solution, but the means of solving it are not easy to discover. Notwithstanding the dearly-bought experience English engineers and contractors might be supposed to have derived from the construction of railways in Europe, and especially in this country, their sagacity appears to have been as much at fault in India as if no viaducts had ever before been built or embankments thrown up. The great network of railways, from the completion of which such wonderful benefits have been anticipated, is in imminent danger of becoming the laughing-stock of the whole world. It is now discovered that even the arterial lines must be suspended, unless money can be procured from British capitalists. A more alarming report than that recently published in the Calcutta Gazette can scarcely be imagined. It amounts almost to a fiat of bankruptcy against the different companies who have undertaken so much more than they seem able to perform. But even more startling than the recklessness with which such a vast capital has been squandered, is the suddenness of the announcement that it has been all absorbed. Surely, it must have been somebody's business to watch the railway expenditure. Thirty millions of money cannot have come to an end so abruptly that no one should have observed that the balance in the treasury disposable for such purposes was on the point of being exhausted. It is, we fear, only another example of the laissez aller system by which India has been administered, rather than governed, since the almost regal sway of the Marquis of Wellesley. No one in particular seems to have been responsible for the management of a department as important as it was difficult. So long as there was a balance on the creditor side, the money was allowed to flow out without any regular check or hindrance, and now that the country is intersected with unconnected and incomplete sections of railways, the Governor-general in Council coolly writes home to the Secretary of State for twenty millions, in addition to the large capital already sunk to such apparently little purpose. It is stated by the Indian authorities that "according to present estimates, which may possibly be exceeded, a sum of £56,000 will be required to complete the sanctioned railway system of India, towards which £39,666,300 only has been provided through the existing companies. Of this capital of £39,666,300, £32,547,540 had been paid in by the companies, and £31,186,404 was estimated to have been expended in England and India up to the 31st December, 1860; so that by the close of the financial year on 31st April, 1861, in round numbers, £34,500,000 will probably have been paid in, and £34,000,000 will have been expended. . . . The result is, therefore, that to the extent of upwards of £20,000,000 no provision has yet been made for the capital required to complete the system of Indian railways, beyond the power of borrowing £3,000,000 taken by the Secretary of State last year, and which, if exercised, will nearly be exhausted in replacing the balance in England which has been expended in the current year." And lest any idea should be entertained of the possibility of the Indian Government being able to advance any money for the purpose of completing "the system," the report specially observes that "by May next, or shortly after, the cash balances here

(in India) will certainly be reduced to the lowest point at which it is possible to carry on the government of the country." "In fact, a state of things is possible, or rather probable, in which, in the event of funds not being supplied from home in anticipation to carry on the railway works, the Government of India would have no alternative but to order their abrupt and complete suspension." A cheering announcement for those who have invested their money in these railways in the blind belief that as a certain rate of interest was guaranteed by the Government, some sort of surveillance would be exercised over their construction! We are further informed that if the Home Government decide on pushing forward the whole of the lines already sanctioned, it will require an expenditure in India of upwards of five millions a-year for the next three or four years in addition to what is expended in England. If these funds are not forthcoming "it will be of vital importance to spend what capital can be raised in completing lines, or sections of lines, which are already far advanced," and for this purpose £13,600,000 must be provided "to be spent mainly in the two and a-half years commencing 15th November, 1860." But if "in addition to providing £13,600,000 indispensable in the next two or three years to complete advanced lines, the Authorities at Home can see their way to provide another £11,700,000 to be spent in the next three or four years in carrying out those portions of the general scheme which are yet scarcely begun, orders for the active prosecution of those portions will be given." It needs no gift of prophecy to predict that these orders will not be given. There is not the slightest chance of the "Authorities at Home" seeing their way to providing £8,000,000 a-year for three or four years, and even the half of that amount will not be easily raised in the present state of public opinion with regard to India. At the same time it cannot be denied that the consequences of suspending the works in progress will be most disastrous. The intense heat, the heavy rains, the spontaneous vegetation, and the mischievous and plundering habits of the people, will quickly reduce the half-finished works to a shapeless mass of ruins, and the immense capital already expended will have been sunk as in the sea. It is not likely that the rich natives will be induced to advance any very large amount, even as a loan to Government; and it is equally certain that capitalists at home will be little disposed to respond to the call. Very many of the shareholders, however sanguine they may be as to the ultimate result of railway adventure in India, have not the means to advance another shilling towards the completion of "the system." Parliament will certainly not sanction another loan to any considerable amount. What, then, is to be done? The only practicable course, we fear, will be to submit to the first loss and concentrate the whole of the remaining funds on two or three of the most important lines. By attempting too much the whole will be jeopardised. Sufficient errors in judgment have already been made—let them not be aggravated by obstinacy and rashness.

BOOKS.

The Punjab and Delhi in 1857. By the Rev. J. Cave-Browne, M.A. In Two Vols. W. Blackwood and Sons.

The substance of this deeply-interesting narrative appeared in Blackwood's Magazine in 1858, in a series of papers entitled "The Poor-beah Mutiny." Those stray leaves have been collected and expanded into two handsome volumes, illustrated by some excellent plans and sketches, and comprising the chief official documents relating to the sepoy mutiny within the territories of the Punjab Government. Notwithstanding the interval of time that has elapsed, and the many memorable events that have occurred in all parts of the world, since the insurrection of our native Indian army, Mr. Cave-Browne's history retains the charm of novelty, and cannot be read without feelings of excitement. There is no attempt, however, on his part to create a sensation by means of what is called an effective and graphic style. The nature of his subject has rendered superfluous any recourse to fine writing. We have, therefore, a clear and succinct narrative of all that took place from the first outbreak at Meerut on that day of ill-omen, May the 11th, 1857, down to the capture of Delhi, and the restoration of order in the Punjab. A more faithful and impartial account of the proceedings that took place at each station could not be desired. Nothing has been extenuated, nothing set down in malice. The truth has been told without fear or favour, while every allowance has been made for the suddenness of the emergency, and occasional errors of judgment are never magnified into unpardonable offences. To those who wish to possess a condensed narrative of the siege of Delhi, but especially of the heroic doings of the handful of Englishmen scattered throughout the Punjab, these volumes recommend themselves by their scrupulous accuracy, while to the future historian of the India of 1857 they will prove invaluable.

EAST INDIA HOUSE.—A Court of Directors of the East India Company was held at the East India-house on the 11th inst., when Colonel Sykes, M.P., was elected chairman for the year ensuing.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

or PEARL DENTIFRICE, stands unrivalled in its capabilities of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the Teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental Herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface, remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and, from its aromatic influence, impart a delicate fragrance to the breath. It is important to observe, that when used in early life, it effectually prevents all aches in the teeth and gums, effaces spots and discoloration, eradicates scurvy, and, in a word, soon realises the chief attribute of beauty—a Fine Set of Pearly Teeth.

PRICE 2s. 9d. PER BOX.

CAUTION.—The words "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," are on the Label, and "A. ROWLAND and SONS, 30, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Bombay to the 27th of March, and from Calcutta to the 18th. It cannot be said that there is anything new to record. In the Upper Provinces the famine was extending its ravages, notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the Government officials to mitigate the destitution of the people. Fortunately, some heavy showers of rain have fallen in the Doab, which will exercise a beneficial effect on the next harvest. In some districts there prevails a superstitious belief that the famine has been sent from Heaven to avenge the massacre of women and children by the sepoy mutineers. From Calcutta alone the sum of £16,000 has been forwarded to the North-West for the relief of the famishing population, and £12,000 from Bombay. There appears to be a great scarcity also in Travancore, though not to an extent that will bear comparison with Upper India. Still, the distress of the inhabitants is such as to demand immediate attention, and the Madras community have subscribed with moderate liberality as an auxiliary to the hesitating sympathies of the Rajah and his chief officers. The amount already forwarded to India from this country exceeds £60,000, and there is little doubt that at least £100,000 will ere long be obtained for this purpose. But why, we repeat, should the £200,000 surplus from the Mutiny Relief Fund be allowed simply to accumulate, when it could be turned to such excellent account? With twenty lakhs of rupees the committee of management might even undertake remunerative works of irrigation, if they cannot bring themselves to part all at once with the pleasant duty of handing other people's money.

The supply of cotton from India furnishes the local journals with abundant matter for inaccurate statements. The Government expresses its readiness to co-operate by all means in its power with the agents of shipping companies, but the real difficulty to be overcome is "the middleman," to whom the ryot is bound, hand and foot, by the Indian system of advances. The latest news from North America increases the urgency of opening up new marts for the supply of a raw material only less important than iron.

The indigo question will scarcely, we fear, be set at rest by Sir Charles Wood's despatch—which appears elsewhere—for the planters in lower Bengal are still too much blinded by passion to listen to the still small voice of reason. A Special Commissioner is said to have been appointed to the disturbed districts; and Mr. Montresor, the Magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, is mentioned as having been selected for that unenviable post.

The Amalgamation Committee in Calcutta are assiduously engaged with their very delicate and responsible task. They have the disagreeable assurance that, however wise and impartial their decisions, they will give mortal offence to nearly every second officer in the Indian armies. All who can are retiring from the service, and had Sir Charles Wood offered a more adequate bonus than £50 a-year, the number of resignations would have immensely increased. As it is no more than one-tenth of the amount of the off-reckonings, it is not likely that many seniors will be tempted by such a miserable bait.

Great retrenchments are being recommended by the Civil Finance Commission, and economy is at last the order of the day.

A petition from the Covenanted Civil Service will be found among the miscellaneous paragraphs relating to the Bengal Presidency. The consternation that pervades all departments of the Indian Administration is not a little comical, and forcibly reminds one of the first result of a deluge, in the gathering together of worms of the earth, beasts of the forest, and birds of the air. United by a common danger and a common despair, they shriek and clamour aloud and cower beneath their inevitable fate.

Notwithstanding the ruin of the old service, or rather in consequence of it, there will still be a scramble for the eighty appointments which will be thrown open to public competition in July next. The names of the candidates, together with certificates of age, health, character, &c., must be sent to the Civil Service Commissioners on or before the 1st of May.

BENGAL.

THE FAMINE IN THE NORTH-WEST.

From G. F. Harvey, Esq., Commissioner of the Agra Division, to G. Couper, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of the North-West Provinces, Allahabad (No. 158 of 1861), dated Agra, 12th Feb., 1861.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit a report this day received from the Secretary to the Local Relief Committee at Agra, and request to be favoured with Government instructions upon the application made in the concluding paragraph.

2. The distress is certainly not on the increase; there has by no means been anything like a total failure of spring or rubbee crop in Agra or Muttra; a considerable yield of grain will be the produce of this year; large imports of grain from beyond the Chumbul and from the eastward are daily arriving; there has been rain in some of the districts other than those of this Division whose harvests were in jeopardy three weeks ago; and all these circumstances will probably prevent any further rise in the price of food, and indeed may be expected very considerably to lower such prices shortly.

3. Having held the post of Officiating Magistrate and Collector of Agra and subsequently of Allypore during 1837-38, I have no hesitation in stating that nothing at all comparable to the previous suffering and distress felt in those years exist at present, and that emphatically nothing which can be correctly called a famine will add to the present agricultural distress, unless the periodical rains of the coming season are withheld or are greatly deficient in quantity.—I have, &c., G. F. HARVEY, Commissioner.

From James Simson, Esq., Secretary Local Relief Committee, Agra, to G. F. Harvey, Esq., Commissioner of Agra, dated Agra, 6th February, 1861.

SIR,—In accordance with paragraphs 6 and 9 of Government letter No. 1,439 A, dated 19th December last, to the address of the Commissioner of Meerut, promulgated for the guidance of Local Relief Committees, I am directed by the Agra Local Committee to submit to you for countersignature and transmission to Government a certified statement* exhibiting the donations and monthly subscriptions actually received by them during the month of January, together with a copy of the Committee's Debtor and Creditor Account.†

2. You will observe that the sum of Rs. 3,635-5-0—namely, by donations Rs. 2,742-5-0 and by subscriptions Rs. 894,—was realised from 12th to 31st January, and that during the same period Rs. 548-14-11 were expended on account of expenses incurred up to the 22nd January, leaving a balance in hand on 31st January of Rs. 3,087-6-1.

3. The expenses accruing from 23rd to 31st January were not audited when the accounts were closed, and they will be included in the February accounts. Also on the debit side of the accounts, the Government contributions, corresponding to the amount realised by donations and subscription in January, will fall within the assets and accounts of February when sanctioned by Government.

4. The total number of individuals fed in the eleven days included in this return amounts to 11,147, or a little over 1,013 per day. But this average is higher than may be expected to be exhibited in the next monthly return, owing to the pressure which then prevailed before the commencement of special public works for the relief of the able-bodied poor.

5. Through an oversight a detail was not kept of men, women, and children respectively relieved on the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th January; but omitting these dates, the average number of daily recipients of relief in each of the above classes for the remaining seven days amounted to 231 men, 376 women, and 436 children. The average daily cost of rations distributed during the eleven days amounted to nearly 40; + but it should be remembered that other miscellaneous expenses in connection with the establishment of the poor-house e.g., purchase of cooking utensils, &c., have also been incurred. These will be included in February's accounts.

6. I have been desired further to state for the information of Government that the local committee, at a meeting held this day, resolved unanimously that a branch relief poor-house, under the immediate superintendence of Mr. Cowley, of the railway department, should be forthwith established at Ferozabad in this district, as a means of relieving the starving poor at a distance from the station of Agra in that part of the district. It appears doubtful whether the Government instructions contemplated the granting of relief at a distance from Sudder stations; but as the committee are of opinion that this method of relief is not contrary to the spirit of these instructions, and that it is in itself desirable, if properly superintended, they have resolved to take immediate action, as above indicated, reporting their proceedings for the information and sanction of Government.

7. The committee likewise desire me to state that they have deemed it expedient to commence a system of in-door relief (so to speak) for the benefit of those poor and starving persons of respectable family in the city, who, for private reasons, cannot be present at the out-door distribution of cooked food at Shahgunge. This method of relief is to be superintended by the most respectable of the city punches, who are to furnish daily reports of persons relieved, and cost of relief to the secretary of the committee, and the relief is to be administered in the shape of uncooked grain. The system is only to be introduced by way of experiment, though its introduction has been considered absolutely necessary to meet the cases of those persons to whom it refers. The committee will carefully scrutinise the result of this mode of relief, and will allude to the subject in their next monthly report.

8. Adverting to the state of distress at present existing in the Agra district, the committee are not inclined to think that distress has materially increased since the commencement of their operation; at the same time it has certainly not diminished; and it is to be feared may be expected soon to increase; but upon this point the committee will be in a better position to report after the close of the current month.

9. In regard to funds, you will perceive that Rs. 3,636-5-0 have been realised by donations, and Rs. 894 by subscriptions during January. As the committee is a local one, no dependence can be put upon the continuance of the former source of income; but the committee are sanguine that an income of at least Rs. 1,000 per mensem by subscription will be available so long as the necessity for the same continues. Taking into account the Government contribution, the committee's permanent monthly assets may thus be fairly estimated at Rs. 2,000. The time has not yet arrived for forming a comparative estimate of the committee's monthly expenditures, but every care is being taken to preserve a strict check over the account.

I shall feel obliged by your communicating to me the sanction of Government, when received, to the disbursement of Rs. 3,636 5a. from the Local Treasury, being the amount realised for the Relief Committee during the month of Jan. last.—I have, &c.,

JAMES SIMSON,

Sec. Local Relief Committee.

From C. Couper, Esq., Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, to G. F. Harvey, Esq., Commissioner of the Agra Division (No. 398 A), dated Camp Secora, the 2nd of Feb., 1861.

SIR,—Your letter No. 158, dated the 12th inst., forwarding the report of the Agra Local Relief Committee's operations during the month of Jan., has been laid before the Lieut. Governor.

2. His Honour is glad to receive from you the assurance that distress is not on the increase at present, and that the market is well supplied with food by the large importations of grain from the eastward and from beyond the Chumbul.

He is not disposed to be sanguine as to the produce of the coming spring harvest, because an immense breadth of land must have remained unsown, and the seed put into the ground, in many places, failed to germinate. But he is happy to believe that the little rain which has fallen may, in some measure, have improved the prospects of the season.

3. The report of the local committee's operation is satisfactory. During the twenty days which it embraces, food was distributed to 17,386 people (who, but for this relief, must have perished) at an aggregate outlay of Rs. 861-12-3, inclusive of the cost of establishment and of miscellaneous disbursements. The Government and the public alike are indebted to the local committee for the careful economy which they have enforced in all items of expenditure within their control.

4. The collector of Agra will be instructed by the accountant to pay to the receipt of two or more members of the local relief committee, the sum of Rs. 3,636-5, being the equivalent of the amount duly certified to have been realised from donations and subscriptions during the month of January.

5. The Lieutenant-governor approves of the Resolution of the Local Relief Committee to establish a Branch Poor House at Ferozabad, under the immediate superintendence of Mr. Cowley, the Railway Engineer, in that neighbourhood. The supervision upon which the Government must insist to ensure a proper application of the funds, placed in the hands of the Committee, is thus secured, and at the same time the circle of their operations is most usefully and beneficially extended.

6. The account of the funds remitted to Mr. Cowley, and of the expenditure incurred under his direction, must be incorporated in the monthly accounts of the Local Committee.

7. The Lieutenant governor, accepting the Committee's representation as to its necessity, will not object to the distribution of food, grain, to persons of respectability who cannot, for obvious reasons, appear in public. But the system is open to great abuse, and the Committee will, no doubt, use their best endeavours to check misappropriation of the funds which the charity of the public, aided by the liberality of the Government, has provided for relief of those who are truly destitute. The Committee's promised report on the result of this experiment will be looked for with much interest.

8. It appears to the Lieutenant-governor that the Local Committee are not too sanguine in the estimate which they have formed of their monthly assets; and even if the demands upon their resources should increase, they may justly look to the Central Relief Committee at Agra for assistance. Remittances to the amount of Rs. 54,000, from "the Famine Relief Fund Committee" at Calcutta, have been forwarded to the secretary to the Central Committee, and, with a liberality no less munificent, the community at Bombay have placed at our disposal the sum of Rs. 48,000. With the equal contribution of the Government, the Central Committee will thus have in their hands the large amount of Rs. 204,000, exclusive of donations and subscriptions, from all parts of the North-Western Provinces, and will be, it is hoped, in a position to give substantial aid to all the District Relief Committees according to their respective requirements.

9. Your letter, with its enclosures and this reply, will be published in a supplement to the Government Gazette, North-Western Provinces, for general information. I have, &c.,

G. COUPER,
Secy. to Govt. N.W.P.

BURIAL-GROUNDS IN INDIA.

Our remarks recently on the Residency burial-ground of Lucknow, where the dust of so many heroes lies, have been effectual in directing the attention of the authorities to the subject. A small fixed establishment has been sanctioned to keep the cemetery in order. As soon as all the tombs have been erected new walks should be laid out, and further interments strictly forbidden. But Lucknow, we regret to say, is by no means

* The Statement and Account are not published as they are described in the letter.

the worst station in Northern India in this respect. The burial-grounds of Cawnpore are very much worse; those of Calcutta are a disgrace to a civilised city; and there is no English settlement in India where a little care on the part of the chaplain, and an occasional oversight by the municipal authorities, or the district officer, would not do good.

The Presidency cities have grown so much more rapidly than their founders ever anticipated, that cemeteries which were originally far beyond their suburbs are now surrounded by thickly inhabited streets. In Calcutta, as recently in London, the question of the burial of the dead has become too serious in a sanitary point of view to permit of its remaining unsettled. On one side a city which contains three quarters of a million of souls is encircled by tombs for nearly three miles. The Mahomedan, Scotch, Dissenters', Episcopalian and Romish grave yards stretch along the Circular-road, and render pestilential the European quarter. Every year nearly a thousand Christians are buried in them, and as they are filled up new space is prepared for the annual mortality. In the heats of summer and especially in the rains of the subsequent months, the spectacle they present and the stench which they exhale are alike disgusting. Not only are all the holy associations of the English churchyard banished, but even the mourner and his attendants are repelled. The priest often hurries over his task, the bereaved dare not linger over the open grave, the dead are thrust quickly out of sight, and the assemblage hastily depart. Open pitfalls filled with water, mounds of rubbish blocking up the paths, kites, vultures, and adjutants perching upon the tombs, filth, stench, and grosser abominations are too often the characteristics of a Calcutta cemetery. Few who were present will forget the disgusting sights around Mr. Wilson's grave when he was buried, or the oppressively fetid smell which drove so many from the spot during the service that accompanied the funeral of the missionary, Mr. Lacroix.

Calcutta will continue to grow, and it must extend in the very direction where these Golgothas hem it in by putridity. The Circular-road will be the great railway street of Calcutta. In another year the traffic of the two railways which have their great terminus there, will have begun. Sooner or later the bridge over the Hooghly above Serampore must be undertaken, and all the traffic of the North West will find its way thither. From Delhi, from the districts to the north of the Hooghly and Ganges, from the Mutlah, the products and the travellers of Northern India will pour in to this spot. All the elements of a railway town will be formed more rapidly and to a greater extent than in Howrah. Since this is the case and the present grave-yards are full, it is time for the authorities to prohibit all interments within a mile of the city. On no point were the Jews more strict than this. The great author of their polity fixed a definite limit beyond the Levitical cities as the place where the dead must be entombed, and with the exception of the royal family, no dead body was allowed to be buried in a town. What was to them a divine law is to all eastern nations, who do not consume the body by fire, a social custom not less imperative. But the English are as regardless of the simplest precautions in securing the health of their cities as they are in choosing their sites. Their three capitals in the East are not only still destitute of all the appliances and safeguards of civilised life—of water, drainage, shade, gas in private houses, commodious public offices and buildings, a system of registration of births and deaths, a periodical census, a code of regulations for public conveyances, but they are choked up and girdled round by the corruption of a dense mortality.

The remedy is evident. The cure must be despot. The Mutlah and Eastern Bengal Railways will be open, the former in a few months, the latter in a year. Let the State, or the companies themselves, lay out a cemetery calculated to accommodate five hundred dead annually for the next twenty-five years, at a distance of at least five miles from each terminus. A law prohibiting interments within that distance of Calcutta after the 1st January next will be sufficient. Burials take place only at sunset or sunrise. Morning and evening trains could, as in London, accommodate the mourners. The enormous charges and hideous paraphernalia of undertakers would be dispensed with. Calcutta would have new space where it is most wanted, and a new source of health when it is most necessary. It might be thus possible to create in the tropics such sacred associations, and to gratify such memories, as are connected with the dead in colder climes. It would at least prevent these memories being outraged as now. Let the Bishop see to it.—Friend of India.

THUGGEE IN OUDE.

We lately informed our readers that another case of thuggee had occurred in the Oonao district, and that the superintendent of police had apprehended the criminal, from whose disclosures it was expected that much of the mystery which has attached to these extraordinary cases might be cleared up. We regret that this expectation has not as yet been realised. But if this case has not proved important as a clue to other murders, it is not the less remarkable as an example of the complicated difficulties which surround the police officers and paralyse their detective abilities, whilst it is interesting psychologically as an instance of the weakness and the strength of the native mind in its pursuit of the science of perjury.

It appears that fully three months ago information was given by two men, Bhabootie and Bikharee, to Captain Ryall, that a man named Arjun was in the habit of going out on long journeys without any known object, and that he was a notorious bad character under the King's regime. On this they were ordered to watch him, and if they could detect him in any overt crime to bring information at once. A policeman named Bhowani, who resided in the neighbourhood of Arjun's village, was also sent with them to give them assistance. For three months Arjun was watched, but did nothing which could be brought up against him. On the 26th of February, before daybreak, Bhowani came in hot haste to Oonao, to report that he had just seen Arjun commit a thuggee on a traveller at a spot about six miles from Oonao, in a wide open plain. He said that Bhabootie had received information that Arjun would start on horseback on one of his nefarious expeditions early on Monday morning, that they three had followed him the whole day from place to place, had seen him fall in with his victim, and accompany him on some pretext or other till late in the night, when he suddenly took a rope from his waist, lassoed and strangled the wretched traveller, dragging his body to the shade of a bush close by, stripped it, and then rode off at full gallop to his home. Captain Ryall, without a moment's delay, started with the policeman and went first to the spot of the murder. There the body was found lying under a bush some twenty yards from the pathway, on which were the marks of a severe struggle, the tongue was protruding, and a dark ring round the neck showed where a thin cord had been passed. Tracks of horse's feet were also visible on the path. Sending the body into Oonao for the doctor's inspection, Captain Ryall went on with the policeman-spy to Arjun's house, which is about twenty miles from the spot of the murder. On arriving at the village he met Bhabootie and Bikharee, the other two spies, who had been watching Arjun all day, and reported that he was still in his house. On going there all the family strenuously denied his presence, and asserted that he had gone to a marriage festival; but at last he was found crouching on the top of the house, and brought down more dead than alive. On searching the house no property or clothes were found which seemed likely to have belonged to the murdered man, but a catgut string, with an iron ring and a running noose, was discovered. On being asked the use of it, the prisoner said it was a plaything, and his wife said it was to catch monkeys with! A white horse was also standing in the stable, on which the spies said he had been riding the previous day.

In this state the case came up for preliminary examination before the deputy commissioner of the district. The evidence against Arjun was the consentaneous testimony of the two spies, corroborated more or less by the finding of such a suspicious rope, useless for all ordinary purposes, but admirably suited for strangling, and Arjun's previous bad repute and guilty demeanour. Arjun's defence was an alibi, which immediately broke down, as after a little examination his wife and mother confessed that he returned from the marriage festival before the day on which the murder took place. Still there were several weak points in the spies' depositions. It appeared that it was not till day-break on Monday that Bhabootie heard Arjun had started on horse-back half an hour before. He had to collect his companions, and then to overtake Arjun without any knowledge of his destination. This they said they did at the Mohan bridge. Now, there are two bridges at Mohan, and they had to be asked which bridge they meant. Then they differed slightly in their statements as to their relative positions while following Arjun. It was probable, too, that in traversing such a large extent of country they should have met some one who would recognise them, and whose evidence would add circumstantial weight to the case.

With this object, therefore, Captain Ryall started again, to go over the track taken by the party, and to make the spies point out the place on the Mohan bridge where they had come up with Arjun. He took the three spies with him, keeping them carefully separate. On reaching Mohan, he first called up Bikharee to point out the spot, who on looking about him seemed rather confused, and said it was not this bridge at all, it was the other one. Bhabootie and Bhowani, on being separately brought to the spot, both said that this was the bridge. Here was a most glaring contradiction, which at once broke down the credibility of their statement. On being confronted with each other, two of the spies at once confessed that the whole story from beginning to end was a pure fiction, that they three had murdered the man in order to lay the blame on Arjun, and thus obtain, respectively, promotion, reward, and the gratification of a personal feud! They stated where they had hid the rope with which they strangled their victim, where they put his clothes, who he was, and where he lived. Their confession only differed in this, that each man represented the other as the leader and actual murderer, and himself as an unwillingly-consenting party—an accomplice before and after the fact. Only policeman Bhowani stood out for the truth of the original story. But the recovery of the rope and bloody clothes, the recognition of the dead body, the testimony of sundry people at whose houses the three had stopped during the day on which the murder occurred (Monday), and to one of which they had brought the traveller whom they subsequently murdered, leaves no rational doubt of the truth of the confession.

We can hardly conceive anything more discouraging to a zealous police officer than such a case as this. It throws discredit on all evidence, on every attempt to get a conviction. There is of course very heavy pressure on the country at present to discover the authors of these crimes; large rewards are offered, but as yet instead of eliciting the secret they have only encouraged the imitation of the crime. The evidence which in ordinary cases would have been received as sufficient to warrant a conviction, would certainly be insufficient now, and it is hardly possible even to conceive under what combination of favourable circumstances satisfactory proof could be collected. The mere personal disappointment which must result from being led on a fool's errand of thirty miles by a man with a lie in his right hand, might tend to diminish any officer's zeal, and make him less ready to go on a similar journey again. And yet only the most enthusiastic zeal, the greatest readiness to take up any verisimilar clue, will be rewarded some day with a lucky combination of events, and will obtain for some one the credit of unravelling the plot of these most perplexing and mysterious murders.

It is curious to trace how this murder was committed, and how found out. We venture to say, that neither the crime nor the detection would have been possible in any country but India. In England, not long ago, a man killed a woman, and then tried to lay the crime at the door of another man, for the sake of reward. But this was an afterthought. Here we have men engaged in murdering another, solely for the sake of the reward they will gain by accusing an innocent man of the deed. Such an utter absence of any moral restriction of conscience, any remorse, or any sense of the disproportion between cause and effect, could hardly be found except among the most illogical, the most cruel, and the most childish people in the world—"the mild Hindoo." But, supposing the crime to have been committed, any other people in the world would have made up a far more probable tale than these did. In their story there were considerable gaps at first sight, and on closer investigation important and damning discrepancies came out. In any other country the false witnesses would have got up their story with admirable detail, would have gone to the Mohan bridge and settled on the spot on which they should say they had met Arjun—would have been very clear as to the exact relative positions they were in when the murdered man uttered his choking, despairing cry, and would possibly have hired a man on a white horse to go over the same line of country, they following him. This the spies utterly neglected to do; they invented the mere skeleton of a story, and omitted to fill it up, or give it flesh and skin so as to look like life.

Hence we may draw the satisfactory conclusion, that if we can place no reliance on the native moral sense to prevent the occurrence of crime, still we can rely on their clumsiness and stupidity to be unable to invent a story which careful cross-examination shall not be able to tear into shreds. If they are too vicious to avoid crime, they are too stupid to avoid detection.—Oudh Gazette

MISCELLANEOUS.

RECENT APPOINTMENTS.—Nothing could be more satisfactory than the appointment of Mr. Yule, commissioner of Bhagalpore, to succeed Mr. Wingfield as chief commissioner of Oudh. Untrammelled by Sudder Court or regulations, but endowed with unusual judgment and discretion, he will introduce a new honesty and a wiser vigour into the administration. The European settler will be encouraged, the native pretender exposed, and the truth told regarding the working of the talookdar-magistracy. Our only regret is that Lower Bengal should lose the services of such a civilian, at a time when we look round in vain for officials who possess at once independence and ability to fill the highest offices in the Legislative Council and the Sudder Court. By the whole of South-eastern Mr. Yule's removal will be felt. If he were possessed of the ambition or cared to wield the pen of a Punjab secretary, he could draw a picture of the political and moral results of his administration among the barbarous tribes, who beat back our troops in 1855, worthy to take its place with Sir John Lawrence's earlier reports. It will be difficult to find a successor who will carry to its legitimate issue the policy he has initiated. Mr. G. Barnes will immediately take Mr. A. R. Young's place in the Foreign Office as secretary, a post for which his experience in the non-regulation provinces and in the management of native chiefs fits him. No appointment to Mysore has yet been made. Services such as those of General Cubbon, the retiring commissioner, demanded something more from the head of the Government than the mere announcement in the Gazette that he had made over his duties to Mr. C. B. Saunders.—Friend of India.

ACCELERATED COMMUNICATION.—The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce have asked Government to transmit by any steamer available at Bushire intelligence received by telegraph at Bagdad forwarded thence by water to Bussorah, and by courier to Bushire. The Government approve of the suggestion, and refer the matter to Bombay.

THE INDIAN PRESS.—"Are we to expect a new Press Act?" asks the Englishman. "We hear that the Governor-general has ordered a return to be made for the term ending the 30th of April next, showing the presses working throughout India on that date, and the publications issued therefrom."

RETRENCHMENT.—When the amalgamation measure begins to act, there will be large savings in salaries by the abolition of the double machinery in the upper administration of the army. It is proposed to abolish the appointment of the Adjutant-general of the army, as at present existing, and Colonel Mayhew goes out of office, Colonel Haythorne, now Adjutant general H.M.'s British Forces, taking over the Bengal army as well, with Majors Becher and Stewart, now in the department, as deputies. The double administration of the Quartermaster-general's Department will also cease, Colonel A. Becher becoming Quartermaster-general of the whole army, European and Native. As will be seen, here is no invidious distinction between, or preference of, officers of either army, Company's or Queen's; indeed, if anything, the Indian officers have the advantage in the arrangements under notice. The office of Deputy Adjutant-general H.M.'s army, now held by Colonel Holditch, will not be filled upon that officer's receiving a brigade command, for which he is the first on the list.

THE JUBBULPORE EXTENSION LINE of the East India Railway has been temporarily abandoned, after working satisfactorily for some short time past.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.—A correspondent draws our attention to the indifference of the Bengal Government in the matter of the Calcutta Volunteers. The delay in sanctioning the establishment of a detachment in Serampore is owing to the Government of India. The Commander-in-Chief has expressed his interest in the Calcutta regiment, and promised to meet their wishes whenever he can. He has sent them a bugler and allowed them the use of the rifle pits in Fort William. We understand that efforts are at last being made to raise a civil service company in Calcutta. A correspondent tells us what has been done in Lahore. There the volunteers number 120, in three companies of 40 men each, with officers as follows:—

Commandant,	From Covenanted Service.
2nd in Command,	An Engineer Officer in Civil Employ.
	1ST COMPANY.
Captain,	From Covenanted Service.
Lieutenant,	From Uncovenanted Service.
Ensign,	From Uncovenanted Service.
	2ND COMPANY.
Captain,	From Covenanted Service.
Lieutenant,	From Uncovenanted Service.
Ensign,	From Uncovenanted Service.
	3RD COMPANY.
Captain,	From Uncovenanted Service.
Lieutenant,	From Covenanted Service.
Ensign,	From Uncovenanted Service.

In the ranks are five covenanted servants and seven military officers in civil employ. The volunteers have already had one shooting match with the military, and last week a shooting match between the companies, which will be followed by another next week. From this it may be inferred that all classes of the residents in Lahore have taken an interest in the movement.—Friend of India.

SURVEY DEPARTMENT.—Major Thuillier, of the Bengal Artillery, becomes Surveyor-general of India and Superintendent of Revenue Surveys; and Major Walker, of the Bombay Engineers, Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey.

"TRYING IT ON."—The Hurkaru mentions that Prince Gholam Mahommed has applied for the exemption of his nephews from appearance in the Civil Courts. Government has declined, on the ground that the exception is restricted to Mahomedan gentlemen of equal rank with Hindoo Rajahs. Whatever Gholam Mahommed may be considered to be by courtesy, his nephews are simply idle pensioners, without political status of any kind.

PUNKAHs AND TATTIES.—The expense incurred by the Commissariat for punkahs and tatties last hot season (the Gazette says 1861) was Rs. 6,14,263. This was for barracks, hospitals and Commissariat offices only. Calcutta, Meerut, and Mooltan each cost upwards of Rs. 55,000, and Allahabad upwards of 47,000.

H.M.'s 73rd Foot are now on their way to the presidency from Dinapore by bullock train to embark in the ships Aliquis and White Eagle, which have been taken up for their conveyance to England. We would advise Government to keep its departments on the alert in embarking and sending away the troops at this trying and dangerous season of the year, when cholera is so prevalent and the heat intense. The detachment of H.M.'s 70th Foot, which has just left for New Zealand in the Minden, got cholera in the river, and lost four men before the pilot quitted her.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—On the morning of the 12th March, at the termination of the usual parade of the Volunteers, two photographs were taken of the two companies formed together in a square—one picture representing them standing with ordered arms, and the other kneeling with fixed bayonets prepared to receive cavalry. We trust the impressions will be satisfactory, as there will probably be a great demand for them. After the photographs had been taken, Captain Malleson, before dismissing the Volunteers, addressed them as nearly as possible in the following words:—

"Gentlemen, I cannot dismiss you this morning without informing you that I have had an interview with his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, at which I am happy to say he expressed himself particularly interested in the Calcutta Volunteers and begged me to assure them that it would be a pleasure to him to be of service to them in any way that might lie in his power. He also expressed a wish to inspect the Volunteers, and I shall request him to do so when I consider you sufficiently well advanced to be reviewed by so great a General. I will just mention two instances to prove to you the sincere interest which his Excellency takes in you. In January last, thinking it very necessary that the corps should have a bugler attached to it, I applied for the services of one to the Government of Bengal, under which we are. I not only did not get what I applied for, but I received no reply whatever to my application. I mentioned this to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and this morning I find a bugler ready on the ground, and I have been informed that I can have a second, should I think it necessary. I also mentioned to his Excellency the difficulty we found in meeting with a suitable spot for target practice, and he at once, in his hearing, despatched a request to Sir John Heassey that the rifle pits in the Fort should be placed at the disposal of the Volunteers." The conclusion of Captain Malleson's speech was greeted, as might be expected, with loud and hearty cheers.—Englishman.

THE SOANE BRIDGE is the longest in India, being nearly a mile from abutment to abutment. It consists of twenty-eight spans of 163 feet each, measuring from centre to centre of the piers. The clear openings between the piers are 150 feet. Besides these, there is over each abutment a space to be covered by box girders of twenty-six feet span. The foundations consist of brick cylinders of eighteen feet diameter, three to each pier, filled in with solid brickwork. These are sunk to a depth of at least thirty feet below low water level, thus giving a total height from bottom of foundations to rail level of eighty feet. The under side of the girder is thirty-five feet above the level of the river in the dry season. Seven spans, or one-fourth of the bridge, have now been completed.

LORD CANNING'S SPEECH AT THE CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—After the presentation of the successful candidates, the Viceroy addressed the crowded assembly, and said:—"That it had been a matter of great regret to him that he had been compelled to absent himself on the last two similar occasions. It would have been agreeable in the extreme to him to have gathered the first early fruits of that foundation which had been established four years ago amid the not too sanguine expectations of those who were not only desirous of benefitting the natives, but jealously anxious for the credit of the British rule in India. Matters of importance in another part of the country had prevented him from presiding on those occasions, but his regret at that absence was much alleviated by the fact that he had left the duty in such able hands as those of the learned Vice-Chancellor. He was glad to say that the experience of three years afforded good ground for congratulation, and that the progress of the Calcutta University was such as to satisfy the most sanguine. The annual number of candidates for admission had risen from 280 in 1857, to 800—a much larger number than that at the London University, on which it had been modelled. It was true that many of these candidates had not passed, but considering the infancy of the institution that was not to be wondered at. The number of candidates who had been educated at schools not supported by Government or affiliated to the University was also rapidly increasing. Internally the University was beginning to feel its way by the introduction of many improvements, new rules and regulations. During the course of the previous year an examination, preliminary to that for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, had been instituted, as well as the appointment of licentiates both in law and engineering. In these improvements the University had wisely followed the example of those in the sister presidencies, and he mentioned this in the hope that no invidious prejudices would be allowed to stand in the way when any good could be gained by introducing the measures of other colleges. One thing, however, he would say with reference to this subject. The standard of proficiency for degrees had been considered by some as too high, but after a careful examination of details and consequences, he was of opinion that the University had acted well and wisely in what they had done, and on that point he would be sorry to see any approximation to the course adopted by the other Universities. He had dwelt on these points to show how far the results went to dissipate the apprehensions that had once been entertained. He could remember that they had been told the intention of the institution would not be understood, and that it would be beyond the scope of the native mind. How great had been the mistake made in such apprehensions! Not only was the object understood, but the institution itself had grown with a rapidity wonderful even in its novelty. It had been said it would injure private schools. Results showed just the opposite, for it was evident to all that such schools had increased. They had been told that they were beginning at the wrong end, that they ought first to educate the lower classes, and so work upward to the higher ones. That was a difficult question, one of policy. He himself could not agree with those who thought that our chief duty here was to confine our Western learning solely to those middle classes who mostly looked to Government employment as a means of living. There had been a prevalent opinion that the Government would do wrong in providing education for those who were not exactly dependent on a profession for their support, and that it might very wisely leave the upper classes to seek their own means of education. He thought this a pernicious and dangerous policy. He thought that any Government could scarcely be justified in adopting such a course, and least of all that of India as governed by England. The position of our Government here was not one which could neglect such an important duty. He would ask his own countrymen present to measure the land they were now living in; to measure it, not only on the map, though even then its immensity was conspicuous; but to measure and compare it with the continent of Europe. All the Western kingdoms, from France and Austria, to Norway and Sweden, would scarcely, even when united, make one third of gigantic India. So much for area, but in population too there was an excess in this country of fifty millions over that of all he had mentioned. What would any man say if by a turn of fortune all the countries of Europe, ruled by distinct monarchs, and presided over by a nobility and gentry not one whit more particular in their class notions than those of Hindostan, were thrust under the rule of one potentate? Could they believe that that potentate would hesitate a moment in calling the intellect and experience of the natives of his varied dominions to aid him with their council? He trusted that Englishmen had learnt that they had something to repay India for, and that if disposed to hold out the hand of friendship to the natives, it would be their duty also to make them sharers in the learning of their Western home. He expected no magic results from the Calcutta University, but he did hope as years rolled on to see the native gentry eagerly seeking after such distinctions as he had that day conferred. He said 'distinctions,' because he hoped that many wealthy gentlemen, independent of their own exertions, would make such honours an object of ambition."—After a few remarks which were not distinctly audible, owing to some bustle among the natives in the background, his Excellency proceeded to address the successful candidates. "Judging from his own experience, the first advice he would give them would be not to sit down contented with what they had done. There was no greater danger to which the successful student was exposed than the whisperings of the syren indolence. He knew more instances than he cared to remember, of Englishmen who had earned high college honours, which very honours had paralysed their after careers. He would advise the natives of this country who had less energy and 'backbone' than Europeans, not to think their task was over. They had only breasted the first wave of the opposing tide, only climbed to the edge of the table land over which their course was to be run. They had now more to prove to the world than that they had gained a diploma. They had to prove that education had affected them morally as well as intellectually. He had one more word of advice to give them, and he trusted they would take it in good part, as it was meant. He thought it unlikely that they should have been so long searchers after truth in all its phases, scientific and otherwise, without acquiring the ambition to know the truth thoroughly, and when known and seen to adhere to it. He would assure them that perseverance and adherence to truth would carry any man, however humble his rank, or even his attainments, to distinction among his fellows. He was certain that a man who was prepared to seek, adhere, and sacrifice to truth, was sure to leave his mark on his work, whatever his profession might be. Distinction was not always the reward of all, but it was in every man's power to do something, however little, for the public good."

OPIMUM.—The following are the particulars of the Calcutta opium sale held on the 7th March:—

	Chests.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar	1,220	2,288-12-11½	27,92,350
Benares	560	2,260-10-8½	12,65,975

HIGHLY NUTRITIOUS.—A Bengalee recommends sawdust as food for the starving of the North West. He has read that it is susceptible of conversion into a substance bearing no remote analogy to bread, and though certainly less palatable than that of flour, yet no way disagreeable, and both wholesome and digestible, as well as highly nutritive. The sawdust of some woods has certainly saccharine properties, but the suggestion is as bad as the Duke of Norfolk's pinch of curry powder.

POISONING.—The crime of robbery by the administration of poisonous drugs has so increased in the North West and Oude, and especially on the Grand Trunk Road, during the past year, that Captain Chamberlain, assistant to the Thuggee superintendent, has been directed to take special measures for its extirpation.

PETITION OF HER MAJESTY'S COVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE IN INDIA.—To the Honourable House of Commons in Parliament assembled:—Humbly Sheweth—That your petitioners entered the Civil Service of the late Honourable East India Company under a solemn agreement and covenant, which provided for the employment and promotion of your petitioners in the Civil Service of the said company, in consideration of the service to be rendered, and the conditions therein stipulated to be observed by them. The law, which, up to this time, has regulated the promotion of the Civil Service, has been an Act of Parliament XXXIII., 2nd year of His late Most Gracious Majesty George III., c. 52. The above law at section LVII. provides that "all vacancies happening in any of the offices, places, or employments in the Civil line of the company's service in India (being under the degree of councillor), shall be from time to time filled up and supplied from amongst the Civil Servants of the said company, belonging to the presidency wherein such vacancies shall respectively happen, subject only to the restrictions in this Act contained, and not otherwise; (that is to say) that in the filling up and supplying such vacancies, no office, place, or employment, the salary, perquisites, and emoluments whereof shall exceed five hundred pounds per annum, shall be conferred upon or granted to any of the said servants who shall not have been actually resident in India as a covenanted servant of the said company for the space of three years at the least in the whole, antecedent to such vacancy." And farther, at Section LIX. it is enacted, "that it shall not be lawful for the Court of Directors of the said company to appoint or send out to India a greater number of persons in the capacity of cadets or writers, in any other capacity, than it will be necessary, in addition to those already in India, to supply the proper complement of officers and servants contained in the said list of their establishments, according to such returns of vacancies as the respective Governments in India shall transmit from thence to the said Court of Directors." So far as the territories in India are concerned, which were, at the passing of the above Act, under the authority of the late Hon. East India Company, the above law has been strictly observed, except that the remuneration allowed to persons other than covenanted servants, has been in some cases in excess of the limit fixed. But all the higher appointments in all branches of the public Civil service, within those territories, and the greater number in territories subsequently acquired, have been hitherto conferred only upon covenanted servants. By the terms of his covenant, a Civil servant of the company is entitled of right to rise to such higher rank, and to have and enjoy such salary, compensation, and emoluments for his services, as he shall be entitled to according to his rank, office, and station, and the regulations of the said service, &c. And the higher offices in India being by the above quoted Act of Parliament limited to the Indian Civil Service, your petitioners have consequently hitherto enjoyed the exclusive title of promotion to those posts, according to their rank and merits, under the covenant and engagement made with them by the late Honourable East India Company. By the Act of Parliament, cap. 106, 21 and 22 Vict., entitled "An Act for the better Government of India," sec. LXVII., all contracts, covenants, liabilities, and engagements upon the late Honourable East India Company were made equally binding upon the Crown. Your petitioners are now informed, that her Majesty's Secretary of State for India has stated his intention of laying before your Honourable House a series of Bills for the repeal of the above law, and the avoidance of the conditions of your petitioners' covenant with the late Honourable East India Company. It is not the purpose of your petitioners to question the public expedience of such contemplated measures; nor if it were, are the details of the proposed Bills sufficiently known to them for that purpose. Your petitioners, however, learn that it is proposed to allow all offices which formerly could be held by Covenanted Officers only, to be held by any other persons whatsoever without restriction, and even to exclude Covenanted Servants from the enjoyment of some of the higher appointments in the judicial branch of the service which formerly could be held by them alone. But while content to leave the expediency of these measures to the judgment and wisdom of your Honourable House, your petitioners would venture to hope that their just rights and interests may be duly provided for in any arrangements which your Honourable House may see fit to sanction. It will be evident to your Honourable House that the vastly increased number of competitors to whom all appointments will thus be thrown open, will infringe the long-established practice and expectations created by their Covenant, in connection with the aforementioned Act of Parliament, and that they must naturally and very materially diminish the rapidity of promotion in your petitioners' service, and the average rate of their emoluments. They would also bring to the notice of your Honourable House, that they have been, for many years, bound by the terms of their covenant to subscribe a large per centage of their salaries to certain funds in the nature of assurance societies termed the Civil Service Fund, and the Civil Service Annuity Fund, the object of which funds severally is to make a provision for the families of such of your petitioners as may die leaving families surviving them, and for themselves after the completion of a fixed term of service. These funds being supported by a per centage on the salaries of your petitioners' service, any material diminution of the average of these, such as the measures proposed to your Honourable House would cause, will materially impair their stability and endanger the provisions above described. Your petitioners would respectfully urge that it was upon the just expectation of the promotion secured by the law which it is now proposed to repeal, and of the provision for their families and themselves which the new arrangements proposed will endanger, that your petitioners were induced to enter the service of the late Honourable East India Company. In doing so, several of your petitioners resigned other means of livelihood which it is impossible for them now to regain. That many have sacrificed health; that from age, and want of technical acquirements necessary in other professions, most of them are now unable to seek their livelihood elsewhere, while scarcely any who have families dependent upon them have sufficient pecuniary means for their support apart from their professional remuneration. Your petitioners would, therefore, submit that your Hon. House cannot, by simply cancelling the covenant entered into between the late Hon. East India Company and the members of its Covenanted Civil Service, place the latter in the same position as that in which they were on entering that service. Your petitioners accordingly humbly trust to your Honourable House in its justice to provide for the equitable consideration of their just claims and rights under the Covenant, and your petitioners therefore pray that if your Honourable House is pleased to pass the measures proposed for abolishing the exclusive privileges now possessed by your petitioners, that your Honourable House will guarantee to them and to all present members of the Indian Civil Service (as well as to those who now actually enjoy them) the benefits which the Civil Service Fund and the Civil Annuity Fund at present promise to their families and to themselves.

THE CONNAUGHT RANGERS.—A brilliant and successful entertainment was given by the officers of the Civil Staff at Delhi, in honour of the 88th Connaught Rangers on their approaching departure. About fifty sat down to dinner. In proposing the toast of the evening, Mr. Cooper, the Deputy Commissioner, called the departure of the regiment a great public loss, as the general orderly behaviour and peaceable demeanour of the troops, notwithstanding their being cantoned in the heart of a large city, and beset by every temptation which could demoralise a regiment, had been such as to relieve him from any anxiety as a magistrate. He noticed the matter thus more pointedly, as there were some unfounded aspersions cast on the discipline of the regiment in the beginning of the past year, which have been completely dispelled. Socially speaking, the loss of the regiment would be long felt, as a finer body of well-bred, hospitable gentlemen, and thorough sportsmen, could not be collected than the officers. Colonel Maxwell, in reply, said that he felt the compliment of the occasion, and appreciated it the more, as he believed it was by no means an ordinary or customary entertainment. He pointedly thanked Mr. Cooper for the candid and manly manner in which he had thoroughly sifted the whole matter of the baseless information which some low scribbler, probably whom he might guess at, but refrained from naming, had circulated. The health of the gallant brigadier was next proposed. The brigadier responded in a most humorous speech, concluding by proposing the Civil Service, and eulogising the harmony which had always characterised the intercourse on all matters between the civil and military authorities. Singing and music were kept up until a late hour, and a most enjoyable evening terminated.

THE FAMINE AND RELIEF.—At Budaon, in Rohilund, the distribution of food has been in operation since the 20th of February. Up to the 6th of March the total number relieved were 2,706, of which 560 were children and 951 women. A meeting of the committee was held on the 5th, at which the letter from the Agra Central Committee enclosing 1,000 rupees, and assuring them of their entire sympathy, had been read. It was resolved to apply the whole of the funds so received to the relief of the distress in the district, more particularly at Luleswan, in which vicinity the scarcity was very pressing, and a pauper poor-house, under the management of a respectable native sub-committee, was to be established at once, to be visited once a week by members of the committee at uncertain times. The committee anticipated great pressure for relief during the months of May, June, and July, and have made application for further aid from the central committee which has been acceded to. At Bijnour a meeting of the committee was held on the 4th. The total expenditure by local and sub-committees up to date had been Rs. 879. The number of applicants for relief at the Sudder station and outposts was increasing daily, and there was every reason to believe it would continue to increase. The largest number relieved at the Sudder station was on the 5th of February, when 1,205 applicants received food. Depots have been established at the tahseels in the district, or are in course of formation so that there will be one at each tahseel, and the members of the committee consented to visit them in rotation, at least twice in the month, although from the great distance some of these localities are from the Sudder Station, and the state of district roads, such visitation is necessarily attended with considerable inconvenience. On the whole, the distress in this district, though still on the increase, appears greatly checked by the relief already afforded. Many poor starving creatures who had reached the Sudder Station in the last stage of distress had gradually recovered their health and strength under the effects of regular and nutritious diet. The price of grain had risen during the week, and there was every prospect of its continuing to rise. Applications for further aid from the Central Committee to a considerable amount had been made and accorded. The monthly meeting of the Meerut Committee was held on the 2nd and 5th of March. During the past month the total number relieved were 41,956 men, women, and children, being a daily average of 1,605, at an expense of Rs. 3,210. The number of applicants, however, had been on the increase, occasionally as many as 1,800 being relieved in a day. The number of deaths in the poor-house and dispensary had been 188; and in consequence of the increasing number of cases requiring admission it was determined to extend the operations of the committee to meet the emergency, by the employment of additional hospital establishment. The co-operation of any of the residents interested in the cause in visiting the poor-house outside the Northern gate of the city, and aiding by their advice and any suggestions that may occur to them will be gladly received by the Local Committee. In the Seharunpore district, in addition to the measures taken to relieve distress at the Sudder station, depots of food are established at the different places in the tahseels. In that of Deobund, at Deobund itself, Rampore, and Nahanta. As yet the largest number relieved was 880, but it is calculated that more than 2,000 persons will present themselves for relief at these depots, and were more depots established at other places there is every probability that the number of applicants would proportionately increase, but unfortunately, with the exception of the three places named, there are no facilities for establishing depots anywhere else in the tahseel. It is calculated that to feed 2,000 persons at the rate of 5 chittacks of cooked food will cost at the present rate of prices, till the middle of September, more than Rs. 14,000. We would here observe that the amount of 5 chittacks of cooked food for each person cannot be sufficient to do more than barely sustain life. At Bijnour they have found it necessary to increase the allowance to 6 chittacks of cooked flour with about 2 chittacks of dal or vegetable, and salt in proportion. To return to the state of the Seharunpore district. It is calculated that it will be necessary to relieve the number stated above till the middle of September, for even if the rainy season this year is a favourable one, the dearth may be expected to continue up to that date. In the Deobund and Rampore tahseels as many as 209 deaths from starvation are reported: these are extended over a list of thirty-nine villages, the largest number in any one village being forty-five. In the Nakoor tahseel of the same district there are about eight thousand persons unable to subsist without relief, besides about four thousand who have left their villages to seek employment near the canal, &c. About one hundred and fifty persons are fed daily by the tahseeldar; and native gentlemen, and others who are able to do so, feed at their doors those who are really starving. By this means actual death from starvation has been averted. The scarcity in this tahseel has been very great, and the crops, except when under the influence of the canal, are very poor. It is calculated that three or four thousand rupees will be required to relieve the distress during the next six months. In the Dehra Dhoon, though there is at present no actual distress, it is becoming more and more imminent daily. If rain does not fall immediately the unirrigated portions of the spring crop will be hopelessly gone. After that time, if necessary, a relief committee will be assembled at Dehra, and steps taken for the establishment of food depots in the district. Several cases of distress have turned up in the Dhoon, but they were chiefly of refugees from the starving districts of Umballa and Bijnour, and most of them were fit to join the working gangs, and were accordingly sent to the works on the Roorkee and Dehra road.—Delhi Gazette.—Mr. Sloggett, Sec. to the Punjab Famine Relief Fund, calculates that from 45,000 to 50,000 rupees a month will be required for the distressed districts for the next six months at least. Should the harvest fail after that, the distress would be so appalling as to render all efforts for its relief quite inadequate. Mr. Commissioner Barnes has reported from Umballah to the Famine Relief Committee at Lahore, that the strong westerly wind which has lately prevailed is playing havoc with even the irrigated crops on the east of the Sutlej, while the unirrigated wheat wherever it was sown is fast withering away. The failure of the Rubbee will be far more general than the authorities suspect, and the distress, until the rain have lasted sufficiently long to throw open the grain stores with the promise of a new harvest, is dreadful to contemplate.

COURTS MARTIAL.—In 1860 there were 69 trials, European and Native, seven of which were on officers. In 1859 there were 71, eleven of which were on officers. There have been ten in 1861, five of which were on officers. Both years are far above 1856, when there were only 34, but out of this number there were nine on European officers. This only refers to officers and others tried on the Bengal side of India.

MEDICAL ACCOUNTS.—The Supreme Government has sanctioned the appointment of three auditors of medical accounts for the presidencies of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, on salaries of Rs. 800, Rs. 700, and Rs. 600 per mensem respectively. The above-mentioned officers will be quite distinct and separate from those principal inspectors general, who will exercise their supervision and control over them. The appointment of the aforesaid auditors of accounts appears to be a matter of necessity for purpose of keeping the check over the disbursements of a department the actual expenditure of which amounts to one crore and 30 lakhs of rupees per annum for the presidency of Bengal alone. Dr. Butler, formerly of Benares, is to be the auditor for Bengal on a salary of Rs. 800.

RANEENGUNGE.—There are now at Raneengunge, very badly housed and sheltered, nearly fifteen hundred European soldiers, women, and children; and we hear that the commissariat arrangements there might be better than they are. The European zemindar there has been reminded of his duty to furnish rusud for the troops, but we hear that he has pleaded his unpleasant position between that obligation and the impossibility of complying with it, on account of the strict orders of Government that all Bengalees are henceforth to be treated solely on the voluntary principle, and that no compulsion whatever is to be used.

CAPTAIN C. V. BOWIE, artillery, at present on the personal staff of his Excellency the Governor-General, will act as military secretary to his lordship, on the departure of Sir E. Campbell, Bart., for Europe.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR E. CAMPBELL, military secretary to the Governor-General, will resign his appointment and go home to England by an early mail, we believe, to assume command of a battalion of his regiment, H.M.'s 60th Rifles. Capt. the Hon. J. C. Stanley, of the Guards, aide-de-camp on his Excellency's personal staff, also goes to England almost immediately; and we have heard that further departures from the staff at Government House are probable.

DELHI, March 12.—The 82nd are expected to march into Delhi about the 18th. I suppose the 88th will go into camp about the 15th, to allow the barracks, &c., to be thoroughly cleaned and ventilated. Her Majesty's 94th have left Nowshera, and Sir Sydney Cotton bows them out of his command in a divisional order couched in the most flattering terms. In paying the highest of compliments to Lieut.-col. Buller, the General does not forget the meed of praise due to Lieut.-col. Mills, who went to England last year.

MAHARAJAH JUNG BAHADOOR has returned to his capital and resumed the charge of Minister and Commander-in-Chief from Randeep Singh. Sir Jung has lately proposed to Government that he might be permitted to hunt in the Darjeeling Terai, which was refused to him. The Maharajah, on his arrival in the city, has written to the Resident that if such a proposal had been made by Government to him in the like case, he would not have refused it. In consequence of the departure of Ranees Chunder Butty, from Katmandoo, to visit her son, the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, in Calcutta, the Begum Hazrat Mehal and her son, Brijis Kadr, have solicited the durbār to obtain for them the permission of Government to join the ex-king of Oude, at Garden Reach.

DARJEELING, March 8.—The force is doing nothing worth mentioning, but the Treaty, it is reported, has received Lord Canning's signature. Troops are all well. I hear H.M.'s 6th Regiment (the wing here) are not to go down till after the rains, but the 73rd Regiment N. I. are to go back to their station, and the Hon. Ashley Eden is to be stationed here as commissioner and judge on Rs. 3,500 a month. Mr. Eden and a party of one hundred and fifty strong have gone to the Rajah's principal place. They expect to reach to-day. Three of the Bhoots who stole the women and children have been given up—one got away, and two have been brought in.

TRAVELLING IN THE DELHI DISTRICT.—The sudden disappearance of Mr. Courtney, hotel proprietor, of Delhi, and formerly of Meerut, has led to the circulation of all sorts of rumours concerning his fate. It is known that Mr. Courtney started for Ulwar about the 1st or 2nd of March, and since that time he has not been heard of, nor can any trace of him be obtained. The state of the country is certainly not favourable for travellers, and it is feared that the ill-fated man may have met his death by some unfair means. Still, it would not be right to resign all hope, and he may yet be heard of, though it is hard to conjecture what can be the cause of the mystery that seems to hang over his fate. Robberies on the high road are now becoming so frequent as to make people reflect seriously before they undertake a journey. The Rev. Mr. Sloggett, secretary to the Punjab Famine Relief Fund, who came down with the Lieutenant-Governor from Lahore to see the real state of the country, extended his journey as far as Bareilly, and, on his return, was robbed of all he had with him. He has not yet arrived here, but it is supposed that he is endeavouring to trace some of his property, with a view to recovering it if possible. Another case (that of an officer proceeding to join his appointment) has just been made known. He lost all he possessed, including cash Rs. 600—rather a heavy loss for a young subaltern. It seems that the rascals climb up to the top of the carriage, and let the luggage quietly down; they examine it at their leisure.

NEMESIS.—The pressure of the prevailing distress and the apprehension pretty widely felt by natives of the continuance of the famine, and a subsequent visitation of a pestilence or epidemic have given rise to a sentiment which is to say the least, if nothing else, poetic. It is, that the souls of the innocents who were murdered at Cawnpore, Delhi, Shahjehanpore and other places during the mutiny have been crying out for vengeance on their murderers, and their cries have at last been heard in the Court of Heaven, from which the fiat has gone forth for the levy of that retribution from the bloodstained land which no human arm has yet taken. Those among the natives who are given to reflect on passing events, cannot fail to be struck with the present aspect of affairs. In most of the places in the North-West where three years ago English blood was treacherously and mercilessly shed, the poor of the land are fed and supported in thousands at the expenditure of lacs of rupees, by the survivors of the very race whose extermination was attempted by treachery and assassination so short a time ago. From this they may learn a lesson in the tenets of the Christian faith.—Delhi Gazette.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Mr. Beadon, Foreign Secretary, is to be Member of Council; Mr. Barnes, commissioner, Cis-Sutlej States, is to have Mr. Beadon's vacated appointment; Mr. Young, at present officiating for Mr. Beadon, has been appointed to the Revenue Board; and Mr. Brandeth, of Delhi, is to officiate as Commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States till November, when Sir H. Edwards is expected to arrive to hold that appointment.

THE NAGAS.—Again the Nagas have been very troublesome in Gojoo, not far from Cherra Poonjee, and have carried away many British subjects as prisoners. The agent at Kamroop has been directed by Government to try to procure their release, and the military authorities on the north eastern frontier have been requested to watch the depredators narrowly.

THE COVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE.—A meeting of members of the Civil Service was lately held at Allahabad, at which it was resolved that, as the measures proposed by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State will largely effect the professional prospects of the Covenanted Civil Service and endanger the stability of the Civil Service and Civil Annuity Funds, it is therefore, expedient to petition both Houses of Parliament to guarantee the stability of the above funds, and to grant such other compensation as may appear to them good and expedient.

THE DISTRICT OF NIMAR has been removed from the jurisdiction of the Government of the North-West Provinces, and will in future be administered by the Agent to the Governor-general for Central India.

FREEMASONRY IN CALCUTTA.—The 13th of March, 1861, saw a great and important event in Masonry, one which deserves to be publicly recorded, and preserved in the annals of the order; namely, the initiation into the Craft, in Lodge Star in the East, of his Highness the Maha Rajah Dhuleep Singh. We think it would be no exaggeration to state, that such a splendid and successful meeting in connection with Masonry has never before been witnessed in Calcutta. The lodge and banquetting-hall were crowded with the representatives of all the influential sections of society eager to do honour to the highly distinguished neophyte on this interesting occasion.—Hurkaru.

H.M.'s 38th Foot is under orders to proceed to Darjeeling for service in Sikkim, which looks as if the campaign in that country was of a more serious nature than we imagined. It would perhaps gratify the longings of would-be colonists if we were to annex the territory.

CAPTAIN G. B. MALLESON has been appointed Secretary to the Military Amalgamation Commission now sitting in Calcutta.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD DALHOUSIE AND THE MYSORE RAJAH.—The Bangalore Herald states that, on receiving the tidings of the death of the Marquis of Dalhousie, the Rajah of Mysore directed forty-eight minute guns, corresponding with the late Governor-General's age, to be fired from the ramparts of the fort, the cutcherries to be closed for three days, and the firing of the morning and evening gun to be suspended. When Lord Dalhousie visited the Neilgherries, the Rajah, in the course of an interview, told him that the railway and telegraph alone would hand down his memory to future ages. Lord Dalhousie, when in England, corresponded with him. In the height of the rebellion he expressed to the Rajah his satisfaction at his distinguished loyalty. The Asiatic loves whom he fears.

COLONEL PHAYRE ON CHRISTIANITY.—A correspondent of the Rangoon Times describes the visit of Colonel Phayre, the chief commissioner, to the Karen Christians at Toungoo. Along with the deputy commissioner he attended the Karen service on Sunday, when the well-known missionary Sau Quala preached from Matt. xi. 29. Urging the duty of humility he contrasted the officers of a heathen with those of a Christian Government. "Formerly none of you dared to appear in town; or if any came, it was only a few chiefs, who probably got a good beating before they got away. Those who did come, were not permitted to see the governor; or if a private individual were permitted to have a sight of him, he had to go down on his face, and crawling forward on his hands and knees, was only allowed to peep at him in the far distance. Now, you all come to town, with your wives and children, and gaze on the Governor as at this day, seated in your midst; and not only on the Governor of Toungoo, but also on the great Governor of Rangoon and Pegu, of Bassein and Prome. This is the fruit of Christianity. English governors have learned of Christ, so that they humble themselves, and associate with the children of poverty."

MALABAR COAST, Feb. 19.—Weather is getting very hot. We have not had the usual quantity of rain last monsoon, the fall having been about twenty-seven inches less than that of the preceding year. The European General Court Martial, mentioned in my last, assembled this day for the trial of Lieutenants A. Chrystie and J. Huddleston, of the 18th Regiment N. I. The former officer, who was tried a few months ago, on being placed a second time under arrest, submitted his application to be permitted to resign the service, which was not accepted by the Commander-in-Chief, and he is therefore obliged to stand the trial, with very little chance of saving his commission. I am sorry to say that cholera is again prevailing on the road between Cannanore and Hoonsoor. The company of European artillery and horse battery, now en route from Bellary to Cannanore, have been in consequence ordered to halt at Hoonsoor until the epidemic ceases. Captain Perrin's company of H.M.'s 66th Regiment having been relieved by another company of the same corps under the command of Captain E. J. Story at Calicut, returned to Cannanore on the 17th per steamer Bombay. The steamer left Cannanore the same evening for Bombay, with the following passengers on board from Cannanore:—Captain J. London, assistant commissary general, and Surgeon W. Hilbers, late in medical charge of the Mysore farm; the former proceeding to Europe on sick certificate, and the latter having retired from the service. It is rumoured that the Collectorate of North Canara and Zillah of Honore are to be abolished, owing to the expected transfer of three talooks of North Canara, including the seaports of Sedasheghur and Coompta to the Bombay Government.—English man.

ALGUADA REEF LIGHTHOUSE.—The Moulmein Advertiser gives an account of the laying of the foundation stone of the lighthouse on Alguada Reef, which renders the passage from Calcutta to Rangoon so dangerous. Major Sparks presided at the ceremony, and the Rev. Mr. Crofton conducted the religious service. Captain Fraser is the engineer. In his address, Major Sparks thus alluded to Lord Dalhousie's connection with the undertaking: "We must not forget that it originated in the mind of that great statesman to whom the province of Pegu is so deeply, so eternally indebted. Yes! He landed on this spot to see with his own eyes, as was his wont, and to form his own judgment. Here he at once determined a lighthouse should stand, and here accordingly this day, just after we have received the intelligence that weary and worn in the service of his Queen and country he has sunk into his rest, we have laid the first stone of this magnificent tower, which, better than any sepulchral monument, shall carry down to posterity the honoured memory of Lord Dalhousie."

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ADYE, C.B., of the royal artillery, has been appointed to command the combined royal and local artillery stationed at Secunderabad, in the Madras Presidency. Lieutenant Welch, of the royal artillery, is named as staff officer. The next step ought to be the appointment of Brigadier Swinley to the command of the horse and foot artillery of both services, stationed at the head quarters of the Bengal artillery, Meerut.

SIR W. DENISON, the new Governor of Madras, seems to have made a favourable impression at his first levee. The number of East Indians and natives present was not so great as in Sir C. Trevelyan's time. Lady Denison and her family will shortly return to England, to the great disappointment of Madras society. On her departure Sir W. Denison will visit Calcutta. Mr. Forbes, of the Legislative Council, is at present in Madras.

COTTON IN BURMAH.—The Friend of Burmah publishes a communication on the subject of cotton in British Burmah, where the Gossypium acuminatum and Gherbaceum of botanists, and Thin-bau-ueh and Wah of the Burmese, are cultivated. The first is the Pernambuco cotton of commerce, and was introduced into the province in 1834. The second is indigenous, and no attention is paid to its culture. The Karens grow it for their own consumption, sowing in May and reaping twice before January. It is said that before we occupied the country the cotton of Pegu formed the chief material for the looms of Dacca. Dr. Wallich found it in Martaban well cultivated by a Burman, and of good staple, superior to Barbadoes cotton, such as he grew in the Calcutta garden. The want of labour is the great drawback of cotton, and all other than rice cultivation in Pegu.

INFANTICIDE AMONG THE KOONDS.—We (Englishman) have some interesting particulars respecting the practice of infanticide among the Koonnds, and the measures being taken to suppress the horrid system. The whole of the chiefs of these tribes were lately summoned to attend the political agent, Captain MacNeile, whom they readily attended, and assured him of the entire discontinuance of the practice, in adherence to their former pledges, though he had information of four cases, which he has sent a trustworthy agent to inquire into and report upon. Means are now being taken to bring all these tracts under close scrutiny, and to secure during this season an authentic census of the whole population of these tribes, distinguishing the numbers of male and female children, as well as of the adults. It would appear that, with rare exceptions, they now rear all the female children. But in Goomsoor a girl has recently been sacrificed to the Meriah goddess, and the parties implicated have been sentenced to two years' imprisonment. A fellow recently mulcted these Koonnds in considerable sums, under pretence of a Governmental authority to inquire into these Meriah cases.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. HENRY HEBBERT will be confirmed in his present acting appointment of one of the Puisne Judges of the Sudder Adawlut.

MR. H. NEWTON will succeed Mr. Hebbert in the acting appointment of Puisne Judge.

MR. JAMES GIBBS, Special Commissioner of Income tax, is appointed to succeed Mr. Henry Newton as Registrar of the Sudder Adawlut.

COLONEL SHEPHEARD, now commanding the Bombay Fusilliers, has had the offer of the command of the Neemuch Brigade made to him, but has declined it. It has in consequence been conferred on Colonel Stiles.

MILITARY APPOINTMENTS.—We understand that the appointment of Remount Agent held by Lieut.-Col. Russell at Bombay is shortly to be abolished. Major Anderson's post as Superintendent of the Gaekwar's Contingent in Kattywar is to be abolished. Major Shaw, now Acting Auditor of the Commissariat Accounts, is to be confirmed in that office. This creates a permanent vacancy in the Clothing Agency.

CAPTAIN H. A. M. DROUGHT has been appointed Commodore in the Persian Gulf.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF Sir William Mansfield, K.C.B., proceeded on the 21st of March to Mahabeshwur via Mahar. A salute of fifteen guns was fired from the saluting battery at noon, in honour of his Excellency's departure.

THE REV. G. COOK, long Senior Chaplain of the Established Church of Scotland at Bombay, who has been for some time at home on leave, has resigned the service, and the Rev. R. F. Colvin, present Acting Senior Chaplain, assumes the higher rank forthwith, while the Rev. M. M. Ross, now stationed at Poona, becomes a full chaplain on the establishment.

THE KATRUJ AQUEDUCT.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says it is intended to open and cleanse the great aqueduct of Katruj, which has never been touched by the East India Company since they expelled the great Bajee Rao from the Guddee of the Deccan. This aqueduct is the chief source on which the inhabitants of Poona depend for their supply of fresh water, and was constructed more than a century ago by Nanna Sahib Peshwa, under the superintendence of a French engineer. "The work is not only most substantial, but scientific and superb."

MR. J. N. ROSE, C.B., Revenue Commissioner Southern Division, has sent in his resignation of the service, and returns to his native land after a lengthened and honourable career of twenty-nine years. In the departure of Mr. Rose the Government will lose one of its ablest officers, and who, while collector and magistrate of Satara, distinguished himself during the past political crisis. Mr. Rose, by his sound judgment, firmness of purpose, prompt measures, ability to act for himself on emergencies without referring to higher authority, and readiness to incur responsibility, was the means of saving the Southern Marathe country, and for the services rendered by him he was created a C.B. Mr. William Hart, Judge of the Sudder Adawlut, has been selected, we learn, to succeed Mr. Rose, and a better selection could not have been made, especially now that the Revenue Commissioners have been entrusted with the responsible duty of summarily disposing of all alienation cases. Mr. Hart has always been known as an impartial and hardworking officer, and having once been at the head of the Alienation Department, we have no doubt the alienation cases will now be speedily and satisfactorily disposed of.

First Additional Charge.—For conduct highly unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Trichinopoly, on Nov. 28, 1860, been insensibly drunk.

Second Additional Charge.—For conduct highly insubordinate and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at Trichinopoly, on Jan. 18, 1861, with reference to a regimental order dated that day, and published in the order-book, permitting him to take morning exercise, with certain restrictions, addressed a letter to the acting adjutant of his regiment, to the following effect, requesting "the officer commanding will be good enough to cancel the order in question, as the specimen of composition is merely an additional insult to those already heaped on me."

The Court found the prisoner guilty of all the charges, and sentenced him to be dismissed the service, which sentence was confirmed and approved by Sir Patrick Grant on Feb. 26.

Further Orders for Reduction of the Force in Pegu.

Adj't. Gen's Office, March 11, 1861.—No. 22.—With the approval of Government, the provincial C. in C. directs the publication of the following subsidiary instructions for the carrying out of the order of H.E. the Governor-general of India, for the reduction of the force in the Pegu division, published in G.O.G. No. 50, dated Feb. 15, 1861.

I. The officer commanding the Pegu division will communicate with the officer commanding Thyetmvo on the subject of paragraph 5 of the Governor-general's Order, and will horse the battery at that station with the best artillery horses in the division. He will further attach thereto 30 per cent. of the establishment as supernumeraries, being the estimated number of casualties in Burmah for two years. He will then allot a sufficient number of the remaining artillery horses to the mountain guns at Tonghoo. The rest of the artillery horses in the division will be made over to the local commissariat officers to be disposed of on account of Government, in such manner as may be deemed most advantageous to the State. The proceedings of committees which will be convened for the purpose of examining and allotting the horses as above, are to be forwarded to the adjutant general of the army.

2. Adverting to para. 8, it has been decided by Govt. that the three line corps to remain in Pegu are the 2nd, 11th, and 33rd N.I. The officer comdg. the Pegu div. will convene committees accordingly for the purpose of examining such men of the regts. about to be withdrawn* as may volunteer for transf. to the three corps above mentioned, and attach to them all who are pronounced by a committee to be "healthy and efficient soldiers" to such extent as will not increase the strength in privates at regtl. head qrs. beyond 800 each.

3. The latest returns of these three corps show that in the aggregate they are only ninety privates short of the complement of 800 each. In order, therefore, to make room for volunteers from other regiments, and that there may be "a present strength of 800 efficient privates with each corps of the line in Burmah," the officer commanding centre division will issue the necessary orders for all aged and weakly men of these three corps now at the native infantry depot being brought before medical invaliding committees; and the officer commanding Pegu division will adopt a similar course in regard to the units present with those regiments. The proceeding of the medical invaliding committees to be forwarded to army head quarters, as usual: but in anticipation of their receipt, nominal rolls of all men pronounced unfit for further service are to be sent in to the adjutant general of the army, in order to their immediate disposal.

4. In calling for volunteers, the officer comdg. Pegu div. will take steps to ensure the men being made aware of the priv. accorded to them of having their families sent over from India at once at the Govt. expense should they desire it; also of the option that will be given them of rejoining their former corps on the withdrawal from Pegu of the regt. to which they may now be removed. The preference that will be given them of volunteering for local service in the province of Pegu in the event of local corps being raised hereafter, is likewise to be explained to them. They will, of course, have the benefit of their former service, both in respect of good conduct pay and pension.

5. Nominal rolls of approved volunteers are to be forwarded to the adj. gen. of the army. The officer comdg. the Pegu div. will fix the date for their being struck off their present regiments, and report the same to army head qrs. in order to its being specified in the G.O. making the transfers.

6. The establishment of the 2nd, 11th, and 33rd regiments native infantry will, from the 1st May next, be in accordance with that fixed by G.O.C.C. 26th Oct. 1860, No. 108. All ranks in excess are to be borne as supernumeraries until absorbed: but consequent on the 200 additional privates now temporarily sanctioned, one supernumerary havildar and naigau is allowed for each company so long as this arrangement may continue.

7. Special committees need not be convened for the purpose of absorbing the supernumeraries in the grades of native commissioned officers, havildars, naigaus, dummies, puckallies, and lascars. Promotions to the three former ranks will be made at the rate of one for every two casualties; one supernumerary recruit or pension boy will be absorbed for

* Should the 32nd regt. N.I. be ordered to relieve the 22nd regt. N.I. at Poonah, instead of returning to India, in regard to which orders will be passed hereafter, the former regt. is not to be called upon by the officers comdg. the Pegu div. to furnish volunteers for the corps remaining in Burmah.

8. Consequent on the abolition of the ordnance depots at Moulmein, Shoaaytheen, and Bassein, and reductions in the ordnance establishments at Meaday, Tonghoo, and Rangoon, the following arrangements will be made:—

I. The whole of the establishments of the depots abolished will join the Arsenal at Rangoon, under arrangements to be made by the ordnance officer Pegu, through the general officer commanding the division, and there await final orders, for their disposal from the acting inspector general of ordnance and magazines.

II. All Lascars in excess of the revised strength of the depots at Thyetmew and Tonghoo, as also the whole of the native artificers at both these depots, will join the Arsenal at Rangoon: those Lascars who have completed 3 years' service in Burmah will be withdrawn from the two depots in question.

III. The reductions to be effected in the Rangoon arsenal will be carried out under instructions from the acting inspector general of ordnance and magazines.

IV. The ordnance depot at Meaday having been transferred to Thyetmew, it will be prepared to move under instructions from the general officer commanding the division.

V. Consequent on the abolition of the ordnance depot at Moulmein, provisions will be made by the native infantry regiment at that station for retaining in the local magazine, under regimental charge, fifty rounds of ammunition per man, with a full proportion of the necessary petty stores.

VI. All ordnance and ordnance stores in excess of the proper allotments will be withdrawn to Rangoon under instructions from the officer commanding Pegu division.

RETURN HOME OF THE 24TH AND 64TH FOOT.

Head Qrs., Bombay, March 21.—H.M.'s 24th and 64th regts. of foot are about to leave for England after a prolonged service in India.

Sir William Mansfield has much pleasure in testifying to the good conduct and discipline by which these regts. have been distinguished throughout their Indian career, in the most difficult circumstances of war and in quarters.

H.M.'s 24th foot took a leading part in the Punjab campaign, including the battles of Chillianwalla, Guzerat, and was much employed subsequently, in 1857, in maintaining order in the Punjab when that great province was denuded of troops on account of the siege of Delhi.

The 64th foot, after winning distinction in the Persian campaign, under Lieut. gen. Sir James Outram, went round early in 1857, and was amongst the first slender detachment of troops which, under the late Sir Henry Havelock, breasted the tide of mutiny until H.M.'s Govt. was able to act on a large scale for the suppression of the rebellion.

The 64th regt. was constantly engaged from that time till the termination of the Rohilcund campaign, including Sir H. Havelock's march and numerous actions, the Cawnpore campaign, the siege of Lucknow, and the capture of Bareilly.

To have formed part of the small body of troops which upheld the honour of England in India in the eventful year 1857 is a proud recollection for these two regiments, which will be handed down hereafter amongst the most glowing traditions of their records.

By order of H.E. Lieut. gen. Sir W. R. Mansfield, C.B.

C. H. SOMERSET, Col.

Dep. Adjt. Gen. H.M.'s Forces, Bombay.

The underment. officers have undergone a course of instruction in the drill and practice of the Armstrong field gun, and are duly qualified as instructors:—

2nd Capt. J. H. Malcolmson, 2nd Capt. T. M. Harries, and Lieut. C. H. Shute, regt. of art.

2nd Lieut. G. H. Bridges, 1st Eur. fus., and Lieut. A. Fergusson, 2nd Eur. L.I.

THE LORD BISHOP OF BOMBAY, after an extensive tour of three months in Guzerat, Neemuch, Nusseerabad, &c., arrived on the morning of the 19th March at the Presidency, and purposes leaving for Mahableshwur, his hot weather resort, in the first week of April. His lordship administers the rite of Confirmation on Wednesday, 27th, in the Cathedral, before taking his departure for the Hills. Bishop Harding's visits to Bombay are like angels—"few and far between!"

INAUGURATION OF THE BEYT TEMPLES.—A vernacular contemporary learns that the temples at Beyt, which were destroyed by British soldiers in the late expedition, have been rebuilt at the expense of his Highness the Guicowar, and by the contributions of other Hindoos. Thousands of persons, as well as nine Maharajs, were collected at Beyt to witness the ceremony of installing the new idols, which took place on the 2nd inst.

MR. MANSFIELD, the Revenue Commissioner, Northern division, left Bombay for Ahmedabad on the 21st of March. He is to settle some dispute raised in connection with the Income-tax by the inhabitants of the town of Dholka of the Ahmedabad Collectorate.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council, Public Works Department.—Nos. 503-508, dated Feb. 22, 1861.

RAILWAY.

Read again the following despatches from H.M.'s Sec. of State for India to the Govt. of India, having reference to the subject of expenditure on railways in this country:—

No. 110, dated July 10, 1860, in the Financial Dept.
 " 78, " Oct. 10, " " Railway "
 " 94, " Nov. 17, " " " "
 " 3, " Jan. 9, 1861, " " " "

Observations.—With reference to the above correspondence regarding railway expenditure, and more especially to Railway Despatch, No. 94, of Nov. 17, 1860, in which the previous restriction of the amount of railway expenditure in India for the year 1860-61 to £4,750,000, conveyed by Despatch, No. 110, of July 10, 1860, was withdrawn, and in which it was laid down that operations should not be delayed on those sections of lines which are advancing towards completion, or which the Govt. of India may consider of primary importance, the whole subject of railways has been taken into serious consideration, with a view to ascertain what sections come within the above description, so that in case of capital not being forthcoming for all, such sections might receive a preference.

2. In the mean time, in consequence of these orders, the restriction was withdrawn before it had been generally enforced, and the works have proceeded without material interruption, the result being an expenditure on railways in India for the financial year ending April 31, 1861, which, although not yet precisely ascertained, may be safely taken at about £6,000,000, instead of £4,750,000.

3. The further prosecution of railway works in India has become a question of serious consideration, upon which the Indian Govt. is anxious to obtain instructions from England as soon as possible. From the latest return obtained from thence, it appears that the situation on Dec. 31, 1860, was as follows:—

Designation of Railways.	Capital required as estimated by our Office.	Capital required as estimated by our Office in England.	Capital required as estimated by our Office in India.	Capital required as estimated by our Office in India.

4. The general result is, therefore, that, according to present estimates, which may possibly be exceeded, a sum of £56,000,000 will be required to complete the sanctioned railway system of India, towards which £39,666,300 only has been provided through the existing companies. Of this capital of £39,666,300, £32,547,540 had been paid in by the companies, and £31,186,404 was estimated to have been expended in England and India up to Dec. 31, 1860; so that by the close of the financial year on April 31, 1861, in round numbers, £34,500,000 will probably have been paid in, and £34,000,000 will have been expended. The balances of the companies will, by that date, have been considerably overdrawn, while those of others will be very small, and none will be at all sufficient to complete the works which have been sanctioned, as appears by the subjoined Table:—

The result is, therefore, that to the extent of upwards of £20,000,000 no provision has yet been made for the capital required to complete the system of Indian railways beyond the power of borrowing £3,000,000 taken by the Secretary of State last year, and which, if exercised, will nearly be exhausted in replacing the balance in England which has been expended in the current year.

5. Without here considering in detail the financial position of India, it is sufficient to note the fact, that by May next, or shortly after, the cash balances here will certainly be reduced to the lowest point at which it is possible to carry on the government of the country; and, advertising to the prospects of next year, and to the risk of deficient revenue and of extra charges which will be caused by the famine, it would certainly be highly imprudent to reckon on advances from the Treasury here for carrying on railway works on an extensive scale. In fact, a state of things is possible, or rather probable, in which, in the event of funds not being supplied from home in anticipation to carry on the railway works, the Govt. of India would have no alternative but to order their abrupt and complete suspension.

6. Under these circumstances it has become of extreme urgency to know as soon as possible what the companies and the Home Govt. are prepared to do. The expenditure is now going on at the rate of rather more than £8,000,000 a-year—viz., about £2,250,000 in England and £6,000,000 in India.

7. Should the Home Govt. decide on proceeding uninterruptedly with the whole of the railways sanctioned, it will require an expenditure in India of from £5,000,000 to £6,000,000 a-year for each of the next three or four years. If it be impossible to provide this amount in addition to that which may be required for expenditure in England, it will be clearly impossible to finish all that has been sanctioned, and, in that case, it will be of vital importance to spend what capital can be raised in completing lines or sections of lines which are already far advanced, rather than in commencing new works or prosecuting sections on which no great progress has been made without the assurance of being able to finish them. With this view inquiries have been made as to the actual state and progress of the different lines, and although information is not on some of these points so complete as could be wished, yet, as the results appear to be substantially correct, and the matter is extremely urgent, it has been laid before the Home Govt. under its present aspect.

8. It appears that upon the following lines the progress made has been such that the idea of suspending them could not be entertained unless upon the gravest emergency:—

CLASS I.

LINES.	Estimated capital in excess of that spent up to Nov. 15, 1860,* required to complete the several lines.
East Indian.—Main line from Calcutta to Delhi, with Singarrun Branch and Burrakur Extension (Ranceguige)	£ 4,790,681
Madras.—Main line from Madras to Beyoor and Bangalore Branch	559,964
Great Indian Peninsula.—Bombay to Sholapur and Bhosawul Junction	4,132,508
" " Bhosawul to Hurdah towards Jubbulpore (?)	774,000
" " Bhosawul to Omrawuttie towards Nagpur	2,850,100
Sind Railway	201,313
Indus Flotilla	88,300
Punjab.—Mooltan and Umritsur	1,596,685
Bombay, Baroda, and Central India.—Bombay to Ahmedabad	1,081,000
Eastern Bengal (right bank of the Ganges)	822,225
Calcutta and South-Eastern	58,736
Great Southern of India.—Negapatam to Trichinopoly	231,709
Total	£13,613,321

9. The following lines are either not commenced, or have made so little progress, that no serious loss would ensue from their suspension beyond that of the retardation of the benefits of railway communication:—

CLASS II.

LINES.	Estimated capital in excess of that spent up to Nov. 15, 1860,* required to complete the several lines.
East Indian.—Jubbulpore Line—Allahabad to Jubbulpore	£ 1,805,170
Madras.—Bellary Line—Arconum Junction to Moodgul	2,984,072
Great Indian Peninsula.—Sholapur to Moodgul	1,500,000
" " Hurdah to Jubbulpore	1,764,000
" " Omrawuttie to Nagpur (?)	774,000
Punjab.—Umritsur to Delhi	2,850,100
Total	£11,677,242

And one or two minor lines or sections are in an intermediate position, which makes it doubtful whether they could be suspended, as the Bangalore branch and the portion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway between Bhosawul Junction and Hurdah towards Jubbulpore. These have been included under Class I.; whilst the portion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway between Omrawuttie and Nagpur has been entered in Class II. These, however, do not materially affect the general result, which is that the railways may be classed in two categories; one which must be completed at all hazards at a cost of about £13,600,000, to be spent mainly in the two and a-half years commencing Nov. 15, 1860; another which it is very desirable to complete, but which might, in case of urgency, be suspended without grave loss.

10. Feeling the importance of not being committed further in respect to the latter class of lines, orders have been issued to suspend the commencement of any new works and to enter into no further contracts or engagements generally upon lines in Class II., until instructions shall be received from home as to the extent of expenditure which can be safely undertaken.

11. If it should appear with reference to the state of affairs on Nov. 15 last, that, in addition to providing the £13,600,000, indispensable in the next two or three years to complete advanced lines, the authorities at home can see their way to provide another £11,700,000, to be spent in the next three or four years in carrying out those portions of the general scheme which are yet scarcely begun, orders for the active prosecution of those portions will be given.

12. In fact, the Government of India is fully sensible how desirable it is to complete all those lines without delay if possible, and more especially that which will unite Bombay with Calcutta via Jubbulpore, to which it attaches the utmost importance.

13. But, on the other hand, nothing could be more lamentable than, after undertaking works beyond the means available, to be compelled from want of money to suspend them in a half-finished condition.

14. It is quite possible that only a limited amount of capital can be raised in England by the railway companies or otherwise during the next two or three years, and in the existing state of uncertainty whether this may not be the case, it is obviously desirable that such money as may be forthcoming shall be devoted to completing sufficiently to open for traffic those portions of lines upon which considerable progress has been already made, or on which considerable liabilities have been incurred, in as inexpensive a manner as possible, rather than in breaking fresh ground, or advancing works on which no great progress has been made, without the certainty of being able to pursue either uninterruptedly to completion, and also in preference to proceeding with costly stations or other works which are not indispensable for opening the more advanced lines of traffic.

15. Although it is impossible, until advices are received from home to say what amount of capital may be forthcoming, and what extent of restriction may become imperative, the Government of India are so impressed with the importance of not retarding works which are in full progress without the most absolute necessity, that they are prepared in the mean time to continue the expenditure for the present financial year, on the scale on which it is now going on, viz., of £6,000,000 a-year, and to confine their orders of suspension to the less urgent works.

16. The applicability of these remarks to each of the five local governments affected by them will now be considered separately.

17. Thus, with regard to the South-Western main line of the Madras Railway there can be no doubt. This line is so far advanced that the interests of Government demand its completion at the earliest date consistent with the economical execution of work. To this main line, then, the remarks previously made are applicable only to the extent of opening it in as inexpensive a way as possible regarding which some further general remarks will be found below.

18. But with regard to the Bangalore branch the case may be different; a report in detail regarding it will be awaited before deciding. Should the Government of Madras, on full consideration, think it possible to restrict expenditure on the Bangalore branch it is in possession of authority for so doing. The Government of India desires that no expenditure whatever should be incurred on the Neilgherry branch, which is understood not to have been commenced.

19. Again, with regard to the Bellary line from Arcunum to Moodgul. The Government of India has no doubt whatever that as much of this line as possible should be suspended, and that the energies of the company should be devoted, as it is believed they are being devoted to the Arcunum end, and to the completion of any works which have gone so far that they cannot be suspended without heavy loss. Under any circumstances, therefore, the Government of India desires that no further liabilities should be incurred on this line beyond what are absolutely necessary for the above objects, pending the issue of further instructions which will follow the report of the Madras Government on the subject.

20. The importance of the Bellary line will be considered, under the alternatives of thorough communication by rail from Madras to Bombay, and of the branch terminating at some point south of Moodgul. For, it is understood that the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company is indisposed to fulfil its engagement on that part of its line between Sholapoor and Moodgul; and, under the circumstances, it is highly probable that a junction between the Great Indian Peninsula and Bellary lines may not be effected for many years.

21. Regarding the Great Southern of India line the Government of India is disposed to restrict construction entirely to the portion between Nagapattam and Trichinopoly, for which the capital already guaranteed may perhaps suffice. In the mean time no avoidable expenditure should be incurred beyond what is necessary to place the works already commenced in a condition to be opened for traffic at the least possible cost.

22. Again, with regard to the main line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway from Bombay to Sholapoor, and from Bombay to Bhosawul, there can be no doubt. This line is so far advanced that the interests of Government demand its completion, and the remarks previously made are capable only to the extent of opening the line in as inexpensive a way as possible.

23. But with regard to the continuation of the line in the Deccan, from Sholapoor to Moodgul, forming a junction with the Bellary line of the Madras Railway the case is different, and it does not appear that the Government of India is committed to continue that line at all; whilst the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, though committed to continue it, should Government so desire, is understood rather to prefer continuation from Sholapoor in a different direction.

24. There cannot be room for doubt that continuation of this line from Sholapoor to Moodgul should be suspended until the receipt of further orders from England, and that the energies of the company should be devoted chiefly to their North-East line.

25. Again, the Government of India understands that the portion of the Nagpore branch of this railway between Bhosawul Junction and Oomrawuttee is too far advanced to permit suspension of work, except under circumstances not merely of anticipated failure of funds, but of that anticipation being actually realised.

26. But with regard to the portion of the same branch beyond Oomrawuttee, the case may be different. Under execution by the same contractors, who are carrying on the portion between Bhosawul and Oomrawuttee, it may be both possible and desirable to induce them to concentrate their energies on the section west of Oomrawuttee, after allowing them to place the works at the Nagpore end in a state of security, and to work up such perishable materials as they have collected. It is thought that with cordial co-operation on the part of the railway authorities this might not be difficult. How far such a course may be desirable, with reference to opening out the cotton districts, is another matter, and one on which the opinion of the Government of Bombay will be much valued.

27. Again, Government finds itself in a favourable condition to restrict expenditure on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway with reference to the understood failure of contractors to prosecute with vigour the portion of the North-East line between Bhosawul and Jubbulpore. For the present it will not be possible to continue progress along that entire length, and progress on the sections between Hurdah and Jubbulpore will cease as early as practicable. But it is worthy of consideration whether the section which lies between Bhosawul and Hurdah should or should not be continued so as to ensure uninterrupted communication with the Valley of the Nerbuda, on which subject the report of the Government of Bombay is desired with reference to mileage progress, total expenditure necessary, total expenditure already incurred, and political and financial advantages attendant on the early completion of that portion. And it may also be worthy of consideration whether arrangements may not be made with the contractors who hold the contract for the line between Oomrawuttee and Nagpore to transfer the portion of their establishment now employed on that section to the main line between Bhosawul and Hurdah. As at present informed, the Government of India considers such a result highly desirable, and will be glad to receive a full report on the subject from the Government of Bombay.

28. Regarding the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India line, decision, generally, may be expected from England. In the mean time the works will be prosecuted in accordance with the principles which will be found elsewhere in this resolution; the object being to render the line between Ahmedabad and Bombay as fully remunerative as possible at the earliest practicable date.

29. The Scinde railway and Indus flotilla have not been here considered in detail. It is presumed that a small extension of guaranteed capital, about £117,000, which they will probably be able to raise without further aid from Government, will enable those companies to complete their task satisfactorily. They do not here require notice. Similarly, in the Lower Provinces of Bengal, the Eastern Bengal, and Calcutta, and South Eastern Railways may be allowed to progress, affected only by the general remarks elsewhere found in this resolution.

30. It is manifest also that the main line of the East India Railway between Calcutta and Delhi must proceed vigorously, and the Government of India is indisposed to check either the Burrakur extension or the Singuram branch, further opening out coal districts. But on this line much may yet be done to economise. To it the general remarks in this resolution are fully applicable.

31. H.M.'s Sec. of State for India, in communication with the railway company, will decide, after consideration of the circumstances already stated, whether the Jubbulpore line in the North-West Provinces shall or shall not be commenced next working season.

32. In the Punjab it is not intended to interfere with the Mooltan and Umritsar line any further than to insist on such a style of building being adopted as will conduce to the opening of the line with the smallest possible original outlay of capital. The continuation of this line to Delhi is not at present contemplated, though highly desirable hereafter.

33. H.M.'s Sec. of State has been addressed with a view to ascertain the extent to which the Government of India may rely on being supplied with funds for the prosecution of the railways of the three presidencies for the next year or two, and, should this Government see its way towards the necessary funds being provided, it will be most happy to withdraw all restriction on the progress of the works; but, in the mean time, until further advice shall be received from England, it is indispensable in the interest both of the Government and railway companies to take immediate measures to prevent their being committed to any further liabilities or expenditure upon the lines or sections of line referred to, which are in a position now to be suspended without material injury to the works already in progress.

34. Under existing difficulties, circumstances must be quite exceptional which would render justifiable the adoption of any style of building for stations, work-shops, &c., more expensive than suffices for the accommodation of civil and military officers of Government at out stations, with the simple difference that roofs of decidedly inflammable material must be prohibited within a certain distance of the line, and altogether as a covering for valuable stores, &c., which, in some instances, moreover, may, on the score of economy in their preservation, deserve more permanent building. Without laying down any invariable rule, it may be remarked that in many localities in India, buildings, whose interior walls are of sun-dried brick, the exterior walls of which are of kiln-burnt brick, laid in mud and plastered exteriorly, will last for years; that dwellings, stations, and work-shops may advantageously be built in many localities of place bricks, or bricks which, although they are not sufficiently good for bridges, and will not ring properly, yet are very far superior to sun-dried bricks in resisting pressure and damp, and to which plaster will adhere; that, in many positions, mere mat sheds, mud plastered, with tiled or shingled roofs, may suffice for second and third-class stations; and that all that is really indispensable in such positions is a substantial retaining platform wall of the best material.

35. It is not intended to assert that these and similar make-shifts will always be most economical in the end; that is not the question. The real matter at issue is, shall the several lines be opened for traffic with such make-shifts, and commence paying their expenses, or shall many of them, from their constructors being over particular to have nothing but the very best description of brick-work, &c., remain, for years to come, unfinished and unproductive?

36. The several local governments have therefore been instructed to issue the most positive orders to their consulting engineers at once to step in and direct any such alteration in construction of buildings as may, in the opinion of those governments, tend to carry out the primary object of opening each line at the smallest possible expense, and totally regardless of appearance.

37. With this view consulting engineers have been directed to communicate with the railway authorities throughout India. The concurrence of those authorities is most important, and no doubt will be obtained.

Ordered.—That, with a view of keeping the Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and North-West Provinces, and the Punjab generally informed on the subject of railway prospects in India, a copy of this resolution be forwarded to each of those Governments.

Ordered, also, that the above resolution be published in the supplement to the Calcutta Gazette.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

From the Budget and Audit Committee, to C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India. Financial Department, Fort William, Feb. 22, 1861.

Sir,—In continuation of paragraphs 6 to 11 of our Report, No. 5 of the 15th October last, in reference to the incorporation of the accounts and audit of the postal and electric telegraph departments with the general system now approved and sanctioned by the Supreme Government, we have the honour to transmit copies of communications * received from the Director-general of the Post-office in India, from the superintendent of electric telegraphs in India, regarding this matter. We have also to add, that we have communicated personally with both these officers (Mr. Riddell and Major Douglas), and also with the Postmaster-general of the North-Western Provinces, Dr. Paton. We have now to submit our report regarding the carrying out of the principles already recommended by us in our letter No. 5, of Oct. 15, 1860, and sanctioned by Government in your letter No. 10,633, of the 20th idem. That principle is that the accounts of both these departments shall, after due preparation in the respective departments, be subjected to separate and independent audit.

2. In reference to the Post-office department, we were at first of opinion that the accounts of each deputy-postmaster in charge of a post-office should be transmitted direct to an independent examiner acting under the Imperial Audit Board, instead of being transmitted, as heretofore, to the Postmaster-general. The Director-general of the Post-office in India so far concurred in that principle as to consider that the accounts of each post-office, instead of being sent to the Postmaster-general, should be sent direct to the presidency. But Mr. Riddell urges that these accounts, before being subjected to independent examination by an officer under the Audit

Board, should first be examined, and, if necessary, corrected and completed in the Director-general's office. Mr. Riddell apprehends that, as the various deputy-postmasters receive inferior pay, and cannot, therefore, be highly trained officials, their accounts will often be erroneous and defective. These defects would cause much trouble when detected by an independent examiner; whereas they might all be, in the first instance, rectified in the office of the Director-general before the accounts were finally submitted for independent examination and audit. Mr. Riddell, therefore, is anxious to have a compiler appointed in his own office, to whom the accounts would, in the first instance, be submitted by the several deputy-postmasters, and by whom the said accounts would be primarily examined, and, if necessary, rectified, and then transmitted in extenso with vouchers and explanation, for independent audit. Considering all the circumstances of the case, we would admit this proposal, in addition to the proposals already submitted by us; and we recommend that the Director-general be allowed a compiler on a salary not exceeding 500 rupees per mensem, whose duties would be such as those already described. In his letter No. 570, of the 18th June last, Mr. Riddell showed how the cost of centralising the accounts of the department might be met by savings. He would manage to provide for the compiler's salary, without a net increase. At all events, the increase, if any, would be trifling, and would be desirable in consideration of the object in view.

3. In respect to the electric telegraph department, Major Douglas desire to retain the audit of departmental accounts as much as possible within the department itself. We still, however, consider it absolutely necessary that the principle of the accounts of every department being audited by independent agency, must be carried out for the electric telegraph, as much as for every other branch of the service. The arguments adduced by Major Douglas appear to us to be precisely the same as would be urged by any department which might desire virtually to exercise the power of auditing its own accounts. And we think that whatever control the Superintendent-general may desire to exercise over departmental finance will be amply provided for by the appointment of a compiler similar to the compiler which we have already recommended for the Post-office department. At present the accounts for each executive telegraph office are sent to the superintendent of the circle, who sends them on for audit to the Superintendent-general. We recommend that the accounts be sent by the officer in charge of each telegraph office to the superintendent of the circle, who is responsible officer, and will be able to check any charges peculiar to the department, which cannot otherwise be checked so well. The superintendent of the circle can then send them to the compiler at headquarters, who will transmit them in extenso with vouchers to an independent examiner acting under the Imperial Audit Board.

4. In both departments, post-office and electric telegraph, the compiler subordinate to the departmental chief should, we submit, be distinctly recognised as departmental examiner and sub-auditor, responsible for not permitting unauthorised expenditure.

5. We recommend that this system apply equally in both the post office and the electric telegraph departments, to fixed charges as well as to contingent charges. The fixed charges, comprising salaries, cannot well be subjected to pre-audit, the audit authority being often at a great distance, without causing delay and inconvenience. If it were said that these charges might be pre-audited by the local civil paymaster, still we should not recommend that this latter alternative be adopted, as it would cause delay and a multiplication of accounts. Nor in common with the subject referred to us in Government letter No. 6,968, of Aug. 11, 1860, would we advise that the cost of establishments for the electric telegraph department be limited, separately for each circle division or sub-division. The only limit consistent with the efficient working of the department seems to be the general one for the cost of the entire establishments in India.

6. We would recommend that the charges in the electric telegraph, as well as the post-office department, be paid, subject to the checks of the Budget, and monthly estimates of cash requirements and of post-audit. Both fixed charges and contingencies, for instance, might be paid within the limits of the sanctioned estimates, on the counter signature of the Postmaster-general and of superintendent of electric telegraph circle respectively. We would recommend, also, that every officer having contingent disbursements should receive a distinct advance permanently, say (50) fifty rupees per mensem. He would not account for this while holding office, but it would constitute his permanent stock in trade, and instead of setting off each cash contingent bill, as it was passed against the advance, he would obtain payment of it, and apply his advance to further payments as necessary. On leaving his appointment he would have to pay fifty rupees to his successor or account for the amount.

7. For the examination of the accounts transmitted from the post-office and electric telegraph departments we recommend that an independent examiner be appointed. This office would be immediately subordinate to the Audit Board, and should receive such a salary and occupy such a status as would offer every inducement for the work being done thoroughly well. One examiner might manage the detailed audit for both these departments, and would transmit abstracts to the Auditor-general. We believe that a salary of 800 rupees per mensem will suffice. We hope the cost may be met by the arrangement of other establishments. But under any circumstances, it would be necessary to incur the charge for the due auditing of the accounts of two departments, of which the aggregate expenditure must be considerable, and in which financial economy may be materially promoted by efficiency of audit.

8. We observe that Major Douglas deprecates the audit of the post-office and the electric telegraph accounts being both done by the same officer. But as the audit is independent, the departmental authority can have no concern in the method or the means by which such audit is conducted. The audit of one department alone might not furnish sufficient work for one officer, and instances are frequent in all branches of the service of one officer auditing the accounts of two or more departments. In fact, any reasonable objection which Major Douglas could entertain will be met by the proposition we have made for the appointment of a departmental compiler.

9. It only remains to notice one point in the electric telegraph department—namely, the system of cash payments for messages sent on the public service. It was thought that if an officer or a department had to pay for a message, and had to charge the amount in a contingent bill liable to audit, there would be greater care exercised in sending the message, in considering its actual necessity or otherwise, and in the length of the communication; and that the economy would result. We cannot, however, discover that this result has been in the least degree attained. On the other hand, we apprehend that the rule of cash payment is open to serious objection. Cash is received for this purpose by every department from the Treasury, and is again paid into the Electric Telegraph Office. This constant passing of cash from hand to hand is very objectionable. The substitution of stamps would, no doubt, remove some of these defects; but still there would remain an objection, as the service stamps would be liable to misappropriation. We would submit that it will be preferable to devise a plan whereby the responsibility of the officer sending the message may be fixed, without the actual payment of cash, and that thus the real object of the cash system may be secured. With this view we would suggest that a receipt-book be established, to be kept by the telegraph office. This book would contain a form of receipt and a check margin. The telegraph office, on receiving the message, would enter the number of words and the cost of the message, and having signed the receipt would transmit it to the officer sending the message.

10. The telegraph office would submit to the examiner of telegraph accounts, monthly, a separate statement of all receipts so issued, properly classified and debited to each department. On the other hand, the several offices sending messages will submit all receipts obtained by them from the telegraph office as above described, as vouchers. By means of these receipts the examiner will check the lists received from the telegraph department, and will bring to notice any department in which the number and extent of messages may appear excessive. This plan would, we think, meet the requirements of the case, and would ensure the charges incurred by each department for telegrams being strictly examined, and would ensure all the purposes of the cash system, without being open to any objection in practice.—We have, &c., H.E. in Council, at the same time, desires that the Budget and audit committee be called upon to report, without delay, in communication with the directors gen. of the post office and the telegraph departments, as to the precise salary to be allowed to the compilers under them, and as to the savings that may be effected in the post-office and the telegraph departments to meet the cost of the new appointments.

Ordered, that a copy of the above resolution be forwarded to the Budget and audit committee.

Ordered, also, that a copy of the resolution and of the Budget and audit committee's report, No. 11, dated the 22nd inst., be forwarded to the departments,* governments† and officers‡ noted in the margin, for information and guidance.

The Indigo Question.

India-Office, London, April 8, 1861.

My Lord,—I. Your several letters noted in the margin,* on various matters connected with the cultivation of indigo in the districts of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, together with your lordship's letter, No. 3, dated Dec. 29 last, transmitting the minute of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, dated 17th idem, on the report of the Indigo Commission, have been considered by me in council.

2. The labours of the commission† appointed under the provisions of Act IX. of 1860, have extended over some very important fields of inquiry. The commissioners have brought together a large and valuable mass of evidence on many points connected with the social condition of the peasantry of the indigo districts in Bengal; and they have very properly given prominent attention to the relation existing between the planter and the ryot, and to the elucidation of that which is, in fact, the gist of the whole question, namely, whether the cultivation of indigo, as recently carried on in Bengal, is profitable or unprofitable to the ryot, and therefore free or forced.

3. I entirely concur with the commissioners, with the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and with your lordship, that the evidence taken before the commission, including that of the planter himself, is conclusive as to the fact that the cultivation was unprofitable to the ryot, who was required to furnish the plant at a price which, with the extra charges to which he was subjected, did not reimburse him for the cost of production.

4. The unwillingness of the ryots to cultivate indigo was the natural consequence of the unprofitableness of the cultivation. The testimony to the compulsory character of the system, as it recently prevailed in Bengal, is abundant throughout the minutes of evidence which follow the report of the commissioners. And it is not surprising that, when once the ryots were made aware that they could not legally be compelled to undertake this cultivation, they should have expressed their resolution to abandon it, and to turn their lands to more profitable account.

5. There is nothing in the volume comprising the proceedings of the commission which more painfully shows the evils of the indigo system, as carried on in Bengal, than the evidence contained in them of the oppression practised upon the ryots, and the amount of violence and crime to which it has given rise. That many of the planters are kind and considerate in their treatment of the people, and have exerted themselves to repress the prevalence of such practices, will readily be admitted. It is in evidence, however, that kidnapping, confining, and removing ryots from place to place were offences of no uncommon occurrence, and that up to a very recent date, indeed within the last few months, cases of the kind have been reported by the local government.

6. It has been alleged that the want of a good police, and a more perfect administration of justice, has been greatly to the prejudice of the planters' interests. But whatever may have been the inefficiency of the police and of the Mofussil Courts, the remark of the commissioners at paragraph 112 of their report, as given in the margin,‡ is fully borne out by the evidence taken before them.

7. On a careful consideration of the evidence which accompanies the report of the commissioners, I cannot avoid the conclusion arrived at by your lordship, that the ryot has been left too long in ignorance of the protection which he might claim against the proceedings of any planter who had bound him by unred obligations, and who had enforced them by unlawful means; and further, that

‡ "When matters come to this, that the assistance or support of the police can be purchased like any other article, it is quite clear that the advantage will remain with the party who has the freest hand and the fullest purse; and it is surely not contended that in this respect the planter is at a disadvantage with the ryot, or lies at his mercy."

the ryot has not been adequately defended against the native servants of the factories by the Government and its officers.

8. I have further to express my entire concurrence in the opinions expressed by your lordship, and by the President in Council, that the conduct of the Bengal Government, and of its officers generally, in the transactions under consideration, has been marked by a strictly impartial administration of the law; and that the Lieutenant-governor was justly entitled to the full and cordial support afforded to him by your lordship in council.

9. Of the several measures which have been suggested for replacing the relations between planter and ryot on a more satisfactory footing, I agree with your lordship and the Lieutenant-Governor, as to the inexpediency of appointing special district indigo officers or commissioners.

10. As to other measures, the majority of the commissioners object to any law rendering a breach of an indigo contract on the part of a ryot a criminal act punishable by the magistrate, and the Lieutenant-Governor concurs with them. Your lordship would also deprecate any special legislation in behalf of any particular interest, but you suggest the question whether the law which renders cognisable by the magistrate fraudulent breaches of contracts for service, of contracts with artificers and labourers, or of contracts for public works, might not beneficially be extended to contracts for the delivery of any agricultural produce, where the breach of contract was fraudulent, and where advances had been accepted.

11. There is evidence on record, given by men of intelligence and experience, to show that, if fairly treated, the ryot will readily act up to his agreement, and that, in regard to indigo, it is the unprofitableness of the contract which has led to evasion on the part of the ryot. A striking instance of what may be done by good management and fair treatment of the people is given at paragraph 59 of the Lieutenant-Governor's minute.

12. Again, the experience afforded by the operation of the law of last year (Act XI. of 1860), for the summary enforcement of indigo contracts, shows the danger of transferring to the criminal functionaries matters which more properly belong to the jurisdiction of the civil courts. Hundreds of ryots were thrown into gaol for wilful breaches of contract under circumstances which, considered, in the light of the proceedings of the local Government, and of the reports of some very able officers in the indigo districts, are calculated to lead to the presumption that not a little injustice has been done in consequence of some magisterial officers not fully enquiring into matters urged on behalf of the alleged defaulter, which would have been fully investigated in a civil court, and which, if proved, would have been a complete answer to the case for the prosecution.

13. The true remedy in such cases is not to be found in a resort to legislative measures, which, by making the ryot criminally punishable for the breach of a civil contract, may operate unfairly towards any other creditors who may have claims upon him. It is rather to be found in dealing fairly by him, and in making him feel that a violation or evasion of his contract will involve the loss of what is advantageous to himself. I do not, therefore, consider that any sufficient reason has been shown for applying to the legislature to enact laws for the summary enforcement, by the criminal courts, of contracts for the delivery of agricultural produce.

14. As to a law for the registration of indigo contracts, the majority of the commissioners have given their reasons against such a measure at paragraphs 181 and 182 of their report; these reasons appear to me deserving of mature consideration. It may further be observed that there is nothing to be found in the past practice or legislation of India in support of such a system of registration. The Govt. has very properly held out every inducement towards the registration of deeds for the transfer of property and other important documents, and it is open to parties to register any deeds whatever. It is desirable to afford every facility to persons wishing to register contracts or other documents; but it appears to me that much more general inquiry is necessary before an act can be passed rendering imperative the registration of contracts for the cultivation of indigo by some thousands of ryots. The attendance of the ryot at the registry office, or of some one in his behalf, will be necessary if the registration is to have any force in the courts of justice. To procure the attendance of the ryots must devolve on the factory servants, who are not to be trusted, and in whose hands, it is to be feared, registrations might become very much what confessions have heretofore been in the hands of the police. As at present informed, I concur very much in the views of Lord Macaulay, when the subject was discussed by the Indian Law Commission in 1835: but I leave the question in your hands for further consideration and inquiry.

15. It is satisfactory to find that, in the opinion of the Lieut. governor, only about 14 per cent. of the supply of indigo from India is in any jeopardy, owing to the refusal of the Bengal ryots to continue the cultivation at existing rates.

16. I deeply sympathise with the planters in the difficult position in which a false system has placed them, and, with your lordship, I should greatly regret any general break down of the indigo trade of Bengal; but, as has been repeatedly shown, the remedy lies with the planter, and not in changes of the law. The interference, on the part of Government, should be confined, in the words of one of the witnesses, "to providing good magistrates, good judges, and good police, who shall see justice done to all, and leave no room for oppression on the one part, or fraud on the other." If to these be added an effective procedure to regulate the proceedings of the courts of justice, so as to obviate all unnecessary delay in the disposal of the cases brought before them, the Government will have done all that it can be fairly called upon to do.

17. A code of procedure has been enacted, of which the Lieut. gov. speaks, on the authority of the native judges, in terms of the highest praise. The police is now under process of reorganisation, on a system recommended, after the fullest inquiry, by a commission composed of the most experienced officers at the disposal of your Government; and subdivisional magistrates and local courts of justice are being multiplied in the indigo districts. These measures being carried into effect, disputes between the planter and the ryot must be adjusted, not by a resort to laws of a special character or for temporary occasions, but by a prompt and vigorous application of those which already exist for the guidance of the civil and criminal courts in the ordinary administration of justice.

18. I observe that, in providing for the crisis through which some of the indigo districts have recently passed, the Lieutenant-governor has occasionally invested mooniffs with the powers of deputy collectors, to try cases under Act 10 of 1859 for the collection of rents. I am of opinion that, as soon as circumstances will permit, those powers should be withdrawn, and the mooniffs be confined to their ordinary judicial duties, which, under the new code of civil procedure, can be properly discharged only by a punctual attention to the rules prescribed for the prompt disposal of cases, and for obviating the unnecessary detention of parties and their witnesses.

19. I have to express my approval of the replies given by you to the applications of Messrs. Hills and Co., Messrs. Watson and Co., and Mr. Cockburn, submitted with the letters under acknowledgment; and also of the manner in which the Lieut. gov. has disposed of the several matters of detail reported in them.

20. The very efficient manner in which the commissioners appointed under Act XI. of 1860 have discharged the important duties entrusted to them, entitles them to the cordial acknowledgment of the Government.

21. The appointment of honorary magistrate has formed the subject of a separate despatch.—"I have, &c., (Signed) C. Wood."

GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The directors state in their report that the engineer in chief anticipates that the line between Negapatam and Trivalore, 14½ miles, will be ready for opening in May, and the whole throughout to Trichinopoly in September. Notwithstanding the land was not obtained and the works not actively commenced until August, 1859, the railway will be completed and equipped in the space of two years—a result which must be considered very satisfactory, especially as having been accomplished under the immediate superintendence of the company's officers, without the intervention of contractors. During the year 1860 twenty-three vessels were despatched with permanent way materials and stores to the value of £118,573, and since then the remainder of the materials required for the completion of the line has been forwarded. The directors confidently believe that the capital account of the first section of the line, eighty miles in length, will be closed for a sum not exceeding £7,000 per mile, and that the traffic will be remunerative. They have appointed Mr. W. S. Betts, of the Great Northern Railway, to undertake the offices of agent and traffic manager in India. Shares to the amount of £155,000 have been converted into stock, and immediate steps will be taken to consolidate the remainder. The capital account showed that £416,142 had been received, and £381,861 expended, leaving a balance of £34,281.

ERRATUM.—In the editorial article in our last issue on railways in India, it was stated that £56,000 would be required to complete the system. This was, of course, a clerical error for £56,000,000.

RYOTS AND PLANTERS.

THE schism between the ryots and planters of Lower Bengal appears to be steadily widening. The first ground of dispute related solely to the cultivation of indigo, which was shown to be conducted on a system that was disadvantageous to all parties. The ryot received advances from the planter, the planter from the merchant in Calcutta, and he again raised money on account to meet these demands, in the best way he could. Thus all were trading on borrowed capital, and owing to the successive rates of interest to be discharged, there remained, on an average of years, a very small margin for profit. It is evident that under such circumstances the wheels must within a given time inevitably become interlocked, and the whole machinery brought to a standstill, with serious jarring and derangement of all its parts. Now, nothing is stronger than its weakest point. The capitalist might stand a longer tension than the man trading on credit, and he again than the husbandman who depended upon his daily labour for his daily bread. But if the husbandman broke down, the others, each in his turn, must also necessarily fail to accomplish what they had undertaken. And it is clear that the husbandman would have no alternative but to "strike," as soon as his industry was unequal to provide sufficient sustenance for himself and his family. This is precisely what has happened in Lower Bengal. While the necessaries of life were gradually becoming dearer, the price of the indigo plant remained unchanged, so that it no longer represented the same quantity of food as when the original agreement was entered into between the growers and purchasers. The value of the simplest general article of human food, whether it be rice or corn, must infallibly regulate the value of labour. Men labour to live, but if they cannot live by the result of that labour, it is absurd to suppose that they will go on toiling merely to enable others to enjoy a competency. In Lower Bengal things had come to such a pass that the ryot was no longer able to procure even his humble meal by the work of his hands and the produce of his land, if that produce were indigo. Is it to be wondered at, then, that he should refuse to go on wasting his time on an unprofitable pursuit? No doubt he acted illegally, but the primary laws of nature are above all human legislature, nor in this case do we see what

* "The plan of rendering invalid all contracts for the delivery of indigo which are not registered seems to me highly objectionable. It would either be useless or in the highest degree vexatious. If the present mode of registration should continue the proceeding would be a mockery. If, on the other hand, the registration is to be made really efficient, the business would be absolutely interminable."

other course was open to the ryots than first to remonstrate, and afterwards withhold their tale of indigo. It is hard upon the planters to lose their money, and equally hard upon the merchants to lose theirs, but surely it would be still worse if these tens of thousands of ryots were reduced to utter beggary—and, in truth, they are not far removed from that condition. It is said that the cultivation of indigo in Lower Bengal represents a sum of two millions sterling, which will now be diverted into other channels. Well, those other channels will benefit to that extent, but it does not follow that a substitute for indigo will not be found for the lands where it was previously grown. It will scarcely be asserted that Nudden, Jessore, and Kishnaghur will become a howling wilderness because the European planters emigrate to other districts. And how comes it that no complaints are heard from Tirhoot, from Allahabad, from Allyghur, from the Madras Presidency? Simply because indigo is there cultivated on sound principles, which enable all parties to derive a just and proportionate benefit from their investments, whether of capital or labour. But in Lower Bengal the question has become further complicated, the breach between planter and ryot further widened, by the refusal of the latter to pay rent. The reliable information we possess on this point is as yet too imperfect to justify our speaking with much authority, but there is some likelihood of a special commissioner being appointed to investigate the matter, and arbitrate between the contending parties. In the mean time a feeling of personal enmity towards European settlers is springing up, which it is hard to reconcile with the oft-repeated assurances of the planters that the natives have hitherto regarded them as their best friends. It does not appear that the native zemindars have any desire to get rid of their European neighbours. There is no evidence of their interference, or of their having offered any encouragement to the hostility of the ryots. It is of themselves the latter have come forward to break off all connection with their European "benefactors," and to express their preference for their own countrymen as landlords and employers. This conduct is both strange and suspicious, for why should they choose cruelty and oppression rather than liberal treatment and beneficence? Is it possible, after all, that the civilians have really had some reason for their distrust of the European settlers? Present circumstances certainly favour that supposition, but the whole truth must now soon be made manifest.

YOUNG BENGAL.

ANY one the least acquainted with the rising generation of educated Bengalees must have a peculiarly vivid conception of the feelings entertained by Cedric the Saxon towards his degenerate Normanising fellow-countrymen. The Normans were undoubtedly the more refined race, and in many respects capable of improving the boorish, unlettered, sensual Saxons; but, unfortunately, it was not their really good points the latter selected for imitation. It was far more easy to assume their foibles than their manly qualities, and to mimic their affectation than to adopt what was truly great and good in their character. Precisely so is it with the fashionable Bengalee of the present day. He apes the European, but does not imitate him. He sneers at the ignorance and superstition of his own countrymen, but he takes little trouble to acquire the wisdom and purer faith of the Feringhee. Superficial and conceited, he mistakes words for knowledge, symbols for the things represented, the merest impressions for the very body and substance, and obvious tricks and peculiarities for the inward and genuine man. In short, he is but a child playing at "make-believe," and fancying himself a Shakspeare or a Newton because he has read a play or passed—without comprehending—the pons asinorum. We have at this moment lying before us a literary production highly characteristic of Young Bengal. It is the first number of Mookerjee's Magazine, printed and published by Jagomohan Chuckerluty, at 92, Buranosey Ghose's-street, Calcutta. The price is three shillings, though it contains only seventy-four pages of the largest type. There are, in all, four articles:—1. "Raja Radhakanta and his Ancestors;" 2. "My First Railway (Trip?) to Rajmehal;" 3. "Gadadhur; or, a Moiety of Young Bengal;" 4. "The Reconciliation." The first article purports to be a critical review, in thirty-two pages, of a work in sixteen pages, entitled "A Rapid Sketch of the Life of Raja Radhakanta Deva Bahadur." This "book" is described as "a brief friendly account of the most far-famed Hindoo now living, and a one-sided family memoir;" and in the third paper it is alluded to as "an autobiography in the third person." The notices of the Raja's ancestors are said not only to be "meagre still," but also to "revel in the grossest inaccuracies." The reviewer modestly disclaims any particular knowledge of "the heraldry" of the Raja's family, but is ready to believe that few Sudras can trace their "geneology" to such a remote past. The earliest ancestor whose name is mentioned was twenty-fourth in direct ascent, and lived not far from Moorshedabad:—

"In those days, when wealth was confined to a few, and the communication with different parts of the country extremely difficult, when men of riches shrank from the publicity of their good fortune in terror of robbers, and roads—safe roads—were rare, it was accounted a feat among the Kayasthas [the Raja's family] to be able to assemble by suitable inducements, on the occasion of any marriage, all the Kulinas and Ghattackas scattered over the country, and take advantage of the collected hereditary lore to determine by discussions the relative rank of the Kulinas. These assemblages are denominated Ekkajays. The diffusion of wealth and by ter means of communication in our day have not rendered the Ekkajays less rare. The increase of population, the rise of a spirit of independence even in those who may be styled professional Kulinas, and, above all, the drying up in the people's mind of old channels of ambition, make Ekkajays now, as ever, few and far between. The seat of an Ekkajay for the time becomes so crowded as to be easily mistaken for a fair. Months previous to the wedding-day letters of invitation are circulated over all parts of the country, and days previous the expected batches of Kulinas and Ghattackas, numerous, begin to arrive in, are received with a welcome such as only Hindus can accord, and are shown their quarters. As soon as a boat bearing its august load of a distinguished Kulina and his retinue is announced at the Ghant, the host himself or a proper proxy waits on him to conduct him on shore. These guests are provided with every convenience at their lodgings: sometimes the shopkeepers are directed not to charge anything to them, but to lay their accounts before the host, and the host, as often as he can, visits them. Different guests trace relationships near or remote, as the case may be, among themselves, and inquire of one another's family. The contiguity of so many Kulinas and Ghattackas favour the contraction of marriage alliances, and agreements are often entered into for unborn issues. Many a father harassed to find for his son a bride who will not degrade the dignity of his forefathers falls in with a party possessing the jewel. Heraldic discussions, general conversation, and chess-parties and dice-parties beguile

the day. When all from all quarters have arrived the day of assembly is appointed. The chief heads of the Kulinas now draw towards each the Ghattackas who are to support their pretensions above others, and in this competition large sums are sometimes spent. On the appointed day—the day which is to set at rest the quiver of struggling breasts—slowly they proceed to the spot, attended by their partizans. As soon as a considerable assembly has been got up the discussion of rival claims is brought on the carpet. Gradually it grows warm, till at last nothing is distinguishable amidst a sea of noise and confusion. Dimly, however, through the smoke of hookkias and the deafening roar, is perceived who wins and who falls. And the table of precedence there settled immediately influences the relative value of the presents, including travelling-expenses, which the host gives his guests."

Another of the Raja's forefathers distinguished himself in a manner which the reviewer declares to be unusual for a Bengalee. "Ramcharana, unlike a Bengalee, after a gallant bush-fighting, in which he killed several of the enemy, died overpowered, as unbecame a Bengalee, sword in hand." This exceptional act of heroism, however, is regarded as a myth, though the Raja himself is absolved from all suspicion of having fabricated the story. "His Rajaship has not strength enough to bear the load of self-acquired laurels, and is not likely to covet to the serene triumph of his scholarship the glory of ancestral military renown." "Ordinary Bengalees," sarcastically observes the reviewer, "love to associate their fathers rather with fiscal settlements, or even with treaties than with bloodshed." However, as "the family throughout seem to be endued with an ease for migration so uncharacteristic of the stationary Bengalee," it is admitted that one of them may also possibly have been a mighty man of valour. Another characteristic of the true Bengalee is his accurate knowledge of the date of his birth even to a second. If no horoscope has been taken, it is clear that the parents must have been sunk at the time in abject poverty; and yet much obscurity exists even as to the year in which the most distinguished member of the family first venture into this world. But let this suffice for the first article, which presents less salient points for remark than those that follow. It is simply a weak, rambling tirade, full of words but devoid of ideas.

No. 2 is a very different affair. It is equally full of words, but not equally devoid of ideas—only, the ideas are offensive ones. The writer "makes believe" that he is graphic, that he is a Sala, or a Dickens, whereas he is nothing more than a poor Kerance, with a smattering of English verbiage. The object he proposes to himself is to describe facetiously his first railway excursion, and as usually happens when a man tries to write humourously without humour, the paper is full of wire-drawn platitudes rendered disgusting by profanity. He begins by premising that holidaymakers are "helpless under a shere embarass (sic) de richesse." The mind is so "bewildered amidst a maze of beckoning joys" that it cannot make a reasonable choice. "I have known," he says, "men of the most ardent temperaments and buoyant spirits absolutely sink under the weight of the consideration how to spend a holiday. Perhaps for the whole week previous the same consideration had afforded a perpetual pabulum to their elated minds, exercising their wits in the most torturing positions of human conceit, a fishing excursion or a picnic, cards or cricket, grouse shooting or a river trip—yet, when the day of action arrived, all their favourite plans broke down like a paper house, making them bilious—and sad, discontented and testy—the blasted relics of disappointed holiday making!” The writer confesses that he is no exception to what he calls the general rule. “Many is the time I have felt the agonising pain of a listless day, which I had hoped to spend like a king, but which I had slept out like a beast! Oh! the torment of that night on which I recounted the events, or rather the no-events of my murdered—cruelly murdered day. I could pluck my heart out of my breast and bastinado it for the crime of having made me miss my holiday!” However, he resolved not to sleep through the Doorga Pooja holidays of 1860, notwithstanding his “constitutional aversion” to railways. “I hate railways, and on that ground I stand in the teeth of Mr. Stephenson’s ghost, who is already grinning at me from the dark corner of the large room, which does duty at once for a dormitory, eating-room, study, nursery, and what not. Fortunately the next bed is fully occupied, and I can return Mr. Stephenson’s ghost stare for stare.” Had he the choice between travelling in a boat or in a railway-carriage, “I would by all means,” he says, “and without the impediment of a second thought, hang out for the former, though I fully know I cannot swim like a fish, and will go down to the lowest depths of the water like a plumb if by any mischievous freak of the stars of my destiny the frail wood took it into its head to turn a somersault, as it does almost every day of the year.” Nevertheless, he determines to go by rail to Rajmehal. “Perhaps it was a crochet (sic), a mere fantasy of the brain that made me stick to my resolution not to allow the Doorgah holidays to escape without some tangible use of them in a lively way.” But let it not be supposed that he was driven to run the terrible risk of a journey by railway by a less “adequate or omnipotent cause than a mere crochet of the brain or a simple fantasy of the mind. No! I will not perpetrate such moonshine. I am infinitely above it, so help me God, or even thou Sir Mordaunt Wells, that hast sworn to uproot perjury and forgery from Bengal.” The potent cause that drove Young Bengalee from his “restless couch” was the unceasing sound of tom-toms. “The sun had not yet risen and stars shone as brightly as on that night on which Lord Byron saw the Duchess’s ball at Belgium break up, to be followed by the break up of Napoleon’s splendid army at Waterloo.” To this brilliant allusion succeed several pages of word-painting a la Young Bengal, describing the crush to obtain railway tickets and the settling down in the carriages.

“Such, however, is the forbearance and elasticity of the much-abused natives of Bengal that the malicious Khyber was cleared without so much as an imprecation or a groan! Nay, there were men who achieved the heroic march with a smile upon their lips and a beam in their eyes! And well they might; for is not the mild Hindoo governed by a philosophy a homeopathic globe whereof would have sufficed to save France from her revolution and prevent the English people from perpetrating cold-blooded regicide? In any other country but Bengal the atrocious treatment of the third-class passengers would have brought down a grim and ghostly Nemesis about the ears of the officious puppies who bluster up and down the platforms in the full-blown impudence of irresponsible power. But the Bengalee has too great a love of sleek skins and plastic limbs to jeopardise their natural conditions in senseless sallies with guards, stokers, engine-men, et hoc genus omne of railway economy. He is content to pocket all the ills that ever flew out of the hand-box of that careless hussey Miss Pandora for the sake of another half pice. Perhaps, poor soul, he cannot afford to be liberal at the expense of that numerous brood of aunts and half-sisters whom he must feed out of his scanty income—and not only feed, but send them to Benares or Juggurnauth once every five years to fatten idle Brahmins and rascally faqueers.”

At last the writer finds a place in a compartment otherwise occupied by sons of Israel going to Burdwan to see the races, and is much pleased with the scenery; but by the time he reaches Burdwan, both hunger and thirst were in the ascendant, and had obliterated all enjoyment of the picturesque.

“The train stopped for just ten minutes at Burdwan. But the Burrabazar was a good fifteen minutes’ walk from the station. I could not eat in the hotel. My two sensitive caste stood across the doorway with a thick volume of the Shasters, ready to shiv it against my soft head if I dared attempt to make an entry. My throat was as dry as a sponge. I was dying of thirst! Mr. Caste shook his head authoritatively. I must not pollute my lips with water from the mussels. My gentleman in waiting had taken a most undue advantage of my kind disposition, and the rogue knew when I had once given up the reins to his keeping I was not competent to resume them, though it were to save myself from a precipice.”

It is in this jeering way that caste is ever spoken of, nor would one object to the diminution of that absurd and dangerous influence if any wholesome restrictions of any kind had been substituted in its stead. But no new edifice appears to have been erected on the ruins of the old, and the founder of the Christian faith is spoken of in a manner most offensive to His least fastidious followers.

The third paper in this extraordinary miscellany turns upon the proceedings of a miserly couple, who hoard their small earnings for the mere sake of hoarding. The “Moiety of Young Bengal” is, of course, a Young Bengalee way of expressing “a wife;” and the moral of the tale, if it have any, is to the effect that horoscopes, like other prophecies, are very apt to fulfil themselves. At least, if a very small sum be paid for one, and the astrologer in return predict the child’s death within the year, it is very likely that the child will die, because it is no one’s business to struggle against fate, and so neglect works out the prediction. The story throughout is most objectionable, and it is with a positive sense of relief that the reader arrives at the conclusion—notwithstanding the far-fetched allusions to Kant, Sterling, Coleridge, Maurice (whose Christianity—that is, of the last three—is said to be “a sentiment”), Young, Plato, More, Pope, and Sir William Hamilton.

We now come to “The Reconciliation,” a paper having for its object the laudable design of uniting more closely together the Hindoo and the European. Exclusiveness, says the essayist, is not the normal condition of our nature; and he rejoices that Europeans “are beginning to ask the question, however late.” We know not to what question he alludes, but he goes on to say:—

“They have perceived the length and the breadth of the liberties which they had, unwittingly it is to be hoped, and under a mistaken view of the thing, allowed to those sneaking mercenaries of the fiend who are ever aiming at annexation at the expense of the kingdom of heaven. We do not write in the spirit of a sermon, for we know we have no earthly title to the pulpit. But we feel convinced that ‘race’ and ‘antagonism’ and ‘higher destiny’ had no place in the Garden of Eden whilst Satan was groping through ‘upper and through nether darkness,’ and that it was the fiend who first rang the discord bell in the delightful abode of our unfortunate progenitor. Alas, how lustily that proud arm, that would fain have seized the thunder-bolts, plied the sonorous metal whose faintest echo reverberates through the farthest corners of two hemispheres to the present day!”

The blood feud begotten in the North-West, we are told, was unmenningly extended to Bengal. “The Pandu was confounded with the Moorkerjee.” But this was a cruel mistake, for the Bengalees “were loyal from the tips of (their) toes to the utmost mathematical points of (their) hair.” They were, consequently, not a little indignant at being misrepresented, and “indignantly repudiated the brand of the traitor.” The “heat of innocent passion” seems to have impelled them to the use of unsavoury language, for the writer observes:—

“The vocabulary of abuse is a dangerous book in the hands of the weak and the injured. Unfortunately the European press was publishing edition after edition of the wicked tome, in all the varied forms of editorial paragraphs, special correspondence, local Punch, and even Punjab reports. Are we to blame if we blindly took up the syllables and hurled them at their utterers?”

But this was clearly a mistake. “The educated Englishman and the educated Hindoo” are now going to speak “trumpet-tongued, and the firmest ministry shall quail before the moral fire of their remonstrances.” Imagine Lord Palmerston trembling at the explosion of a bottle of ginger-pop! “Already a bolt has been hurled by their united efforts which will rake up no small amount of dust in Cannon-row.” A pleasant hearing for Dr. Ballantyne and Mr. Miller, whose book shelves are alone likely to suffer! “What must be the condition of the devoted building when the political battery earnestly opens under such glorious auspices with its full service ammunition of petitions and protests!”

We have dwelt at this great, and apparently disproportionate length, upon this astounding farrago of conceit and ignorance, because it seemed necessary to expose the utter absurdity of the system of education under which the young Bengalees are at present trained. What they want, is—ideas; what they get, is—words. Their judgment, moreover, requires strengthening and guiding; but this essential task is entirely neglected. Mere copyists, their only proof of imagination is the notion that they are gifted with fancy. In their literary efforts, in fact, they resemble children playing with a kaleidoscope, who imagine that they are designing new patterns when they shake together the bits of coloured glass. It is evident that the Bengalee needs a severe and scholastic training. He has to be taught, first of all, how to think, and then by degrees he may come to know what to think. In the meantime he will do well to renounce all idea of magazine writing, and apply himself to his Bacon or his Whewell, and be content, like a little child, to be seen but not heard.

CALCUTTA AUCTION COMPANY.—The evils of the credit system in Calcutta may be seen from the fact that the bad debts of the Calcutta Auction Company for six months amounted to Rs. 9,113 on their general business, and Rs. 11,123 on Ford and Self's investments. The company has not declared a dividend. The value of their sales was Rs. 9,87,765, on which their commission amounted to Rs. 68,890.

THE ALLAHABAD RIFLE CLUB is to be merged into a corps. When there are fifty names on the roll, and when officers have been elected, the requisite applications will be made to the Government for the official recognition of the corps. Officers are not usually elected in such a hurry.

ALLEN'S MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

LE SOMMIER ELASTIQUE PORTATIF.

—HEAL and SON have patented a method of making a Spring Mattress portable. The great objection to the usual Spring Mattress is its being so heavy and cumbersome. The "Sommier Elastique Portatif" is made in three separate parts; and, when joined together, has all the elasticity of the best Spring Mattress. As it has no stuffing of wool or horse-hair it cannot harbour moth, to which the usual Spring Mattress is very liable; the prices, also, are much below those of the best Spring Mattresses, viz.:—

3 ft. wide by 6 ft. 4 in. long.....	£2 5 0
3 ft. 6 in. " " .....	2 10 0
4 ft. " " .....	2 15 0
4 ft. 6 in. " " .....	3 0 0
5 ft. " " .....	3 5 0
5 ft. 6 in. " " .....	3 10 0

The "Sommier Elastique Portatif," therefore, combines the advantages of elasticity, durability, cleanliness, portability, and cheapness.

In the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios it is unending in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood the use of the oil is attended with the happiest effects, mild, invigorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandruff, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price 3s. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news now brought by the Calcutta Mail of the 23rd March is only five days later than that received by the extra steamer on Friday last. The local journals are filled with violent abuse of the Home Government for making an advantageous arrangement with the descendants of Tippoo Sultan. In spite of figures they persist in regarding this transaction as a waste of public money and an insult to the people of India—apparently because Prince Gholam Mahomed is no better than the majority of Mussulman noblemen, and occasionally deals in horseflesh.

Another "scene" is reported to have taken place in the Legislative Council, the Government being defeated on a motion for the production of papers relating to a prison for Europeans on the Neilgherries. The facts of the case are thus set forth in the Hurkaru:—

"Some three years ago orders were received from home putting an end to the transportation of European and American felons from India to any of the British colonies, and directing that penal servitude should be substituted for that punishment. A Bill for this purpose was passed, on the understanding that the Government would as soon as possible provide a prison at the Neilgherries, or in some other locality where Europeans might be imprisoned without endangering their health, or subjecting them to the 'inhuman torture,' as Sir Charles Jackson called it, of imprisonment in the plains. For three years Europeans and Americans condemned to penal servitude by the Supreme Court have been confined in Calcutta. Sir Charles Jackson, while on leave at the Neilgherries last year, visited the prison which was being built, and found it totally inadequate for the purpose, as it could only hold about forty prisoners (there are thirty-three now in jail at Calcutta), and was built in such a situation—on the apex of a mountain—that there was no possibility of enlarging it, while a larger prison which it had been intended to build on Jackatollah had been put a stop to by the orders of Sir Charles Trevelyan. In order to call the attention of Government to this matter, Sir Charles Jackson gave notice that he would ask in the Legislative Council what progress had been made in the erection of a prison for Europeans and Americans."

This question Mr. Beadon declined to answer, but expressed his readiness to allow Sir Charles Jackson to see the papers in his private capacity, or even as a Judge of the Supreme Court. As no debate could ensue on asking a question, Sir C. Jackson moved that a request should be addressed to the Governor-general for the information refused by Mr. Beadon. In this he was opposed, not only by that gentleman, but also by Mr. Laing and Sir Bartle Frere, who were compelled, however, to bite the dust in the presence of superior numbers, for on the side of Sir Charles were Mr. Sconce, Mr. Erskine, Mr. Harington, and Sir Barnes Peacock.

The intelligence from China is satisfactory, and from Japan especially so. The Foreign Consuls have returned to Yeddo, and commercial relations have been fully re-established.

It is stated that the sum of £15,000 will be remitted by to-day's mail to India for the relief of the starving population. In all, £65,000 will then have been sent from London, irrespective of the large remittances forwarded direct from the principal cities in the kingdom. Judging from the Report published in February last by the managers of the Mutiny Relief Fund, we have more than once alluded to a supposed surplus of £200,000 invested in Government Securities, and yielding something over £7,000 a-year. It now appears, however, from Major-General Tremenhoe's letter to Mr. Low, published in yesterday's Times, that on the 1st of June, 1860, the liabilities of the Fund exceeded its assets by only £25,421. 13s. The liabilities, he asserts, amounted to £279,911. 1s. 11d., while the assets were no more than £254,489. 8s. 11d. Without questioning the gallant officer's veracity we must confess our inability to reconcile this assertion with the balance-sheet advertised in the Indian Mail of the 21st of February, 1861. In that document it was distinctly stated that on the 31st of December, 1860, there was a balance in hand of £229,736. 8s. 1d., which had been invested as follows:—

By purchase price of £100,000 New Three per Cents. ....	£95,814	8	3
By purchase price of £90,000 Four per Cent. East India Debentures, 1858 .....	90,424	7	8
By subscription for £40,000 Four per Cent. East India Debentures, 1859 .....	38,000	0	0
By balance on current account with the Bank of England .....	5,474	0	0
By cash in the secretary's hands .....	23	12	2
	£229,736	8	1

No doubt there were some liabilities to be discharged out of this quarter of a million sterling, but they could not have exceeded £30,000, and the committee themselves proposed to continue only to the end of the present year the outstanding allowances—for the most part to the widows and orphans of private soldiers. Indeed, it is inconceivable that so large a sum would have been invested in securities of this character, had it been insufficient to meet all existing claims. One might also have thought that General Tremenhoe, as the paid superintendent of the Fund, would have considered it his duty to dispel the misapprehensions that have very generally prevailed on this subject. We use the word "misapprehensions," because after the superintendent's formal and positive denial of the existence of a surplus, we have no right to question the fact, whatever opinion we may hold as to the disingenuous and unbusiness-like report advertised in the public journals. It is, besides, very clear that the people of England did not subscribe half a million for the pleasure of seeing £200,000 locked up in Three and Four per Cent. Securities, but for the immediate and efficient relief of their distressed fellow-countrymen.

BENGAL.

MR. LAING'S "GOLD" MISTAKE.

Mr. Laing, when he deprecated the introduction of notes of a lower denomination than twenty rupees, noted especially that the amount of notes of a lower denomination circulated by the Bank of Bengal was very small,—he said about three per cent. of the total circulation of the Bank. This he dwelt upon as proof of the little demand for ten-rupee notes, but we suspect him of making a case to support his preconceived plans. If he means that their circulation is three per cent. of the sum total issued by the Bank of Bengal, we have their four and a half lacs of rupees in ten-rupee notes, taking the average note circulation at one crore and a half of rupees. We thus have forty-five thousand notes of the ten-rupee denomination in circulation, which, we believe, will be found to be beyond the average number of any other denomination in circulation. Moreover, we have good reason to believe that the Bank of Bengal has not been able to supply the demand of ten-rupee notes. Had they been prepared to meet the wants of the public, a still larger proportion of ten-rupee notes would have been taken by the public.

This all tends to prove a foregone conclusion, and that gold was the favourite idea with Sir C. Wood and Mr. Laing. With gold they were to supplement the currency, and having once introduced it, they hope to mitigate the demand on Europe for silver, and again find a large field for the employment of gold, which would still longer delay that depreciation which all scientific men foresee as certain, from the continued supply of gold from California and Australia. For so great an object their first steps are very limited indeed, and we think they will find much more difficulty in carrying out their idea than they have calculated on. All the difficulties of a double standard meet them at the outset, and the proposal to make gold a legal tender to the value of twenty rupees they will find at once to present a most serious difficulty. We long ago showed the serious consequences this would entail upon the small trader, and even on the middle class bankers, in the event of a large influx of gold causing a depreciation in the standard value for the time being. Then what is this standard value? Does Mr. Laing intend to take the English mint value, and calculate the cost of bringing it to India as a charge against gold? This rate would have to be increased by the cost of sending it back, for the only relief Government would have from a large influx of gold in the treasuries would be to send it back to England for silver. This double charge would make the gold coined by Government too dear now; it would be dearer than the rates which have ruled in the Indian markets for years, and the public would refuse to receive it. If, again, the price of gold be fixed by Government at the average of Indian rates—less a moderate seignorage—the liability to great fluctuations would be increased, and the resource of sending gold to England would only be possible at a great loss. If gold is not made a legal tender, these difficulties would be considerably mitigated, and the gold would circulate or be hoarded readily enough at the fair rate established, liable to the fluctuations of the market and to the six months' notice of Government. To this no one would have the slightest objection: but there would be very great inconvenience in some parts of this immense empire if, gold having been made a legal tender, a fall were to take place, and a notification be issued of a determination to lower the value of the coin. We have never looked with favour on the various propositions for introducing gold into circulation, but we have said that the simplest method, and indeed the only satisfactory method, would be to coin a mohur of pure gold, to circulate at a fixed rate, with no longer time for a notification of change than one month. Government price currents or monthly notifications of the value of gold for the following month would protect the Government from the influx which would be sure to follow when it was profitable to pay gold into the Treasury. We expect, however, that gold will never so circulate in this country as to make up for the want of notes of a small denomination; and we do not doubt but that Mr. Laing will yet be driven to accept this conclusion, whilst he will meanwhile only provide gold for those who hoard it by making it into ornaments, and bury it in holes and tanks.—Englishman.

THE EXPEDITION AGAINST THE KOOKIES.

We are enabled, from private letters placed at our disposal, to give our readers the following interesting account of the late expedition from Chittagong against the Kookies. These gentry had been amusing themselves by plundering and burning several villages, and at last became so troublesome that it was necessary to take some rapid mode of putting an end to the nuisance. Accordingly a force, consisting of military police and armed peasantry, the whole under the command of Captain Raban, assisted by Captain Magrath, superintendent of Hill tribes, left Chittagong in January, with the intention of penetrating, as far as possible, into the enemy's country, and reading the natives a severe lesson. After placing a chain of posts at different important points to protect the inhabitants of the plains, who are mostly Government ryots, the rest of the force, about 600, followed the course of the Kornafoolie river upwards as far as Burkal, a seven days' march, at which place Captain Magrath had been engaged for some time in organising a force of coolies for the conveyance of stores, &c. His endeavours, however, had not been very successful, and the number of coolies he had been enabled to collect was so small, that it was deemed advisable to move two hundred and forty men only into the enemy's country, with supplies for ten days. At this same place a day was thrown away in a wild goose chase after a chief called Ruttun Pooea, who was said, by Captain Magrath, to be close at hand. It was also rumoured that this individual intended to dispute the road with a fabulous amount of followers. The whole story, however, turned out as fabulous as the followers: no one was seen or even heard of, and the next day the force, after marching four or five miles, crossed the river with their baggage, &c., and encamped in the jungle on the opposite bank. Early the following morning they started again, and, after marching, or rather scrambling and wading, for some distance, halted at four p.m. The path that they followed led up the bed of a nullah, now and then diverging across some steep hills covered with dense bamboo jungle, through which they had to cut a way for themselves and their elephants. However, it was soon found that it was more than useless to try to move the elephants any further, and it was very fortunate that this discovery was made, for instead of getting better, as was expected, the road got worse and worse at every step, and it was only by scrambling and clinging to bamboos, &c., that the men were enabled to get on at all. After a few days the force surprised a party of the enemy, followers of a chief called "Linsingooora," who, with all their goods and chattels, were en route to join Ruttun Pooea. They were so completely taken by surprise, that they had barely time to scamper into the jungle, leaving all their property behind them, and followed by a smart volley from our men. Only a few women and children were taken, as the thick jungle favoured the escape of the others; but even some of them must have been wounded, as shown by the blood-marks on the track. Indeed, one of their number, who was afterwards taken prisoner, stated that they had lost eight men. The next day the force ascended a mountain called "Ohepoom." On the summit of this mountain was a large village, built on piles, which was at once burnt and looted by the armed savages attached to the force. On descending the other side of the mountain our men came across a party of the enemy, who immediately commenced assailing them with a volley of abuse, followed shortly afterwards by one of musketry, which, however, did not do much injury, as only one coolie was wounded in the arm. The enemy now began to pass the road, that is to say, to stick a lot of bayonet-shaped stakes into it, which greatly impeded any rapid advance. At the bottom of this hill was a rapid and tolerably deep river, in which some officers, who had rather incautiously exposed themselves, got fired into from the opposite bank. Fortunately a naick of the 5th Bengal military police was the only man wounded, and he got off with a ball through the thigh. By this time the force had got to within one mile of Ruttun Pooea's village; and as the coolies and armed savages who accompanied the expedition were powerless from fear, Capt. Raban determined to leave them behind, telling off a small party to remain with them as a protection. They were also ordered to entrench themselves—a proceeding which, under the influence of terror, they carried out speedily and effectually. The remainder of the expedition, about 180 in number, left the camp next morning at seven o'clock in light marching order. After proceeding about a couple of miles they came upon a picket of the enemy. A feeble exchange of shots followed, but no one was hurt, except two Sikhs of the 1st B.M.P., who were wounded by the stakes set in the ground in front of the picket, which was itself masked by the jungle. After removing the obstructions, our men again went on, and at length debouched on a "joom" or rice "khat," which had been cleared by the Kookies on the summit of a hill. This hill formed one of the sides of a wide valley, and on the top of another hill, opposite the village, the enemy were posted. From this position they fired over the village, and opening a discharge of musketry on the attacking party, who, however, very soon drove them from their position, entered the village, burnt and looted it, having only one man, a Havildar, wounded in the neck. The village—a very large and substantial one—was immediately destroyed, as well as some stores of provisions found there. There being nothing left to loot, and no enemy visible, the troops returned, and on their way pulled down several store-houses well filled with grain. As the offending chief had now been as severely punished as the information at the disposal of the commanding officer allowed of, it was deemed advisable to fall back, as supplies were failing, and the coolies and armed savages who had been left behind were in such a state of fright as to be capable of only one movement, and that a rear one. The troops therefore returned to the "Burkal" depot without opposition, and there the coolies decamped without leave or even pay, leaving the expedition to carry its own supplies, if it felt disposed to advance any further. As there was no chance of getting any more of these men, and the main object of the expedition had been gained, orders were at once given to retire to Chittagong.

There were good reasons for adopting the determination to fall back on Chittagong, as it was useless to remain in a jungle without any means of acting on the aggressive; besides, owing to the nature of the country, the enemy could easily have turned the rear of the marching-force and ravaged the plain country. Posts had, it is true, been placed at some of the important points, but still it was impossible to do as much as ought to have been done. Such a contingency had been foreseen, and in fact when the force left Burkal, a party of forty men of the 1st and 5th B.M.P., under a jemadar, had been detached to occupy a position commanding a ford over the river Copalong, by which it was thought likely the enemy might attempt to make an inroad. Events showed that this precaution was fully needed, for the detachment was enabled to intercept a party of Kookies, who had been plundering Pergunnah Oodeypore, rescue several captives, and retake a quantity of arms and plunder. That the enemy understood the importance of this post is shown by the fact that they had the audacity to attack it on the 15th March, and keep up a smart firing from 11 a.m. till 5 p.m. The garrison only consisted of thirty men, of whom ten were sick, the remainder having left with Capt. Magrath to inspect some villages belonging to Asel Chunder Dewan, which had been plundered by the party attacking the stockade. Capt. Magrath heard the firing, and returned immediately, just in time to catch the Kookies as they were retiring from their fruitless effort. Although the enemy were fifteen to one, he immediately charged them, drove them across the river, and pursued them for ten miles, not giving it up till the night came on. In this smart affair only one man was wounded. The enemy not only suffered severely in killed and wounded, but lost almost all their captives, with the exception of a few, who, by threats of instant death, they managed to force along. One poor child who could not keep up was stabbed on the spot, to show the others what they might expect in turn. The next day another party went out and captured a considerable amount of loot and several stands of arms. The Kookies are now said to have had enough, and will probably pause a little before they try anything of the kind again, as, although very good at attacking unarmed villagers, they are no match for the military police, who, in spite of the censure passed on them by that authority in military matters, the Friend of India, have shown no want of spirit and perseverance. Thus ended the Kookie expedition, and it will be matter of consideration to those who rail at British rule in India to reflect that it was despatched to avenge injuries that had been inflicted on men who were not Government ryots, but subjects of the independent Rajah of Tipperah and the Kalindee Ranee. With the former Government has nothing whatever to do; and the latter, although entitled to British protection, are looked upon by the Kookies as subjects of the Ranee. It would be well, too, for the Government to pay some attention to the fact that the Kookies were well supplied with English powder and ball, which they doubtless procured from our mahajuns. The British Government had a severe lesson of this nature in the Kaffir war, and it would be an act of wisdom to correct the evil while there is yet time. On the whole, the expedition was very similar to the one now marching into Sikkim. There was the same almost impassable country, the same never-fighting enemy, and the same difficulty in procuring supplies; but the fact of the long marches made by Captain Raban, as compared with the way in which the ground is got over in Sikkim, is well worth the attention of those officers who are entrusted with the conduct of the latter. The Kookie affair lasted a month only, and the enemy received a lesson which will keep them quiet for some time to come.—Englishman.

IRRIGATION IN THE DOAB.

The present famine in the North-West Provinces, arising from the failure of last rains, urgently calls for an examination, and possible improvement, of the existing means of irrigation, which lamentable experience prove to be very deficient.

There are at present three methods of irrigation in use in the North-West Provinces, viz.:—

1st. Raising water by hand from natural or artificial pools of water.

2nd. By raising water from wells, generally about fifty feet deep, by means of bullocks pulling up a leathern bag attached to a rope working over a wheel and axle.

3rd. By water from the Ganges Canal, of which a large proportion has, however, at present, to be raised about four feet.

Before proceeding to irrigate land, it is obvious that correct information regarding the quantity of water required per acre for each particular crop must be obtained.

Considerable difficulty has been encountered in collecting this information, and we are by no means positive that we have even now attained absolute precision.

Personal surveys and measurements, and information kindly supplied by influential land-owners, and others, lead to the following figures:—

Wheat requires water equivalent to a rainfall of fifteen inches; barley half this amount.

This water has to be applied to the crops during the months of December, January, and February, at intervals of about twenty days.

The sources whence this quantity of water is to be obtained we have already detailed above, viz., pools, wells, and canals.

The first source of supply is only available after a season in which at least an average amount of rain has fallen, and in such a case as the present it is a total failure. The second source of supply, viz., wells, is the one solely used this year for land situated above six miles from the canals; but from the failure of the rain crop, and the consequent scarcity of cattle forage, this method can only be adopted to a very limited extent, as the immense area of uncultivated land in the Doab at present shows.

The area of wheat land that can be irrigated by two pairs of bullocks working one leathern bag is about four acres, of barley eight acres.

The practice of watering is as follows:—

A whole ox hide, formed into a bag, is suspended at the end of a stout rope, which is carried over a wheel fixed about eight feet above the well's mouth. When the bag is filled, the other end of the rope is attached by a loop and peg to the yoke of one pair of bullocks, which are then driven down the slope, from the well's mouth. When the bullocks reach the foot of the slope, the bag has arrived at the surface of the ground, where it is emptied by the attendant. In the mean time the second pair of bullocks has arrived at the top of the slope where the wheel is fixed, in order to be ready for the next lift. These two pairs of bullocks require the attendance of three men.

One driver, one to fill and empty the bag, and the third, who, under any system of irrigation, would be required to guide the water into the proper channels.

From personal measurement, we deduce that a leathern bag, as used in the North-West Provinces, contains 4.5 (four and a half) cubic feet, and that two pairs of bullocks, relieving each other in the manner above described, will raise this bag full of water to the surface of ground forty times in an hour. Supposing the bullocks work ten hours a day, and taking ninety days as the working season, we have the following result:—4.5 add 40—10—90 equal to 162,000 cubic feet. One acre, equal to 43,560 superficial feet. 162,000-43,260, equal to 3.72 acres, covered one foot deep with water, as the result of the labour of two pairs of bullocks and three men, working ten hours a day for ninety days. The difference between these figures and the previous statement—that water equivalent to a rainfall of fifteen inches is necessary for the wheat crop—is accounted for by the usual Christmas rains, which even this year have not failed us. From the above description of the well system of irrigation, it will be seen that it is very expensive, and can only be of very restricted application.

Beside the objection of expense in working, this system is quite impracticable in large tracts of the Doab, as the sandy nature of the subsoil entails the necessity of masonry wells, and it is quite plain that such a well, costing at least Rs. 500 to even every twenty acres, is entirely out of the question. The ordinary well is simply a round hole, lined for a few feet of its height from the bottom, with a wooden or plaited brush-wood casing.

We now come to the canal system. This is of comparatively recent introduction into the Doab, and has as yet only been carried out to a small extent.

The principal difficulty in the Doab is, that the supply of water is very irregular, and not nearly sufficient for the area to be irrigated.

The quantity of water entering the Ganges Canal is 6,750 cubic feet per second.

The area of the Doab, down to Cawnpore, is 9,000,000 acres.

Allowing that a supply equal to forty-eight inches of rainfall (four feet of rain deep) is necessary to provide against a total failure of the rains, and without which cattle forage cannot be grown, nor the wheat lands ploughed up for sowing, the necessary supply of water is—quantity required, 1,568,160,000 cubic feet per annum.

Quantity available from canal, 212,868,000,000 cubic feet per annum.

quantity required, allowing nothing for waste evaporation, or leakage. Unfortunately, from errors of construction in the canals, the supply available is by no means equal to the quantity entering from the Ganges. Great loss arises from filtration, as is proved by the level of the water in neighbouring wells being only fifteen feet from surface, whilst at a distance from the canal the average depth from the surface of the ground is about fifty feet. Had the canal been originally puddled, this loss would have been prevented, as well as the banks secured from scour, to which they are at present liable, and which in places goes on to a dangerous amount, sometimes even to the extent of bursting the canal, when there is a full supply of water. This scouring action which is perpetually going on, besides destroying the banks of the canal, causes a quantity of sand to be deposited on the land under irrigation, and forms numerous sandbanks in the canal and its branches, entailing the channel.

Another serious defect in the construction of the canals is the temporary nature of the dam at the canal head on the Ganges. This dam is merely composed of slight ribs filled with shingle, which, being quite unable to withstand the floods of the rainy season, are always swept away about the end of June, and the depth of water entering the canal during the months of July, August, and September, is only 2 feet 6 inches, instead of 6 feet. This defect, when added to the want of strength in the banks already mentioned, seriously diminishes the value of this otherwise magnificent work.

We think that we have now made it sufficiently plain that the real desideratum in the Doab is some method of raising water from wells, that shall be considerably cheaper than bullocks, and that will not require an extravagant outlay in masonry wheels.—Engineers' Journal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIKKIM.—March 14.—The troops, after crossing the Teesta on the 3rd, pushed on for Tumloong, and arrived on the 10th at Kabi, close to the capital. The Rajah's son, deputed to meet Mr. Eden, arrived at Tumloong on the 12th, where Mr. Eden joined him with a guard of one company of Europeans. All the force were shortly to follow. The Rajah had given orders for a suitable house to be prepared for the Envoy's accommodation; so everything at present bears the tint of couleur de rose. Only two, however, of the criminals have as yet been surrendered; and our plundered property comes in rather leisurely. It is always thus with Orientals—their mode of proceeding is generally slow. It looks less humiliating and more dignified to be cool, composed, and deliberate in action. The column seems to have encountered many difficulties in its advance, and to have had some harassing marches. The mules could not carry their loads, which had to be transported by coolies, of whom no less than a thousand accompany the troops. The animals had to be swung down the rocks by their heads and tails! The absence of a photographer is greatly to be deplored, as the scenery is described as surpassingly magnificent. It will be some time yet ere the force returns, which it will probably do via Rinchinpoong, to which place a road is in course of construction. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Colonel Gawler, the commander of the expedition, for the skill and boldness, tempered by caution, with which he has thus far succeeded in an enterprise presenting so many obstacles of an almost insurmountable character. Unless our terms are complied with, I suppose we shall have to hold one or two fortified posts in Sikkim throughout the rains, say at Niamchi and Rinchinpoong. If so, no temporising must be allowed, for we shall barely have time to house the troops, and make due arrangements for feeding them ere the rains commence.—Englishman.

DACOITS.—The Delhi Gazette says that a daring attack was made upon the baggage of the 2nd company sappers and miners by a band of dacoits at a village not far from Hattras. They contrived to plunder the conveyance of the commissariat agent of everything it contained.

ORISSA.—Among the numerous districts which comprise the hill tracts of Chinna Kemedi, there is one called the Maliah of the Bogodah zemindary, inhabited by Khoonds and other persons identified with them in customs and domicile. In these tracts Meriah sacrifice has never obtained, and female infanticide has only been practised in certain districts. The agency there has consequently exercised less supervision over the zemindary than in other parts where these revolting rites have been hitherto rife: but though free from the stigma which attaches itself to other districts, they are, nevertheless, the scourge of the neighbouring mootals, as they are inhabited by a race of thieves, whose livelihood is obtained by the plunder of the surrounding country. These depredations are not confined to the hill tracts, but are extended to the low country of Chinna and Bodo Kemedi, within two marches of Berhampore. Some few years ago, before the agency had extended its operations to that part of the country, an attempt was made by the Ganjam authorities to suppress these systematic robberies, and a few persons were apprehended, found guilty, and sentenced to various periods of imprisonment. This for a time had the desired effect, but as the Agency seldom visited those parts, and year after year passed without any notice being taken of the Bogodah hill tracts, these gang robberies have year after year increased, and have at last assumed such a magnitude that the Agent was this year waited on by a deputation of men of all classes and professions, from the low country of Chinna Kemedi, who voluntarily came a distance of 70 miles from their houses to present petitions, in which they most earnestly requested him to adopt measures to punish this tribe of hill robbers. Numerous petitions of a similar nature have been preferred by all the influential hill men who live in the vicinity of the Bogodah hill tracts, and who are unanimous in stating that these robberies were becoming more numerous, and their perpetrators more audacious, owing to the non-interference of Government. The Khoonds suffer very much every year by the small-pox. They, on hearing that there were persons in the low country who by inoculation could prevent the ravages of small-pox, sent a deputation to the low country, who returned with three or four individuals. These traversed various mootals, and vaccinated many hundred Khoonds; but the persons thus brought from the low country turned out to be adventurers and impostors, possessing no genuine lymph, and who reaped an abundant harvest from the mistaken confidence of the Khoonds. Many of them had been reduced to poverty, owing to the demands of these impostors. Several cases occurred in which Khoonds had pledged their own children to others with the view of obtaining money to pay for having themselves and families vaccinated.—Englishman.

MR. YULE.—A deputation from the Indigo planters waited upon Mr. Yule, the Commissioner at Bagulpore, on the 13th March, and presented that official with an address, in which they express their regret at his approaching departure from that district, and at the same time their respect and admiration for his conduct towards them during the period of five years he has had charge of the district. In testimony of their gratitude, they request his acceptance of a service of plate. Mr. Yule, in thanking the deputation for the address, has, however, declined to receive the memorial, on the ground that Government do not permit their servants to receive such testimonials.

NATIVE HOLIDAYS.—Under the new rules about to be promulgated in the North-West Provinces, instead of fifteen days' holiday at the Mohurrim, and five weeks at the Dussehra, three days only for the former, and five days for the latter have been allowed by the Lieutenant-Governor. This latter is the longest holiday of consecutive days that will be in future allowed; and it will be no more practicable for the native judges and others attached to the Civil Courts to visit their distant homes during this short holiday than it has been hitherto for the officers of other than the judicial department to do so.

MOVEABLE COLUMNS.—On the suggestion of the Military Finance Commission, the Commander-in-Chief is directed forthwith to establish a practice of ordering out each moveable column occasionally for the purpose of exercise, "that in times of tranquillity they may become so accustomed to move, that, when required to turn out under the sudden call of duty, to quell any disturbance, every one may know his place and clearly comprehend what he has to do, and that confusion and disorder may thereby be avoided." The Governor-general most justly considers that the money disbursed for this purpose will far more than repay its value by the greatly increased efficiency of the available force and the perfect readiness at all points for immediate calls of service, which will thus be acquired. Thus the cattle establishment will possess more than the advantages of a transport train or baggage corps, commanding officers having the cattle under their constant observation.

SIKH VIEW OF VOLUNTEERS.—The Lahore correspondent of the Bombay Times, describing the interest taken by the Sikh gentry in public events and their large correspondence, says the establishment of volunteer corps in India has attracted their attention. Speaking on this subject to a venerable old Sikh Sirdar, who had witnessed the rise, decline, and fall of the ancient order of things, the writer found that the creation of these bodies of non-military combatants had given serious annoyance to many, who, as the old man said, "hoped that we would fall asleep again untaught by the past disaster."

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The Governor-General has decided that no officer, under the rules of the Uncovenanted Service, can be allowed preparatory leave of absence when he wishes to proceed to England on private affairs.

THE MINTS.—During February the following sums were received at the three mints:—

	Calcutta.	Madras.	Bombay.

A MISSIONARY MEETING was held at Peshawur on the 12th February, "for the purpose of spreading information regarding Missions." Sir Sydney Cotton presided. Captain James, the Commissioner, gave an account of the Peshawur Mission; the Rev. A. Horsburgh of the Borneo Mission; the Rev. J. Macarthy of the results of Indian Missions; the Rev. T. Tuting of the work in the city of Peshawur, and the Rev. Mr. Lowenthal of American Missions. Although there are so many chaplains, missionaries, and Christian men in the several stations of India, the fact of a Missionary meeting like this excites remark from its rarity.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, March 23).—The amount of business done in this market is almost wholly limited to orders which were given some time since; no new transactions of any moment are reported. The increasing depression in the home market has not as yet had the effect of inducing holders of produce here to lower their demands; and pending some considerable reduction, shippers would hardly be disposed to enter the market. Jute.—In brisk demand, particularly since the receipt of more favourable accounts by the last telegram, when several purchasers have come into the market. There being an active competition for new qualities, prices have gone up 2 to 3 annas per md. for them, increasing the cost of a bulby from 8 to 12 annas. Hides.—Since the last mail business in Cow Hides for the English market has been more extensive at about one rupee less. Dacca Hides are now quoted nearly Rs. 2 less. Stocks are on the increase. There has been very little doing for America. The stock of Buffalo Hides is good.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, March 23).—A limited business has been doing, mainly attributable to the fact of importers consenting to a decline in rates; but, notwithstanding this temporary reaction, the present condition of our import market is as far as ever from being satisfactory. Grey Shirtings.—Since our last report the market for this staple has improved, particularly for 39 inch makes, which have advanced 4 to 6 annas per piece. Grey Jacquets are in some demand, and may be quoted about 1 anna per piece higher than before. White Jacquets.—Middle qualities of these goods have improved about 1 anna per piece on our last quotations. Grey Madras-pollams.—Low qualities of these goods have advanced 2 to 3 annas per piece, but other kinds only one anna per piece. Mull Mulls are in some demand, but in prices we have no change. White Mule Twist.—This staple has improved both in demand and value. COLONEL AND MRS. BROWNE.—The cost of the testimonial given by Madras to Colonel and Mrs. Browne is Rs. 2,667. Colonel Browne was the able and popular Military Secretary for many years, and now commands the Kamptee force.

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE, who has long been fretting under his deprivation of sovereign power in his State, has, it seems, taken advantage of Gen. Cubbon's resignation of office to send home a forcibly worded claim to the resumption of his authority; but nothing will come of his application, since he abused power when he had it, or suffered it to be abused by his creatures, and thereby sustained the loss which he complains of, conformably to the treaty which enthroned him. The restoration of his direct authority is not likely to be thought of.—Athenæum.

A MAIL-COACH COMPANY has been started at Bangalore from April 1. It is to run regularly between that station and Tripatore. The coach very much resembles a railway carriage, and will carry two inside and two out.

THE CINCHONA PLANT.—Dr. Macpherson, who recently published information regarding the cinchona plantations in Java, has reported on the sites chosen by Mr. Markham as nurseries for the cinchona seeds expected from South America. Mr. Ochterlony, a planter, is warmly thanked by Government for giving up some of his land in Coorg as a plantation. Two sites have been chosen on the Neilgherries named Avalanche and Nedivattam. Dr. Macpherson says it is no wonder Mr. Markham's plants died. They were offshoots from the roots of trees, and had no roots of their own. Mr. Markham, who himself selected these plants, must have been unfitted for the duty. His experiment has been a total failure. It has cost some £2,000. It remains to be seen if the seeds now being sent by Mr. Spruce will succeed in the three sites selected by Dr. Macpherson. They have sprouted well in the Kew Gardens.

BANK OF MADRAS.—The proprietors of the Bank of Madras held their annual meeting on the 4th of March. The business, in payments and receipts, amounted to twenty-three-and-a-half crores of rupees, of which not a single rupee was written off for bad debts. The dividend for the last half-year was low, but for the previous half-year it was high. The average of the two was seven-and-a-quarter per cent., which was one quarter per cent. under the average for the last six years. The Bank's issue of notes is to cease from the 25th of February, 1862. Mr. Cammiade rose repeatedly to ask for explanations regarding the correspondence between the Bank and Government on financial questions, but the President said the directors were not at liberty to make the correspondence public at present.

THE PARSEES.—A lecture on the origin of the Parsee religion was delivered before the United Service Institution at Poona by Dr. Haug, Professor of Sanskrit, Poona College. The professors of this religion, he said, do not exceed now 150,000 persons. The Zend books were restored about 235 A.D. The Parsees came to India in the eighth century. The Zenda-vesta itself is but a collection of fragments. It is written in two dialects, neither of which is understood by the present Parsees. A very small part of the collection was composed by Zoroaster himself and his immediate disciples. This is divided into five portions, called Gatha or songs; the metres are nearly those used in the Vedas. The name of Zoroaster occurs in the Veds under the form Jaradashti. The three greatest living expounders of the Zend-Avesta, namely Westergaard, Spiegel and Haug, agree that the Hindoo and Zoroastrian systems were originally the same.

AGGRESSIVE ROMANISM.—We observe in the Sindian newspaper a reward of one hundred rupees offered for the discovery of Helen Romanini, the daughter of Mrs. Ellen Shea, midwife, Bombay. The young lady is alleged to have been removed from Kurrachee by the "absolver of human sins," Fra Joseph, and is believed to be moving about in duress towards Hyderabad and the Upper Provinces, in company of the holy Father Athanasius.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, March 16.—The London Mail of 26th January arrived here on the 13th. The departure of the outgoing Mail has been postponed for twenty-four hours.

The news from Japan is still interesting, and, so far as we can learn, highly gratifying. It is to the effect that Mr. Alcock and the other representatives of foreign countries have been requested to return to Yeddo upon terms that give them all that assurance of safety which they complained was wanting. The same report states that our Minister would re-enter Yeddo under a salute of twenty-one guns. A later account informs us that he has done so, and a letter has appeared in some of the newspapers, which he wrote before leaving Yokuhama. Its tone is merely congratulatory, without anything of sufficient note to call for publication.

The news from Tien-tsin is not of course marked by any event of importance. The weather has been extremely cold in that part of the far North, the thermometer falling below zero on one or two occasions. All the country is reported to be frozen over as hard as a sheet of iron; the river is expected to break up about the beginning of March. Mr. Bruce's mails and the whole of one French mail had been sent via Chefoo, but the English naval authorities had not thought fit to send the garrison mails, which therefore remain in their hands undelivered. It is said that Mr. Bruce, with several officers in his suite, will go to Peking about the end of March. There appears to be truth in a rumour that famine has been prevailing in that city, and that the greatest exertions have been made by the Chinese government to have speedy supplies of rice from the South.

From Shanghai the news is likewise very interesting. We may call attention to a letter from one of the gentlemen accompanying the Yangtze expedition, where ample and interesting details are given of the Admiral's progress.

The insurgent cause is rapidly gaining ground, and if recent reports may be trusted, it is being marked by a better organisation, which will have the effect, it is to be hoped, of removing that character for lawlessness and disorder which has hitherto cast a stain upon the rebel party.

From Swatow, we were sorry to hear, a week or ten days ago, of the disappearance of the second engineer of H.M.'s gunboat Cockchafer. It would appear that the unfortunate young man was last seen at nine o'clock on the night of Saturday, the 2nd instant, and was then slightly the worse for liquor; and there is too much reason to fear that an attempt had been made to rob him, and that resistance on his part led to his murder. At all events, he has not since been heard of, though a heavy reward was offered by H.M.'s Consul for the recovery of his body, dead or alive. Some people seem to think that the late bombardment of one of the villages on the south bank of the river by the gunboat Weazel, has led to the murder. Such may indeed have been the case, or the poor fellow may have been accidentally drowned, but a suspicious-looking sampan was seen to pull away from Double Island that night about the hour he was last seen; and little or no hope is now entertained of his being still in existence.

From Fuchau our correspondent says:—Business dull. The Spartan, which vessel went on shore on the banks at the entrance of the river on her passage home, and was obliged to return to port, is nearly discharged, and the ship Panic has left with most of the Spartan's tea. Nothing can be done with the wreck, though were she in Whampoa she could be repaired; her back is broken, and the new dock, though nearly ready, will not be able to take her in till it would be too late. The season's tea is now nearly all gone; there is one vessel loading here for London, which will start in a few days. The weather has been pretty fair, not much rain, and the Chinese seem to have their hands full in the paddy-fields.

From Amoy we learn that trade was improving. The French transport, wrecked there some time back, is now nearly gutted by those who bought her; they purpose blowing up what remains of her.

The latest news from Canton is to the effect that Sir Hope Grant has directed the troops there to make their arrangements for another year's stay. The Shameen site is nearly complete, and hopes are entertained that Canton may yet become something like the thriving commercial depot of olden times.

The Customs at Canton and the other ports still continue to be disliked and evaded; but they are evaded in a way that greatly benefits Hong Kong, for China traders find it more profitable to purchase here and take the goods away to the smaller ports, which form as convenient an inlet as those where the Anglo-Chinese customs are established. They find in this mode of importation much less trouble and expense than in submitting to the Customs as at present managed. The Canton emigration business is not increasing in respectability; and as for that at Macao, it is said to border upon the worst forms of slave-trade.

In local news, there is nothing of much importance. Considerable regret has been felt among this community at the death of Mr. Joseph Jardine. He was greatly and deservedly esteemed in Hong Kong, and throughout China. We are only quite recently in possession of the interesting account of Mr. Parkes's imprisonment, which has been anxiously read by every one here. Mr. MacDonald's letter of February, 1860, which was read, and a copy of it given, to Lord John Russell, has placed us in possession of the whole plan of the recent campaign. Some of the wisacres here were asserting that Lord Elgin had no plan at all, and just allowed himself to be guided by Messrs. Wade and Parkes.

By the present mail, a set of plans will be sent home, for a barracks and hospital on the peninsula of Kowloong, the estimated cost of which is £160,000.

By the last mail, permission has just arrived for Mr. Rawling, of the Royal Engineer department, to set about the waterworks contract, the design for which he prepared a year ago. H.E. the Governor applied for Mr. Rawling's assistance exactly eight months since, and this is the first notice that has been taken of his application. In the meantime, supposing that Mr. Rawling's services could not be obtained, the plans were placed in the Surveyor-general's hands, and so the colony is deprived of the hand to direct what the head had designed, all owing to the delay of the people at home. As for the Surveyor-general's office, that is a kind of limbo for various reasons—not the least of which is an overplus of work—where plans are sure to be long detained in suffering. In reference to our new acquisition on the other side, nothing has been decided. A proposal to have a Prison on Stonecutters' Island has called forth no objections; and perhaps there is force in the plan, since the escapes from gaol lately have been numerous. A soldier of the 44th Regiment was recently condemned to death for murder, having pitched a comrade over the verandah, a height of three stories, which resulted fatally; his sentence has since been commuted to penal servitude for life.

In Hong Kong during the past fortnight there has been a fire that did little damage, and a few robberies; but little else to agitate the community.—Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

Colombo, March 30.—We are now in the very heart of the hot weather—and unmistakably hot it is—just the weather to delight the hearts of the coffee curers. They are hard at work; and, as the South-west Monsoon is now approaching, every effort will be made to ship within the next month or six weeks. The addition to our exports in the past fortnight has not been so great as could be wished. It amounts to 27,350 cwt. Our exports of plantation are now precisely the same as at the corresponding period of last season—228,000 in each case. On the other hand, the exports of Native have only been 68,000 cwt., against 100,000 cwt.; showing a deficiency of 32,000 cwt. In consequence of this deficiency in Native, our total exports of coffee are now very considerably below the figures of the corresponding periods of the three past seasons—not less than 40,000 cwt. in fact.

The exports of cinnamon continue below the average—those of coconut oil far above. The latter has reached 90,000 cwt., against 50,000 cwt. in 1860, and 40,000 cwt. in 1859.

We have at length received intelligence that the shareholders of the Ceylon Railway Company, like sensible men, have accepted the liberal terms offered by the colony, and that our engagement with the company is at an end. Presuming that the Duke of Newcastle loses no time in acting on behalf of the colony, we may expect at an early date to see the notification in the local Gazette, that her Majesty has been pleased to confirm the Ordinances for dissolving the agreement, and for raising the necessary money by debentures. It is satisfactory, meantime, to know that the surplus of 1860 is likely to be considerably in excess of what was estimated. The Governor, who has been travelling through the Ratnapoora District and making a pilgrimage to the top of Adam's Peak, will be able when he meets the Legislative Council to say something definite, and we hope encouraging, respecting the projected road through Happtelle. Large as the annual expenditure on roads is, there is the encouraging fact that the revenue derived from tolls has also increased greatly. It has just doubled in ten years—from £26,192 in 1851 to £53,163 in 1860. Like postal and telegraphic facilities, of course, roads and bridges confer benefits on a country which cannot be measured by the figures representing the direct revenue derived from them.

The community here has been greatly shocked by the murder of an Englishwoman, Mrs. Angus, wife of Mr. Angus, of the Survey Department. The crime is without precedent in Ceylon. The murderer, a servant of the deceased, has confessed his crime, and alleged revenge as his motive. After an event of this kind, it will be long before the sense of perfect security returns to scattered Europeans in the jungles of Ceylon. But there will not in this case, as in that of poor Morgan, the planter, some years ago, be a failure of justice. The murderer is in custody and has not only confessed his crime, but attempted to anticipate the doom, which, doubtless, he feels inevitably awaits him.

Passing from murder to robberies, which have been frequent and daring of late in the town of Colombo, we are glad to notice that the police have at length succeeded in capturing some of the thieves. The worst of it is that recent events have shown that some of the men employed and paid to protect property are themselves the victims of excessive acquisitiveness, as the phrenologists put it. The public whipping recently administered to a couple of delinquent policemen will not, we trust, fail in working some reform. Our statistics of crime in Ceylon are certainly not satisfactory, although it cannot be said that the schoolmaster is not at work. In 1859 Government expended £12,723 on education, in addition to all that is done by missionaries and private parties. The Government money seems to have been expended very fairly on the various races and the various religionists of the country; for it appears that during the year 1860 the average attendance of children at the Government school was in the following proportions:—English children 74, European descendants 852, low country Singhalese 3,597, Kandyans 522, native Tamils 343 (the Tamils of Jaffna are chiefly educated in the Mission schools), immigrant Tamils 41, Malays 77, Moors 161, Parsees 7, Chinese 2, Bengalees 3. The religious professions of the pupils seem to have been—

Church of England	859
Presbyterians	403
Wesleyans	403
Roman Catholics	1,962
Other Christians	69
Mahomedans	224
Hindoes	196
Buddhists	1,544
Fire worshippers, &c.	20

With reference to the figures opposite "other Christians," we may notice that the Baptists generally object to receive Government education. But we believe we can aver that they look on the system of education in force in Ceylon as about the fairest that could possibly be established.

The season reports show that for large portions of Ceylon 1860 was a year of scarcity, sickness, and mortality. It was altogether an exceptional year. The South-west Monsoon rains failed to such an extent that April gave only 3.54 inches of rain, against an average of 9.222. May followed with 7.51, instead of 15.712. June gave 4.04, instead of 6.952, while July, instead of showing anything like 3.557, was absolutely rainless. In October it appeared as if the North-east Monsoon were about to atone for the deficiencies of the South-west. The rainfall in that month at Colombo was no less than 17.51 inches (more than half the annual rainfall of England), against an average of 10.789. But November, instead of anything like 11.427, its proper average, yielded only 2.30. In the whole year we had only 54.845 inches of rain, instead of the average 80.1. The same deficiency prevailed over most parts of Ceylon, and we suffered, and are still suffering, the consequences of this abnormal weather in short crops, sickness, and mortality. Curiously enough, in 1860 the maximum temperature of 90.3 (the average for April) was never attained. The highest point was 89 in March; the lowest 68.8 in January. So that the absence of rain does not involve a greater amount than ordinary of heat in the atmosphere.

Our obituary includes the name of one of our oldest residents, Mrs. Dawson, widow of the late Thomas Dawson, of the Ordnance Department.

THE STRAITS.

THE KING OF SIAM having resolved to send an embassy to France, the French war steamer Gironde has proceeded to Bangkok for the purpose of conveying the embassy to Suez.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the mail steamer we (Singapore Free Press) have Java papers to the 16th March. They are filled with details of the frightful disasters which the floods have occasioned in the residences of Banjumas, Bagelan, Kadu, Surakarta, and Djoejakarta. It is estimated that upwards of 2,000 persons have lost their lives. The destitution is extreme, and it will be years before these districts recover anything like their former prosperity. In the residency of Bagelan alone, 20,000 families, comprising about 50,000 souls, are left without food or the means of purchasing it. The greatest exertions have been made by Government to afford temporary relief, all the available rice at Batavia being at once sent to Tjilatjap, from whence it would be forwarded to the suffering districts. Private individuals were contributing liberally, the Captain of the Chinese at Samarang, although his losses from the flood will be severe, having presented two thousand piculs of rice valued at 20,000fl. Rice in these districts had reached unheard of prices.

The accounts from Banjeremassing are to the 9th Feb. They contain little news. The enemy only now show themselves in small parties, but the troops are still obliged to make harassing marches with little result, and there seems no prospect of the country being restored to quiet while the chiefs of the insurrection remain at large.

Severe shocks of earthquake were experienced on the west coast of Sumatra and in the neighbouring islands on the 16th February, accompanied in some places by very high waves of the sea, which did considerable damage. A slight shock of earthquake took place at Bencoolen on the 16th, succeeded on the following morning by a seaquake which lasted for some time, and which broke on the coast with much violence.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Feb. 25.—The Ameer, accompanied with Sirdars Sooltan Mahomed Khan, Ghoolam Mahomed Khan, and the other Khans, went to see his new bungalow lately built on the banks of the river. Syud Baboo Jan, the Chief of Kooner, with a few Bajoree Mulliks came in here to pay his visit to the Ameer, and after the exchange of the mutual compliments, he introduced the Mulliks to the Ameer, and spoke in their behalf as follows:—"The Bajoree chiefs are ready to pay their yearly revenue to the Ameer, and for the future they are going to give a bond in writing to do so punctually, provided the Ameer would be so kind as not to appoint any hakim in Bajore, and to allow them to make their own arrangements." The Ameer promised to comply with their request, and ordered them to go and stop with Shah Murd Khan in Jellalabad.—Feb. 26.—

Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan's letter from Kandahar, containing the following news from Heerat was received to-day. After the fort of Dahmunde had fallen into the hands of Meer Ufzul Khan a threatening letter had been sent to him by Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan, telling him that as he had disrespectfully encroached upon the fort which belonged to his uncle, Dost Mahomed Khan, a strong army would very shortly be sent from Kandahar to teach him a good lesson. On this Meer Ufzul Khan had written to him in reply that Mahomed Ameen Khan was at liberty to do whatever he liked, and he should be ready to receive him, as please God he was going to march on Kandahar. When Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan, the ruler of Heerat, had received the copies of the above communications, he had written to Meer Ufzul Khan not to be afraid of Mahomed Ameen Khan at all, as the moment the troops marched from Kandahar he would send a strong Persian army to meet them at Furrah and Dahmunde. Aujeelah Mahomed Zaman Khan, son of Mohir Allee Khan Moorad Khanee, who had made his escape from Cabool to Heerat, and had received there a good situation, had been ordered by Sooltan Ahmed Jan to march with two hundred sowars to Dahmunde. The Ameer looked very gloomy when he perused the above, broke up the durbar and retired to his palace.—Feb. 27.—Last night there was a private council, and the principal matter discussed was to send Shere Allee Khan to Kandahar. This morning, when the durbar was held, the Ameer desired Ghoolam Mahomed Khan to go and persuade Shere Allee Khan to settle his affairs within three or four days, and then to leave for Kandahar as he could not allow him ten days' leave, which he had asked last night. The Sungoo Khyle Mulliks were then called into the Durbar; chintz cloaks and loongees were given to them as Khilluts, and dismissed. The Ghilzai Mulliks of Soolaiman Khyle were also received in the Durbar, and having received the usual Khilluts were ordered to go home. Shah Murd Khan was directed to settle the accounts of the grass-sellers, &c., as soon as possible, as he, the Ameer, intended to leave Jellalabad shortly. Turning towards the Ambassador of the King of Bokhara, the Ameer told him not to be in a hurry, as he would dismiss him with due honour on his reaching Cabool. It is rumoured in Jellalabad that the Ameer will leave for Cabool on the 15th Ramzan (28th March).—Feb. 28.—An urzee was received from Sirdar Wullee Mahomed Khan from Cabool, in which he informed the Ameer that this year the snow had fallen in Cabool two or three times, and the untimely rain which had incessantly fallen four days and nights, had nearly destroyed all the crops. The grain had risen very much in price, and as the roads to Ghuznee and Kohistan were still impassable, it was out of his power to get any supplies from those places. There were some zumeendars and corn-sellers in Cabool, who had a quantity of grain in their houses, but they did not like to part with it on the ground that they had large families on their hands to support. The Ameer ordered a letter to be written to Sirdar Wullee Mahomed, directing him to send kossids towards Ghuznee and Kohistan, and to inquire how things were going on there. The Moostoufee was then ordered to settle all the accounts as soon as practicable, and to make arrangements for the camp to march.—March 1.—The troops which had been sent to Baghistan, Kohibund, and Kooner returned to Jellalabad this morning, Sirdar Peer Mahomed Khan having asked the Ameer permission, ordered his sowars, just returned from Kooner, to march to Lughman, their head-quarters, to receive their pay, and to keep themselves ready to accompany the Ameer's camp to Cabool. The troops have also returned from Bakheel, and it is ascertained by them that Sirdar Mahomed Allee Khan will be here in some two or three days. Sirdar Peer Mahomed Khan was desired by the Ameer to call the Bajoree Mulliks to his place, and to tell them that if they agreed to give a bond in writing that they would pay the revenue punctually, and pay five hundred rupees as a fine for every murder which ever took place in their district, they would be allowed to keep a Hakim from their own tribes, otherwise he, the Ameer, would make his own arrangements. Peer Mahomed Khan was also advised to make the Mulliks agree to give their sons in hostage.—March 2.—The durbar was held as usual in the garden of Ukkur Khan. Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan's urzee was received from Kashkurghan via Cabool. He informed the Ameer that it is ascertained by some merchants just arrived from Mushled via Mamana that the King of Persia (as applied to by Sirdar Sooltan Ahmed Jan) had ordered six thousand sowars to march from Tehran to Mamana, and when they (the merchants) were leaving Mushled the sowars had arrived at that place. They had also met with some troops marching from Heerat to Mamana, and on their arrival at the latter place they were surprised to see the Persian troops encamped there. Under these circumstances it would be advisable if the Ameer would send the troops to Toorkistan as soon as possible. Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan also intimated to the Ameer that the leave of Sirdar Shumshooddeen Khan had expired, and as his presence was urgently required, he should be desired to leave for Toorkistan. After the perusal of the urzee, the Ameer sent for Sirdar Shumshooddeen Khan, and ordered him to prepare himself soon to go to Toorkistan.—March 3.—A merchant has arrived from Kandahar, and gives the following account of Mahomed Shurreef Khan. Ghoolam Nubbee Khan Kakraee, with fifty sowars, was serving under Mahomed Shurreef Khan at Gurrishk, near Kandahar, and had become very popular there. Mahomed Shurreef Khan, finding that the people were paying more respect to Ghoolam Nubbee Khan than to him got jealous, and one day on some excuse or other he abused him in public. Ghoolam Nubbee Khan did not speak a word at the time, but at night he, with his fifty sowars, took his way to Furrah and thence to Heerat, and told all the particulars to Meer Ufzul Khan, then at Heerat. When Sirdar Mahomed Shurreef Khan was informed of Ghoolam Nubbee's departures, he in vain sent his sowars to get him back, but they could not overtake him. It is said that this was the chief cause of the loss of Dahmunde.—Delhi Gazette.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 15th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Arrears of Public Business.

No. 183.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication for general information of the following resolution:—

Resolution.—With a view to dispose, as soon as practicable, of the arrears of business existing in many offices, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct that all offices in which there may be arrears shall be divided into two branches, one to be specially devoted to the bringing up of arrears and the other to the performance of current work.

The arrears and current branches will be formed by the separation of the present fixed establishment together with any temporary establishment now authorised into two bodies, each of which is to have a fair proportion of the more experienced clerks.

The head of each office will then make a careful review of the amount of arrears to be disposed of, and form an estimate of the time in which such arrears may be cleared off with the establishment at his command. He will also state what additional establishment will, in his opinion, be necessary to enable the arrears to be cleared off by the close of the current official year.

Should the establishment allotted to the current branch not be considered adequate to keep all business current, an estimate of the extra establishment necessary to perform the duty is also to be submitted.

Each application is to be accompanied by a tabular statement, showing the portion of the present establishment, with rates of pay to be allowed.

Thuggee and Dacoity.

Judicial (Criminal) Department, Camp Muchlee-shuhur, Feb. 25.—An examination of the police reports, which were submitted by the several commissioners of divisions during the past year, revealed the fact that the crime of robbery, by the administration of poisonous or deleterious drugs, was largely on the increase in these Provinces, and especially on the Grand Trunk-road; and the earnest attention of the superintendent general for the suppression of thuggee and dacoity was directed to the subject.

2. More recently the chief Commissioner of Oude has brought to the notice of the Lieut. governor that this evil has shown itself to an alarming extent in the districts of that province which lie on the left bank of the Ganges, opposite Cawnpore, and has requested the co-operation of this Government in the suppression of the crime.

3. As special measures are required for the prevention and expiration of this most dangerous crime, the Lieut. governor has determined to entrust Capt. Chamberlain, the assistant to the general superintendent for the suppression of thuggee for N.W. Provinces and Oude, with the investigation of all cases of this description which may occur within the limits of his jurisdiction.

4. Magistrates and all other criminal authorities are accordingly hereby returned to report all such cases at once to Captain Chamberlain, as also all cases in which there may be reasonable grounds for presumption that the crime has occurred, although its commission may not be susceptible of absolute proof.

5. Persons apprehended as having been concerned in the crime of robbery, or attempt at robbery, by the administration of poisonous or deleterious drugs, will be forwarded by the local officer with the least practicable delay to Captain Chamberlain at Lucknow.

Case of Mr. Dalzell—Allowances on Leave, Uncovenanted Service.

Financial Dept.

To C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department.

SIR,—Mr. Dalzell, of the Uncovenanted Service, who has been in England on sick certificate upwards of a year, was allowed for twelve months from the date of quitting his appointment half, and from the expiration of this twelve months to date to rejoining one-third of his allowances.

2. He now, I presume, under that part of the Supreme Government Notification, dated Oct. 16, 1857, which is given in the margin,* prefers the following claims, viz.:—

To half-pay for the period of transit from Kurra- chee to Bombay.

To half-pay for twelve months in England.

To half-pay for the time spent in rejoining from Bombay to Kurrachee.

3. It seems to me that, as under clause 3, section 5, of the uncovenanted absentee rules marginally quoted,† one year is the limit assigned to half allowance during the whole period of absence, an officer cannot get half-pay for more than twelve months after leaving his station, and that the words of the notification, quoted in the margin † at paragraph 2, must in all cases where an officer has exceeded twelve months' absence from his station, counting special and sick leave together, be held to refer to that part of clause 3 of section 5 which is marginally given.

4. In other words, the special leave taken under the notification of the Government of India, being taken for the purpose of reaching a port from which to embark on sick certificate, appears to me a species of sick leave, and therefore to be subject to the proviso in clause 3 of one year being the limit of absence from duty on half-pay.

5. In order that the doubt on this point may be set at rest, I beg respectfully to be favoured with the early instructions of his Honour in Council thereon. —I have, &c.,

(Signed) R. W. LODWICK, Civil Auditor.
Bombay Civil Auditor's Office, Feb. 9, 1861.

From C. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, to the Civil Auditor at Bombay, Financial Department.

SIR,—In reply to your letter, No. 264, dated 9th ultimo, I am directed to inform you that if, as appears to be the case, Mr. Dalzell, of the uncovenanted service, had sick leave for twelve months only from the time he left Bombay, he is clearly entitled, with reference to the Financial Notification, Nos. 36 and 42, dated respectively July 11, 1856, and Oct. 14, 1857, to half-pay for the regulated period of transit from Kurrachee to Bombay for the full twelve months of his absence, and for the regulated period for rejoining his appointment at Kurrachee after landing at Bombay.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) C. HUGH LUSHINGTON,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.
Fort William, March 13, 1861.

Services of H.M.'s 1st Battalion 5th Fusiliers.

Head Qrs., Calcutta, March 9.—The C. in C. has much pleasure in bringing to the notice of H.E. the Viceroy that the servs. of H.M.'s 1st batt. 5th fus., now about to return to England, merited the same distinction which had been conferred on other regts. when leaving India, for the very useful and distinguished part which they had taken in the field.

2. Sir Hugh Rose is happy to record how nobly 150 men of the 5th Fusiliers maintained the ancient fame of their regt. when, with their gallant comrades of the 1st co. 5th batt. Bengal art., and the

* On the condition that during this additional period the absentee shall draw the same rate of allowances as are granted by clause 3 of section 5.

† During one year of the entire period of absence under this rule the absentee will be subjected to a deduction of one-half, and during the remainder to a deduction of two-thirds of his allowances.

‡ And during the remainder to a deduction of two-thirds of his allowances.

Buxar gentleman volunteers, the whole under Col. Eyre, C.B., Bengal art., attacked an overpowering enemy, under every sort of difficulty, totally defeated them, and relieved the small but very gallant garrison of Arrah, a feat of arms which was as important in its results as it was creditable to the daring ability of Col. Eyre.

3. No greater tribute of praise can be given to the 5th Fusiliers than to say that they afterwards formed part of the heroic force in Oude, under two generals, Sir James Outram and Sir Henry Havelock, of whose brilliant services the army will retain recollection which no time can efface.

4. The C. in C. requests Colonel Guy, C.B., to accept for himself and distinguished regt. H.E.'s sincere wishes for their welfare and safe return to England.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. col.,
Adit. gen. of the Army.

Mily. Dept., Fort William, March 9.—No. 211.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council cannot allow the 1st batt. of H.M.'s 5th Fusiliers to leave India without recording the high sense which he entertains of the services of this distinguished regt. since it landed in Calcutta in July, 1857.

In August, 1857, two companies of the battalion, with three guns, under Major Eyre, of the Bengal art., defeated a large force of the rebels, and effected the relief of Arrah.

In September, the head qrs. of the batt. marched from Allahabad, under Sir James Outram, joined Major gen. Havelock's force, and were present in the engagements of Koondia Putta, Mungulwar, and Alum Bagh.

The battalion was present at the storming of Lucknow and the first relief of the Residency's garrison; and was afterwards engaged in the defence of the new position taken up outside the residency.

On the approach of Sir Colin Campbell with his relieving force the battalion took a prominent part in the storm and capture of the enemy's posts at the king's stables, engine house, and elsewhere.

After which they became part of Sir James Outram's force at the Alum Bagh, and were constantly employed in repelling harassing attacks of the rebels, and in many successful sorties, until March, 1858, when they were engaged in the final assault and capture of Lucknow under Sir Colin Campbell.

In all of those actions, and throughout the subsequent campaign in Oude, the battalion not only sustained but augmented its old fame and reputation.

The Gov. gen. in Council gladly avails himself of the present opportunity publicly to record his appreciation of the high merits of the 1st batt. of H.M.'s 5th Fusiliers, and bids farewell to Col. Guy, officers, and men, with hearty good wishes for their future welfare and success.
